SADDELL and SKIPNESS constitute a parish in Cantyre, on the west side of Kilbrennan Sound in the small debt court district of Campbeltown, from which port its kirktown is distant 12 miles north; the parish extends 22 miles from north to south by about 4 in breadth, and is bounded on the west by the parishes of Kilcalmonell and Killean. At Saddell village are the remains of an abbey, founded in the 12th century, by Reginald, son of Sommerled Theme of Argyll. There is also a castle at the mouth of Glen Saddell, near the sea. It is a strong square structure. There is another castle at Skipness, at the north end of the parish; this stands on a promontory and appears to have been of great strength, its outer wall being 7 feet thick and 33 in height; there are also remains of Cultes at Airds and Torrisdale. The parish church is at Carradale, a village on the coast, a little north of Glen Saddell, where a pier has been erected at which steamers from Glasgow and Campbeltown call regularly. The burial place of the Macdonalds is in the abbey of Saddell, and the castle was one of their strongholds. Col. John N. McLeod, of Kintarbert, Col. Sir David Carrick-Buchanan K.C.B. of Carradale house, Major Charles B. McAlister, of Glenbarr, Robert C. Grahame esq. of Skipness and Colin G. P. Campbell esq. of Stonefield are the principal landowners. The area comprises 46,872 acres; rateable value, £8,225; the population in 1891, was 1,156, being 761 in the ecclesiastical parish of Saddell, and 395 in Skipness; in 1881 it was 1,163.

Skipness is a quoad sacra parish and village, on the coast opposite to Loch Ransa, 10 miles south-east of Tarbert, with an old castle, once a residence of the Macdonalds; it is still entire and measures 450 feet in length, with walls 30 feet high and 7 thick. There is a board school in the village and an established church.

SANDY, see SMALL ISLES.

SKIPNESS, see SADDELL AND SKIPNESS.

SMALL ISLES is a parish, formerly consisting of the islands of Canna, Muck, Rum and Sandy, in this county and Egg in the county of Inverness, but the four islands in Argyllshire were by Boundary Order No. 91 transferred to the county of Inverness, thus constituting the whole parish a part of that county; there is a kirk of Small Isles on Rum island, besides the one at Kildonan on Eigg, where the manse is; the post office is on Eigg.

Canna lies 5 miles to the north-west of Rum, and is 18 miles in circumference; Compass hill, at the east end, is a fine bold headland rising in perpendicular cliffs from the sea.

Muck is about 3 miles in length, by 1 in breadth; 5 miles north from Ardnamurchan point it is comparatively level, having only one hill about 600 feet high, and some cattle are pastured here; the principal occupation of the inhabitants is fishing. There are some ruins of an ancient monastery.

Rum, 15 miles north of Ardnamurchan point, is 30 miles in circumference and consists of mountains in a close irregular group. Benmore being 2,300 feet high, and Huskeval, 2,667 feet; the landing place is in Loch Scresort, a small bay on the east coast, and is the property of George Bullough esq.

Sandy is a small island lying just south of Compass hill

The area of the four islands comprises 30,477 acres; rateable value, £812; the population in 1891 was Canna, 40, Muck, 48, Rum, 53, and Sandy, 62, or including Eigg, a total for the parish of 436; and in 1881, 550; the area of the entire parish being 37,752 acres.

SOUTHEND is a parish, occupying the southern portion of Cantyre, and including the island of Sunda, which lies about 3 miles off its south-east point; the village is on the coast opposite Sunda, 10 miles south from Campbeltown; the country is hilly and has no large villages in it; the inhabitants being employed in agriculture and fishing. About half a mile south of the village stands the rock Dounavertie, a spot interesting to the historian and the antiquary, as having been the scene of many sanguinary conflicts, especially the massacre of 300 of the M'Donalds here by General Leslie after their capitulation in 1649. Few traces of the castle now remain, but a mile and a half west stands the walls of a church, said to have been founded by St. Columba, who landed in Scotland in 563. It was called Cill-Cholum-Chille, and the burial ground was formerly divided by a small stream, on the north side of which the highlanders were interred, and on the south side the lowlanders; but that distinction no longer exists. A little to the north of the village stands the parish church, and in the village, the United Presbyterian church. On the island of Sunda is a lighthouse, and also one on the Mull of Kintyre. The Duke of Argyll, Col. Forbes Mackay of Carskey, Douglas J. K. McDonald esq. of Sunda and Ninnian B. Stewart esq. of Keil are the principal landowners. The area comprises 30,801 acres; rateable value, £11,161; the population in 1891, was 844, of whom 36 were in Sunda, and in 1881, 955. The island of Sunda is the property of D. J. R. McDonald esq.

STAFFA is a small island about a mile and a half in circumference, lying midway between the islands of Iona and Ulva in the bay formed by the western side of Mull, and is remarkable for its caves which attract a large number of visitors, for whose accommodation a regular steamship service is in existence from Oban; the island is about 8 miles from the coast of Mull, and about 50 from Oban, and presents an uneven table-land, resting on cliffs of variable height—the highest point occurring between the "Great Cave" and the "Boat." The caves are numerous, but those that occur on the south and north sides are remarkable neither for their beauty, nor for magnitude; and five on the north-east are distinguished chiefly for causing loud reverberations when the surge of the sea breaks into them, resembling the distant discharge of heavy ordnance. Proceeding towards the south from the landing place, the objects of chief interest are, first the Scallop, or Clamshell cave; second, Buachaille, or Herdsman; third, the Causeway and the Face, or Colonnade; fourth, Fingal's or Great Cave; fifth, the Boat cave; sixth, the Cormorants, or Mackinnon's cave. At the Scallop, or Clamshell cave, the columns on one side are bent so as to form a series of ribs, not unlike the inside of a ship; it is 30 feet in height, 16 to 18 feet in breadth at the entrance, and its length is about 130 feet. The rock Buachaille (the Herdsman) is a pile of columns about 30 feet high, visible only at low water. The Causeway here presenting an extensive surface,is formed of the broken ends of columns, once continuous to the height of the cliffs. The Great Face is formed of three distinct beds of rocks, of unequal thickness, inclined towards the east in an angle of about nine degrees. It is only with the morning sun that the Great Face of Staffa can be seen in perfection, as the general surface is undulating and uneven; great masses of light and shadow are thus produced, so as to relieve that which, in direct light, appears a flat mass of strong wall. The Cormorants, or Mackinnon's cave is easy of access, and terminates in a gravelly beach, where a boat may be drawn up. The Boat Cave is accessible only from the sea. Staffa is visited five or six times a week by the steamboat from Oban; the visitors are generally landed at Fingal's cave, and stay about an hour on the island to examine its wonders.

STRACHUR and STRATHLACHLAN form a joint parish, extending for 18 miles down the eastern shore of Loch Fyne from St. Catherine's ferry to Otter ferry, bounded on the east by Kilmodan, Inverchaolain and Lochgoilhead parishes and south by Kilfinan; it is in the poor combination of Lochgilphead, and the small debt court district of Inveraray. The village of Strachur is about 8 miles south of from Inveraray, and the village of Strathlachlan about 4 miles further south; the district generally is mountainous.

St. Catherine's is a village with a ferry on Loch Fyne at the northern extremity of the parish, 9 miles north-west from Lochgoilhead and 4½ miles north-east from Strachur village. Kiltrine, the residence of the Marquess of Lorne, is close to this village, and the remains of Castle Lachlan are about 5 miles south-west of Strachur village. John McLachlan esq. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 38,277 acres; rateable value, £6,374; the population in 1891 was 748, and in 1881, 932.

TARBERT (or East Tarbert) is a village and fishing station on the west shore of and at the mouth of Loch Fyne, at the head of a good well-sheltered harbour, and lying partly in the parish of South Knapdale and partly in that of Kilcalmonell and Kilberry, 38 miles north-east of Campbeltown and 39 south-west of Inveraray; the distance from the head of its harbour to West Tarbert lochhead is only a little over a mile, and boats were formerly often dragged across, and through this space there have been several proposals to cut a canal so as to form a shorter route to Islay &c. but none of them have been carried out; in old times the isthmus was protected by three forts, and Magnus, King of Norway (1093) is reported to have passed one of his galleys across in order to claim Cantyre as an island, he having had all the western isles ceded to him. The village of East Tarbert forms a semicircle around the harbour, the latter small, and the entrance to it narrow, having several sunken rocks, and consequently difficult of access, but when a vessel has once entered, no water affords more perfect shelter and security. The quays are commodious, and for many years it has been a noted fishing station, particularly for herrings, which are mostly cured for the Glasgow markets. In a commanding situation, overlooking the town and harbour, are the remains of an ancient castle and fortification, formerly a place of great strength; it was built by King Robert Bruce and inhabited by him in 1326, and immediately behind the village, in a southern direction, is the Established church; there are also a Free church and a Board school. An extensive fair is held at Tarbert on the last Thursday in July, which continues three days, and is for the sale of horses. The population in 1891 was 1,775, and in 1881, 1,629.

West Tarbert, one mile distant, at which there also is a good quay, is seated at the head of a loch of the same name, which commences here, and in a circuitous route winds through the mountains to Ardpatrick, beyond which it empties itself into the ocean. Two roads follow respectively the east and west sides of the loch.

TIREE, an island lying to the west of Mull and 3 miles south of Coll, is a parish in the poor combination of Mull and divided ecclesiastically into two parishes, that of Tiree and the quoad sacra parish of Hylepol (or Helipol); it is about 14 miles in extent from north to south and varies in breadth from 1 to 5 miles: it is 30 miles south-west from Tobermory. There is a small harbour, available only for small craft, at Scarinish Bay,on the north-east and another at Hynish in the south, and in this latter there is a quay. There are many small lochs in the island, but they contain only eels. It abounds in marble, of which it is said the rocks on its shore are entirely composed; but from some unexplained cause, the quarries cannot be worked. In the churchyard at Soroby is a beautiful monumental cross, inscribed "Sorror Anna Abbatissa de Y." Fairs are held in May, on the Wednesday before that at Mull in August on the Monday, and in October on the Wednesday before those in Mull. On the dangerous rocks called Skerryvore, which lie about 16 miles south-west of Tiree, a lighthouse has been built of granite, obtained from the quarries of Mull, and is considered one of the best and most durable specimens of this kind of architecture in Europe; the light is dioptric. The area comprises 18,942 acres; rateable value £ ; the population in 1891 was 2,452 (of whom 1,067 were in Tiree ecclesiastical parish and 1,385 in Helipol), and 2,730 in 1881; these figures include 3 persons at Skerryvore.

TOBERMORY, the capital of Mull, is a seaport, village and police burgh, in the parish of Kilninian and Kilmore,and a quoad sacra parish, the head of a poor combination and of a small debt court district; it lies on the north side of a small bay opposite to and distant 3 miles from Drimnen in the western angle of Morven. The town was founded about 1788, together with Ullapool, by the British Fishery Society, as a station for fishing boats, but subsequently became the property of Alexander Allan esq. of Aros. It is governed by a provost and 2 bailies; the sheriff substitute holds an ordinary and small debts court every Wednesday during session; a police court is also held here as business requires. Tobermory is the polling station at county elections for all voters residing in the islands of Mull, Cull, Iona, Tiree, Ulva, and in Morven. The town derives its name from a celebrated well or spring, called "Mary's Well." The Spanish admiral's ship "Florida," one of the "Armada," when at anchor here in 1588, was destroyed by an emissary of Queen Elizabeth's Government. Part of the wood of this vessel was presented to His Majesty George IV. on his visit to Edinburgh, by Sir Walter Scott; and there is in the possession of the Duke of Argyll a large brass gun that belonged to the same vessel, and found many years since in Tobermory bay. On the west side of the town are the remains of an ancient chapel, dedicated to the Virgin, and of a fortification. The harbour is one of the safest among the western isles, being protected from the Sound of Mull by an island called Calve Island, which stretches nearly across the entrance, but leaving ample room at its northern point for the largest vessels to enter the harbour, though few but small craft can effect this at the south-east point, even at high water. About two miles from Tobermory, in the Sound of Mull, a lighthouse called the Runagall, was erected in 1857. Tobermory possesses two quays. The first was erected in 1835, by Colonel Campbell, of Knock, which was quite dry at low water; this subsequently proving inadequate a new quay and pier was constructed by F. W. Caldwell esq. proprietor of this part of the town, at a cost of upwards of £2,000, and opened in 1864. It has a greater depth of water, and is more capacious, with offices, stores, waiting rooms, and a cattle pen. It is a little to the north of the old quay, and nearer to the entrance of the bay. The town has increased considerably in this direction of late years, and the harbour is much frequented both by steamers and sailing vessels, which renders better quay accommodation necessary. As the only town in Mull and a large circumjacent district, it possesses much provincial importance, and is the seat of a considerable domestic trade. A branch of the Clydesdale Bank Limited, is established here, and occupies a handsome building of stone, in the main street, completed in 1865. There is also a branch of the North of Scotland Bank Limited occupying a fine building. The town is built on a series of terraces overlooking the harbour and on a commanding site; above the town are the County Buildings, a substantial erection of stone, embracing the sheriff's court and procurator fiscal's offices &c. The union poorhouse, erected for the poor of the six surrounding parishes, distant rather better than a mile from Tobermory, will hold 130 and cost £7,700. The Temperance Institute, the gift of Alexander Allan esq. of Aros, which included a reading room, well supplied with newspapers, periodicals &c. billiard room, circulating library, and hall, capable of seating between 300 and 400 persons, was accidently burnt down a short time back and the Reading room now occupies temporary premises. There are four hotels, the principal being the Western Isles, erected in 1882-3, which is a very fine building, on a bold and elevated position above the principal pier. First-class accommodation may also be had at the Royal and Mishnish Hotels. The places of worship consist of Established church, Free church, Scotch Episcopalian, and Baptist churches. The Free church is a building, a large proportion of its cost having been defraved by Alexander Allan esq. of Aros, one of the two local proprietors. The Established church is somewhat plain, built in 1827-8, but occupies a commanding situation overlooking the bay and island. The public schools adjoin the Established church; there is also a female Industrial school. A regatta is held here once a year. From a hill in the neighbourhood, a view of the islands of Tiree, Coll Eigg, Muck, Skye, and various others of smaller importance is obtained. Close to the town is a beautiful loch called Mary's Lake, situated between two finely-wooded hills, extremely precipitous in their descent. The population of the town in 1891 was 1,154, and in 1881, 1,200; the ecclesiastical parish contained in 1891, 1 265 persons.

ULVA is an island and quoad sacra parish in the parish of Kilninian and Kilmore Isle of Mull, forming the south side of Loch Tuadh, and divided at the eastern end from the Isle of Mull by a narrow strait; it measures 7 miles from east to west, by 2½ in breadth. It is said to produce the best kelp in the Western Islands. There are a great number of basaltic columns on the shore, and on the south side is a cave 60 feet long, 58 feet broad, and 30 feet in average height, having an arched entrance in the face of an abrupt rock, with a span of 37 feet. About a mile to the north, a mountain stream falls in one unbroken descent from a rock 66 feet in height directly into the sea. The island is now the property of Francis William Clark esq. J.P. who resides there. The population of the island in 1891 was 46 and in 1881, 53, and the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 164.

AYRSHIRE.

AYRSHIRE is a maritime county, stretching along the eastern shore of the Firth of Clyde, from Wemyss Bay, opposite to Mellan in Argyllshire, by the eastern entrance to the Kyles of Bute, in an irregular curve trending eastward as far as Ayr town, from which it turns to the south-west, ending at the south at Loch Ryan, which separates it from Wigtownshire, the distance measured direct from north to south being about 55 miles (but taking the line of coast 84), its breadth varying from 5 miles at each extremity to 26 at the widest part of the crescent, just below Troon; it is bounded on the north and north-east by Renfrewshire, east by Lanarkshire and Dumfriesshire, south-east by Kirkcudbrightshire, south by Wigtownshire and west by the Firth of Clyde; its area is 1,128 square miles, or 722,229 acres, and it is divided into the 3 districts of Carrick, Cunninghame and Kyle. The first lies on the southern side of the Doon; the second comprehends the whole of the county north of the river Irvine; and Kyle division is between the rivers Doon and Irvine. In point of size Ayrshire ranks as the seventh and in population as the sixth of the counties in Scotland. The population in 1891 being 110,987 males and 115,296 females, or a total of 226,283, against 217,519 in 1881; the number of inhabited houses being 45,252 in 1891, and 41,733 in 1881.

Early History.—This county was anciently inhabited by the British tribe called the Damnii, a branch of the Celtic nation, sometimes known as the Strathclyde Britons, who survived the period of the Roman yoke, and were in the course of time overrun by and amalgamated with the Scoto-Irish from Kintyre, where they had founded the Dalriadic monarchy, at what is now known as Campbeltown. About 750 these again were partly conquered by a number of Northumbrians, who settled in Kyle, and from this followed the close connection in Ecclesiastical government between this portion of Scotland and the see of York. From this time up to 1097 it formed part of the Celtic kingdom of Scotia, under the monarchs who held their court, first at Dunstaffnage and subsequently at Scone. Upon the accession of Edgar, in 1097, the jurisprudence of the county became changed, and an active colonization commenced from England. Barons now sprang up, who built castles and churches, and towns arose, which became inhabited by persons engaged in trade. In 1263, Haco, King of Norway, fought a battle near Largs with Alexander III. King of Scotland, by whom he was defeated and compelled to retire to Norway. During the wars of Bruce and Edward, Ayrshire was the scene of perpetual turmoil. The son of the first Bruce marrying the Countess of Carrick, became Earl Carrick in her right; and it was their son who, on the expulsion of Baliol, formed pretensions to the throne, which he obtained by his courage, fortitude, and prudence; thus Ayrshire possessed the honour of giving birth to the illustrious restorer of the Scottish monarchy. Bruce landed in Ayrshire from Arran to claim the kingdom. Some of the various exploits of Wallace, in supporting the national independence, occurred in this county. Scarcely any division in Scotland remained so long under the baronial system as Ayrshire. For centuries the chiefs were perpetually engaged in feuds and rebellions, and so weak or inefficient were the laws that it was seldom redress or punishment followed outrage. The Boyds, the Dalrymples, the Campbells, the Colvilles, and the houses of Eglinton and Glencairn had their respective quarrels of long standing, causing occasionally sanguinary slaughter. A great proportion of these disturbances arose from contests regarding heritable jurisdictions, such as stewardships and bailiewicks of certain districts. The county was frequently distracted by feuds of the Kennedys. So late as the reign of James VI. this powerful clan was involved in a feud of more than ordinary importance, which originated in the cruel treatment of Allan Stewart, the commentator, of Crossraguell, in 1570, by the Earl of Cassillis, and his brother, Thomas Kennedy, of Culzean. The vexations which the people of this county so long suffered inclined them to the institution of the Covenant. The consequence was that, during the heats of the 17th century, few took so active a share in the insurrections which were opposed to royal authority. A committee of the Privy Council sat at Ayr in 1678, for directing the military executive. In July, 1680, a conflict occurred, wherein several insurgents were taken, and the rebellion on this occasion quelled. Proceedings of this harassing character induced a ready accession to the government of William III. Many remains of Danish forts and crannogs as well as of numerous castles are scattered over the county; along the rocky portion of the coast occur the castles of Greenan, Dunure, Colzean and Turnberry, and there are several abbeys. To the south of Irvine stands the ancient castle of Dundonald, once a royal residence, and afterwards the family seat of the Cochranes, Earls of Dundonald. The castle of Rowallan is a few miles distant from Kilmarnock, and stands almost on the boundary line which separates the parishes of Kilmarnock, Fenwick, and Kilmaurs. Dean Castle, the former residence of the Kilmarnock family, is still an interesting ruin.

Soil, Surface &c.—The most fertile part of the shire is the great vale of Cunningham, which is comparatively level; Kyle possesses much valuable land towards the coast, but its interior lies high, and is a rough mountainous territory; Carrick is a hilly, wild region throughout, and is only of value or interest in its northern angle, betwixt the rivers Doon and Girvan. In a general sense, the whole district of Ayrshire is shut out on its eastern boundary from the adjacent counties by high ridgy land. The sea coast is mostly sandy, and indented with several excellent harbours, and in the rocks are some remarkable caves, worthy of the inspection of the curious. Though moist, the climate is healthy, the rainfall in this being much above that of the central and eastern counties, heavy rain not being infrequent and occasionally of long duration. For fully two-thirds of the year the wind blows from the west and south-west, thus causing the climate to be more temperate and mild than counties on the east coast. The principal eminences are:—Hareshaw Hill, 1,527; Cairntable, 1,650; Misty Law, 1,663; Hill of Stake, 1,711; Knockdolian, 1,950; Black Craig 2,298; Shalloch on Minnoch, 2,520; and Kirriereoch Hill, 2,562 feet.

Produce, Manufactures, Minerals &c.—It was not until about the middle of the 18th century that the inhabitants of Ayrshire began to discover and avail themselves of its capabilities as an agricultural district. The settlement at this period of Margaret Countess of Loudoun in Lorn Castle may be deemed the epoch of efficient improvement, as by her great assiduity, precept and example, agriculture was promoted and encouraged; and in a short time the nobility and gentry of Ayrshire began in earnest to improve their estates upon systematic principles. Farmers were invited by them from more southern shires to instruct the tenantry in the management of land according to the most approved methods. The system of dairy farms then inaugurated has been persevered in, and the dairies in this district are superior, perhaps, to any others in Scotland; the value of their produce in milk and butter is very considerable, and "Dunlop" cheese is unrivalled throughout the country, finding a ready market; under the auspices of the County Agricultural Association, and many individual proprietors, of whom the late Mr. Campbell, of Craigie, was one of the foremost, the Cheddar method has been generally introduced, and with great success; so that Cheddar cheese is one of the staple productions of the county. The chief crops are oats, 49,284 acres; wheat, 1,164; barley, 1,105; turnips, 7,535; potatoes, 8,370; mangolds, 483; beans, 452; hay of all kinds, 51,745 and green crops 17,470; land under grass, 252,455 acres; permanent pasture, 153,105; total area of land and water, 730,525 acres and mountain and heathland, 316,490 acres; the live stock in 1894 comprised 9,972 horses; 97,184 cattle; 358,761 sheep and 16,835 pigs. The breed of cattle has been much improved, the Ayrshire shorthorns being much prized, both for the purposes of the dairy and the butcher. The manufacture of stockings, carpets, cloths, and bonnets extended generally, but Kilmarnock became the most noted. At the capital of the county dye works have been established, also woollen factories, iron foundries, tanneries, large steam-engine manufactories and chemical works; at Catrine, well-known and extensive cotton works; at Kilbirnie are several works for the production of fishing nets; Mauchline is noted as the place where fancy wood-work articles are made; at Stevenston are iron works and a dynamite manufactory; at Old Cumnock is an extensive pottery and a woollen manufactory; at Irvine chemical manufactories and iron forges; and Muirkirk is noted for its ponderous iron works. Fishing is also carried on at all the large seaports, herring, cod, ling &c. being caught, and in the lochs and streams there is an abundance of trout, and in the larger rivers are to be found salmon. The number of fishing boats registered at the 4 ports of Ayr, Ardrossan, Irvine and Troon in 1894 was 363, with an aggregate tonnage of 1,106 tons, and employing 594 hands; the number of vessels registered as owned at the ports was 110, equal 25,087 tons and new vessels built in 1894 were 11, equal 1,252 tons.

The trade in minerals is an important one, especially that in coal, the figures as shown by the return for 1894 being, coal produced, 2,590,434 tons; valued at £755,543; fire-clay produced, 75,887 tons; value £12,964; iron ore, 314,777 tons; value £118,041; stone consisting of shale, 354 tons; gannister, 121; limestone, 615; honestone, 345. There were 7 ironworks in the county, of which 6 with 34 furnaces were at work in the year; the average number of furnaces actually in blast during that time being 16 5.12, producing 182,546 tons; there is also 1 copper smelting works.

Rivers, Lakes, Springs and Railways.—In the ridge of hills which intersects the district of Carrick, almost all the rivers in the south originate. The Tweed, the Esk, the Nith, the Annan, the Urr and others flow to the east and south; while the Stinchar, the Girvan, the Doon, the Ayr and the Lugar traverse the county and pour their fruitful streams into the Irish Channel. Besides these, the Irvine and some smaller rivers water the northern parts of Ayrshire. In the midst of so many minerals, a number of springs impregnated by their qualities are to be expected; and indeed almost every parish has its mineral water, though none have attained the dignity of spas. There are various inland lakes, particularly in Carrick—the most extensive being Loch Doon, which is six miles long and about three-quarters in breadth, from whence the river Doon flows. The county is well served by railways, the Glasgow and South Western, which enters the county in the north-east, near Beith, runs from there to Dalry, whence a branch goes to the coast at Ardrossan and on to Largs, the main line continuing from Dalry to Kilmarnock, Mauchline and New Cumnock, leaving the county at about 3 miles east from the latter place for Dumfries &c., while from Mauchline a line passes through Tarbolton to Ayr, meeting there another branch from Kilwinning (the junction south of Dalry) which runs by Irvine and Troon to Ayr, and from Old Cumnock a branch runs east to Muirkirk, and another west forking north to Auchincruive, on the Mauchline and Ayr branch and south-west to Dalrymple, where it joins a line which runs from Ayr to Maybole and Girvan, leaving the county three miles north of Glenwhilly station, on its way to Stranvaer from Dalrymple, via Hollybush; another branch runs to Dalmellington, a branch also runs from Irvine to Kilmarnock and thence via Galston to Newmilns, and the Caledonian railway has a line from Glasgow, entering the county at Lugton, where it branches north-west to Beith and south-west via Dunlop to Kilmarnock.

Ecclesiastical and Civil Divisions, Population &c.—The whole of Ayrshire was formerly comprehended in the bishopric of Glasgow, and it formed three deaneries, corresponding with the three divisions of Carrick, Cunninghame and Kyle: it now contains 69 ecclesiastical parishes, comprised in the two presbyteries of Ayr and Irvine, within the synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The civil divisions consist of 46 parishes, in which are 2 royal burghs (Ayr and Irvine) and 14 police burghs. The contributory burghs are Ayr and Irvine; two members also represent the shire at large. The parliamentary constituency of the Northern division was in 1894-5, 12,837, that of the Southern division being 15,463.

ALLOWAY is a small village, 3 miles south of Ayr, half way between Dalrymple and Ayr stations on the South Western railway, and a quoad sacra parish in the civil parishes of Ayr and Maybole; it is only remarkable for its connection with the poet Burns and his writings. The Burns' monument consists of a circular rustic base (in which is a room containing relics), surmounted by nine fluted Corinthian pillars supporting an entablature, above which rises a bronze tripod; on the opposite side of the road stand the remains of auld Alloway kirk, the scene of Tam O'Shanter's frolic; it is a roofless oblong structure believed to have been built early in the 16th century, and the bell hanging in its bellcot bore the date of 1657. At the entrance to the village is a thatched cottage, shown as the birthplace of the poet, and near the monument is the auld brig, and west of the kirk is the well where stood the thorn tree on which "Mungo's mither hanged herself." Close to the kirk is Cambusdoon (formerly Craigwelle), the seat of Mrs. Baird, and a little further west is the old castle of Newark, the residence of Charles Lindsay Orr Ewing esq. M.P. and also near the church are the policies of Doonbo'm, lately the seat of Lord Blackburn, d. Jan. 1896. The population of the parish in 1891 was 965.

ARDROSSAN, seaport and police burgh, is a parish on the west side of the county at the mouth of the Firth of Clyde, and a good-sized town, and has also made some progress as a watering place. Originally only a small hamlet round the castle, it was at the beginning of this century planned as a port of outlet for Glasgow, it being supposed that from its position at the mouth of the Firth a large portion of the trade would concentrate in the new port, and to encourage it a fine dock was built, but although a number of vessels enter the dock for coals and iron the trade has not taken the course that was anticipated. The parish extends 4 miles from north to south by 4½ in breadth, and is bounded north by West Kilbride and Dalry, east by Kilwinning, and south by Stevenston; in it besides the town of Ardrossan there is a large portion of the town of Saltcoats; it is in the poor combination of Cunninghame, and the small debt court district of Kilmarnock. The town is situated on a promontory to the south of the port, 30 miles south-west from Glasgow and 8 north-west of Irvine, and being laid out on a regular plan and the houses built chiefly of stone, has a fine appearance; it has stations on the South Western and Caledonian railways. It is governed by a provost, 2 bailies and 6 commissioners. There are branches of the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Clydesdale Bank Limited, and a large hotel and two weekly newspapers, the "Ardrossan and Saltcoats Herald," and the "Ayrshire Weekly News," are published in the town. The harbour was commenced under the auspices of Hugh, Earl of Eglinton, who with his successors have expended nearly £400,000 upon it. The dock occupies an area of seventeen acres, and is one of the best in Scotland, having a depth of water on the sill of 18 feet at low water, and 27 at high water, as well as being fitted with all the latest appliances for both loading and discharging vessels, and railway trains are run on to the quays. The island of Horse shelters the harbour from the north-west. In 1894, 71 vessels aggregating 19,550 tons were registered in the port as well as 108 fishing boats with a total tonnage of 386 tons, and employing 148 hands. The Glasgow and South-Western Railway for many years had a monopoly of the carrying trade of the harbour; but in 1888 the Lanarkshire and Ayrshire line worked by the Caledonian Company was completed, which opened up direct communication with the Lanarkshire coalfields, and with the south. Steamers ply regularly between Ardrossan and several parts of Ireland, and there is daily intercourse during the year between it and the Island of Arran. There is a yard for shipbuilding at the harbour, an engineering works, a large iron foundry, and some extensive timber yards and saw mills. The picturesque ruins of Ardrossan Castle stand on an eminence overlooking the town. There is also upon an adjoining eminence a monument to the late Alexander McFadzean esq. who, during the later years of his life, interested himself deeply in the various institutions connected with this place. An agricultural society has been established.

The area of the parish comprises 7,341 acres; rateable value, £33,300. The population in 1891 was 9,897, of whom 5,294 were in Ardrossan town, and 4,228 in Saltcoats, and in 1881, the population of the parish was 7,777, of whom 4,036 were in Ardrossan town, and 3,329 in Saltcoats.

AUCHINLECK is a parish and village, on the eastern side of the county, 15 miles from east to west by 5 in breadth, bounded north by Muirkirk and Sorn, south by Ochiltree and Old Cumnock, and east by Lanarkshire; it is in the Kyle poor combination. Coal and limestone are produced here, but the soil is for the most part rather unproductive. The village is somewhat above a mile north from Old Cumnock and about 3 from Sorn and Catrine, and has a station on the Glasgow and South Western line of railway. There is an establishment here for the manufacture of fancy boxes. A public hall was erected in 1891 in celebration of Her Majesty's jubilee. At Birnie Knowe, about two miles distant, the ruins of Auchinleck Castle stand in an angle formed by the Dippleburn and Lugar; and in the neighbourhood is the "Place of Auchinleck," a mansion erected in the last century by Lord Auchinleck, senator of the college of justice, and father of the eminent and amiable James Boswell esq. the friend and biographer of Johnson; the house is still the property of the Boswell family. A fair for the sale of lambs is held annually on the last tuesday in August. The Marquess of Bute K.T., Captain R. Mitchell Campbell, of Glaisnock, Captain R. B. Allason, of Logan, and the trustees of P. C. D. Boswell, of Garrallan, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 24,129 acres; rateable value, £7,532. The population in 1891 was 6,202, of whom 99 were in the town of Cumnock, and 1,489 in the village of Auchinleck; the population in 1881 was 6,681.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, Auchinleck (Railway Sub-Office. Letters should be addressed Auchinleck R.S.O. Ayrshire); David Crichton, postmaster. Deliveries, 6.15 a.m. & 6.40 p.m.; dispatches, 5.20 a.m. & 1.15 & 6.10 p.m

AYR.

AYR is a seaport and royal burgh, the capital of the county, a parish and head of a sheriff court district and of the poor combination of Kyle, and of a petty sessional court, on the eastern shore of the Firth of Clyde, occupying both sides of the mouth of the river Ayr. The South Western Railway has a station here, with lines of rail from Glasgow, Ardrossan, Troon, &c. in the north, and from Dalmellington and Carlisle and Girvan and Stranraer in the south, and one running east to Muirkirk, &c.; and the Caledonian railway work a line to Muirkirk and the north and south, 77 miles west-south-west of Edinburgh, 33 south-south-west of Glasgow, 34 south-south-west of Paisley, 12 south-south-west of Kilmarnock and 11 south of Irvine. The parish extends 5 miles from north to south by 3 in breadth, and is bounded south by Maybole, east by Dalrymple and Coylton, and north by St. Quivox.

In the 12th century, when the town was founded by William the Lion, traces of a Roman station were still extant. Wallace appears to have relieved it from an English garrison, and Cromwell fortified it, using for the purpose the old church and giving the inhabitants a grant of money with which they built what is now known as the old kirk, on the site of a Dominican priory. The river is crossed by two bridges, "the twa briggs of Ayr," of Burns; the old built in the 13th century, and the new one in 1788, and rebuilt in 1878.

The municipal burgh of Ayr is formed by the districts of Newton and Wallacetown, in conjunction with Ayr proper, and the civil government is vested in a provost, four bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer and eleven councillors. For parliamentary purposes Ayr is connected with the burgh of Irvine, in this county, and Campbeltown, Inveraray and Oban, in Argyllshire, the group returning one member to Parliament. The municipal burgh of Ayr was, up to 1895, within the parishes of Ayr, Newton-on-Ayr and St. Quivox, but by a Local Government Order, dated 15th May, 1895; these three parishes were united under the one parish of Ayr.

The convenience for shipping is superior to most of the towns on the coast, as the harbour has been much improved by the construction of an extensive stone pier, affording a greater depth of water and security for vessels. A dock, eight acres in extent, with a quay space of 2,000 feet, constructed at a cost of £150,000, has a depth of water at low tide of 15 feet. The income of the Harbour Trust for 1895 was £26,342. An extensive trade is carried on in the export of coal from this place to Ireland. Mines of this article, as well as fine quarries of stone, abound in the neighbourhood. The other principal exports consist of iron, coal-tar, lampblack, and water of Ayr stone. Its imports comprise hides, tallow, barley, yarn, linen, spars, deals and hemp. In 1894 there were 29 vessels, with an aggregate tonnage of 4,710 registered at the Port of Ayr, and 195 fishing boats, with a collective tonnage of 551 tons, employing 370 hands, while 4 vessels, with a tonnage of 494 tons, were built in the port.

There are two weekly markets in the town: Tuesday, for grain, cattle and dairy produce, and Friday, for the sale of dairy produce, poultry and general business. Fairs are held on New Year's day (horses and cattle); the Thursday and Friday before the second Wednesday in January; the third Tuesday in April, for hiring; the last Friday in April, for cattle; the Thursday before the second Monday and third Thursday in July; third Tuesday in October, for hiring; and on the second Thursday and Friday in October.

The town was lighted with gas, but towards the end of 1895 the installation of the electric light was completed, at a cost of about £20,000. The most conspicuous feature in the town is the spire, 219 feet high, attached to the Town's buildings, New Bridge street, which were erected in 1828, at a cost of £10,000; these contain a spacious hall for public entertainments, and capable of containing about 1,500 persons. In addition, the buildings afford offices for the town clerk, town chamberlain and Corporation water works, and here are kept the burgh records, and the burgh courts are held here. The tower, called "Wallace Tower," in High street, is another ornamental structure, built in 1830, on the site of an ancient tower; it has on its front a statue of Wallace, by Thom. A second statue of this warrior occupies a niche in the wall of a house in the corner of Newmarket street. Wellington square is a fine quadrangle, having on the west side the Court house and hall, built at the joint expense of the county and burgh, at a cost exceeding £30,000. Two statues in bronze have been placed within the square, one to Archibald William, 13th Earl of Eglinton, lord lieutenant of the county, also for some years Viceroy of Ireland, and who died in 1861; the other is to the memory of Brigadier-Gen. J. G. Neill C.B. killed at Lucknow, 25th September, 1857, and who was born in one of the houses in Wellington square. A gun, captured at Sebastopol, is placed on an iron carriage in the enclosure round the County buildings, at the upper end of the square. Her Majesty's gaol is a structure at the back of the County buildings, its front looking upon the bay; it is arranged upon the most modern approved system of discipline.

An Academy, founded by subscription in 1798, stands foremost amongst the public establishments, and is conducted by a rector, with five masters. The original building was taken down and replaced by the present one, of larger proportions, erected at a cost of about £10,000, and the management is now under the Burgh School Board, the school ranking as one of the high class schools under the Education Act, the education given being of a high order. Ayr library, which contains several thousand volumes, has been transferred to the Public Free Library, in Main street, Newton, the cost of the building being £10,000, and the gift of A. Carnegie esq. Three newspapers are published in Ayr, namely, the "Ayr Observer," on Tuesday and Friday; the "Ayrshire Post," on Friday; and the "Advertiser," on Thursday. Races are held annually in the autumn, a pack of foxhounds hunts the county, and spirited curling and bowling clubs are located here. The charitable institutions are numerous and liberally conducted; the poor are assisted from funds arising from lands and donations, and a dispensary gives medical and surgical aid to the sick. There is a large hospital; also an industrial school. Besides these are a Merchants' Society, established in 1655; a fund formed in 1821 for decayed members, their widows and orphans; and the Ayr Sabbath School School Union Society. There are three churches of the Establishment in the town, two in Newton, one in Wallacetown and one in St. Quivox. The other places of worship in Ayr and its vicinity are for the Free church, the United and Reformed Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Wesleyan Methodists, Moravians, Original Seceders, Evangelical Unionists and Roman Catholics. The parish church (St. John's), which replaced the old church taken by Cromwell for his fort, was founded in 1650, on the site of the Dominican priory. The pulpit was transferred to it from the old church of St. John; within the church are several interesting mural tablets, one to General Neill, who fell at the siege of Lucknow; also the old colours of the 21st Royal Scots Fusiliers, and a brass tablet of the officers and men who fell in South Africa. Robert Burns, the poet, was born about 2 miles to the south, in the parish of Alloway (which see), and the Chevalier Ramsay, author of "Cyrus' Travels," &c. was a native of this place. At a short distance on the southern shore is Greenan Castle, one of those uncouthly constructed square castles, standing on the summit of a rock overhanging the sea. In the same direction, on a clear day, may be discerned Ailsa Craig, rising nearly 1,100 feet perpendicularly out of the sea. R. A. Oswald esq. of Auchincruve, J. Bell esq. of Enterkine, W. A. Orr Paterson esq. of Gadgirth, R. Paterson Paterson esq of Montgomerie, J. A. Campbell esq. of Craigie, George Coats esq. of Belleisle, James Coats esq. of Auchendrane, W. H. Dunlop esq. of Doonside, and J. Hamilton esq. of Sundrum, are the principal landowners.

The area of the old parish of Ayr comprised 6,939 acres; of Newton, 585 and that of St. Quivox, 4,876, making a total for the new parish of 12,400 acres; the rateable value being £167,222 for Ayr parish as newly constituted; the population in 1891 was—Ayr, 11,149; Newton, 8,564 and St. Quivox, 7,713, or a total for the new parish of 27,426; the population of the burgh was 25,213 in 1891, and 21,384 in 1881, and the rateable value 1895, £140,371.

Newton, formerly a parish, is now amalgamated with Ayr, and is divided from that place by the river, and here are the principal manufactures of the town. There are two chemical works, a carpet factory, lace works, two shoe factories and several other manufacturing establishments. The railway communicates on this side with the harbour and dock, and the mineral products of the upper portion of the county are mostly shipped here. There is a very large increase in the shipment of coal; indeed Ayr has taken the lead as a coal shipping port on the west coast.

St. Quivox, a populous parish, by a Local Government Order, dated May, 1895, amalgamated with the parish of Ayr, lies on the banks of the Ayr river, and is bounded on the east by Tarbolton, and on the west by Newton of Ayr, and Monkton. The parish, which is nearly all arable, is finely enclosed and beautified by plantations.

Wallacetown is a thickly-populated district adjoining Newton. A church of the Establishment was erected here in 1836, of the Gothic order; it was built by subscription, at an expense of nearly £1,500, and has sittings for upwards of 800 persons. Nearly adjoining this church is a Roman Catholic chapel, erected in 1826-7, at a cost of about £2,000; it is in the Gothic style, fronted with freestone.

Whitletts is a small village in St. Quivox ward, parish of Ayr, and distant therefrom about 1½ miles east.

BALLANTRAE is a parish and village and seaport at the extreme south-west corner of the county on the north of Loch Ryan; the village being 68 miles south-west from Glasgow, 32 south-west from Ayr and 24 north-east of Port Patrick, in the poor combination of Wigtown and small debt court district of Girvan; the parish extends 9 miles from north to south by 7 in breadth and is bounded north and east by Colmonell, south by Wigtownshire and west by the Firth of Clyde. The nearest railway station is Pinwherry on the South-Western railway. The village lies at the mouth of the river Stinchar, and is a resort for summer visitors; it is principally supported by its herring and salmon fishery, the latter belonging to the Earl of Stair. The chief local proprietor is James Charlesworth esq. J.P. of Glenapp, whose mansion may be seen from the village. Old Kirkcudbright kirk, now in ruins, gives a mournful yet pleasing effect to the surrounding scenery. On the right stands the ruins of Ard-Stinchar Castle, formerly belonging to the Hamilton family. In the churchyard is the burial place of the Hamilton family of Bargeny and Ardstinchar, Barons Bargeny (a title which became extinct in 1736), and there is a monument to Gilbert Baron Bargeny, slain in an encounter with Lord Cassilis at Maybole in 1601. The parish area comprises 33,561 acres; rateable value, £ ; the population in 1891, was 1,268, including 524 in the village, and in 1881, 1,442, with 426 in the village.

Glenapp, or Butters Church, is a quoad sacra parish formed out of Ballantrae parish; population in 1891, was 144.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, Ballantrae; James Wason, postmaster. (Railway Sub-Office. Letters should have R.S.O. Ayrshire added to them.) Delivery, 9.50 a.m.; dispatch, 3.45 p.m

BARR is a parish and village, 8 miles east-by-south of Girvan and 7 miles north-east of Pinmore station, on the South-Western railway; the parish, which extends 9 miles from north to south by 6 to 7 in breadth, is intersected by the river Stinchar; it is in the poor combination of Maybole and small debt court district of Ayr. About a mile from the village are the ruins of old Kirk Dominae: the parish, 12 miles by 9 in extent, is principally sheep pasture. The hiring fair of servants, which of late was held at Kirk Dominae, is now held at Barr on the first Thursday after the 26th of May. The Marquess of Ailsa, Sir James Fergusson M.P.and Captain Hamilton are the principal landowners. The area comprises 54,876 acres; rateable value £10,738; the population in 1891, was 549, and in 1881, 600.

BARRHILL, see COLMONELL.

BEITH is a town and parish, in the north of the county, on the borders of Renfrewshire, in which county 550 acres of the parish are included; the town lies 11 miles north-west from Kilmarnock, 10 miles north of Irvine and 22 north of Ayr, and has railway stations on the Glasgow and South-Western main line, and the Caledonian branch line from Lugton on its Barrhead and Kilmarnock section; the parish extends 7 miles from north to south, by about 4 in breadth, and is in the poor combination of Cunninghame and small debt court district of Kilmarnock; it is bounded north by Renfrewshire, west by Kilbirnie, south by Dalry, and east by Dunlop. The town stands on an eminence commanding an extensive view of the country around, and of the Loch of Kilbirnie; it contains many excellent houses, is gas-lighted and well supplied with good water, and it is a place of some considerable trade, being noted for its manufacture of linen thread, of which a large quantity is made here, both for home and export trade. The leather trade is of considerable importance, in the tanning, currying and preparation of which several firms are actively engaged. Another branch deserving of notice is the cabinet making and upholstery business, extensively carried on by several firms; the wholesale manufacture of couches and chairs by machinery, affording employment to numerous workmen. The manufacture of silk goods, formerly extensive, has almost been entirely superseded by that of cotton and woollen, in the weaving of which many of the inhabitants are now employed by the manufacturers of Paisley and Glasgow. Silk printing is carried on at Roebank. The neighbourhood of Beith produces coal and abundance of limestone. Lime burning is followed to a limited extent, and rope making is also carried on. There are branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited in the town. The Town House, built by subscription in 1817, contains a court room and reading room; the lower part consists of shops, the rents of which are applied to purposes of public benefit. The constabulary station with court house adjoining, is a stone building, opened in 1884, erected at a cost of about £1,500. The Sheriff's Small Debt Court is held on the first Thursday in February, May, August, and November, and that for the justices of the peace on the first Monday in each month. The church of the establishment, with tower, was erected in 1807, on the most elevated part of the town, 343 feet above the level of the sea. It has since been enlarged by the addition of a new wing, reseated, and thoroughly renovated at a cost of nearly £3,000. The other places of worship are a Free church, an Evangelical Union chapel, and two for United Presbyterian congregations; the one in Mitchell street, belonging to the latter denomination, was rebuilt in 1892 in the Gothic style, at a cost of about £2,000. Spier's school was built and endowed from funds amounting to about £14,000 left by the late Mrs. Spier, of Marshalland and Cuff. The market is held on Friday, and the fairs on the first Fridays in January and February, and first Friday after the 12th of May (old style), on the 30th of August, and the first Friday after the 12th November (old style). The whole of the parish is enclosed, and is almost all arable. The tenants of this and the neighbouring parish of Dunlop were formerly noted for their manufacture of cheese, known by the name of "Dunlop cheese," which was held in as high estimation in Scotland as the cheese of Cheshire or Gloucestershire is in England. At Giffen, a short distance from the town, are the ruins of the once stately castle of the Montgomeries; there is also another ruin at Hasselhead; and at the top of Cuff hill, a considerable eminence, is a druidical remain, known by the name of "Rockingstone." Two large stone coffins, supposed to be likewise of druidical origin, were discovered here many years ago. Woodside is the seat of Robert William Cochran-Patrick esq. D.L., J.P. and Morrishill of John Shedden Dobie esq. J.P. The area comprises 10,678 acres in this county and 544 in Renfrewshire; rateable value, £28,950; the population in 1891, was 7,087, including 4,795 in the town and 6,514 in 1881, with 4,037 in the town; the portion of the parish in Renfrewshire had in 1891 a population of 39.

CATRINE is a thriving manufacturing town in the parish of Sorn, 72 miles west-south-west of Edinburgh, 32 south of Glasgow, 14 north-east of Ayr, 12 south-south-west of Kilmarnock, 5 north from Old Cumnock and 4 from Ochiltree; situated nearly in the centre of the county, on the north bank of the river Ayr. The nearest railway station is Mauchline, on the Muirkirk and Mauchline section of the South-Western railway. This place has risen to a considerable town; in 1878 its site contained only a blacksmith's shop and a meal mill. The cause of this rapid increase was the erection of cotton works by the late Claud Alexander esq. of Ballochmyle, who purchased the land for the purpose of establishing works thereon, and the business is now carried on by Messrs. James Finlay and Co. The machinery of the mills is driven by two large water wheels, erected by the late Sir William Fairbairn, of Manchester, in 1828; these are each 12 feet wide, and 50 feet in diameter, both work on the same shaft and have a power of 500 horses. These extensive works employ a large number of hands. There is a public library, the funds for which were raised by subscription; it contains about 6,000 volumes, and has upwards of 300 members. On the south side of the river Ayr are schools in the Elizabethan style, erected at a cost of £2,000.

CUMNOCK is a parish in the centre of the county, east of Ayr, and contains a town of the same name, which with Holmhead was in 1866 erected into a police burgh, governed by a provost, 2 bailies and 6 commissioners, and is a considerable market town, 60 miles south-west of Edinburgh, 16 east of Ayr, and south-south-east of Kilmarnock, on the road between Dumfries on the suth-east and Glasgow on the north, 44 miles north-west from the former town and 38 south from the latter. The Glasgow and South-Western line has a station half a mile east, and the Ayr and Douglas line a station a quarter of a mile south of the town. The parish, which is in the poor combination of Kyle and the head of a small debt court district, extends 9 miles from east to west by 3 from north to south, and is bounded north by Sorn, east by Auchinleck, south by New Cumnock and west by Ochiltree. The town consists of a square, which was at one time the cemetery, and several main streets; it is of a triangular form and is situated in a deep sheltered hollow, at the confluence of the Glaisnock and Lugar waters. The manufacturing of various kinds of woollen fabrics, and wool spinning and dyeing have been introduced. Two engineering firms are engaged in the manufacture of agricultural implements. Three banks have branches here, viz. the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Bank of Scotland and the Royal Bank of Scotland. In 1885 the Town Hall was opened; it is in the Grecian style, from plans prepared by Mr. R. S. Ingram, of Kilmarnock, and erected at a cost of nearly £3,000, towards which the Marquess of Bute contributed £500 and a site. There is also a public library, established in 1792, by a company of shareholders. Baird's Institute, erected in 1891, at an expenditure of close upon £3,000, was the gift of the late John Baird esq. of this town, who left funds for its construction and endowment. It contains a museum, billiard, reading and recreation rooms. Recently the Marchioness of Bute built and furnished a hospital here at an expense of over £2,000; the whole cost being borne by her ladyship. The sum of £20 annually, left for free education by the late Charles Duncan, merchant, of London, a native of this parish, has now, by the Commissioners of Endowments, been mostly applied to higher education in the public school. Two newspapers, the "Cumnock News" and "Cumnock Express" are published here on Friday. The places of worship are a church of the Establishment, a Free church, one for the United Presbyterians, a chapel for Independents, one for the Baptists, and a Roman Catholic church, the cost of which was defrayed by the Marquess of Bute. A cemetery was formed a few years ago a little to the south of the town, at a cost of about £1,000. The market is held on Thursday, and the fairs on the fourth Thursday after Candlemas, the Thursday after the 6th of March, the Wednesday after the 6th of June, the 13th of July, and the 27th of October. The castle of Tarrenzean, now in ruins, is in the neighbourhood, also Dumfries House, a seat of the Marquess of Bute, who likewise holds the title of Baron Crichton of Cumnock. The old churchyard at Barrhill, near the town, was at one period the place of execution, and contains the remains of three persons who were shot on the spot, in 1685 by a party of Highlanders, for their adherence to the covenant; and here the corpse of Pedan, the martyr was buried at the gallows foot. In 1891 a fine monument of Aberdeen granite, 21 feet high, and of Gothic design, was erected to his memory, at an expense of £300. The Marquess of Bute K.T., Captain R. Mitchell Campbell, of Glaisnock, Capt. R. B. Allason, of Logan, and the trustees of the late P. C. D. Boswell esq. of Garrallan, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 14,140 acres; rateable value, £22,190. The population in 1891 was 4,712, including 3,005 in the police burgh and in 1881, 4,861 with 3,251 in the towns.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, Ayr road; George Stoddart, postmaster. Deliveries, 7 & 9.15 a.m. & 4.5 & 7 p.m; sunday delivery at office, 9 to 10 a.m.; despatches, 6.30 a.m. & 1, 4.5, 5.52, 6.45, 9 & 10 p.m

CUMNOCK (NEW) is a parish and village in the east centre of the county, and in the poor combination of Kyle and the small debt court district of Ayr; the parish extends 9 miles from north to south by 9 in breadth. It was separated from Cumnock and formed into a parish about the year 1652; it has a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, about 43 miles south of Glasgow, 21 south-south-east of Kilmarnock, the same distance west by south of Ayr, 10 north by east of Dalmellington and 5 south-east of Cumnock. The parish, which lies on the eastern boundary of that of Cumnock (or Old Cumnock), is in general hilly, and affords excellent pasture for sheep; but there are many spots of rich arable land. The river Nith takes its rise in the south-west end of the parish, and runs through the centre of the whole; and there are several small lakes, the sources of the Afton. Various mines of coal are worked in this neighbourhood, the property of William Hyslop esq. Lady Cathcart &c. and limestone abounds in different parts of the district. The Bank of Scotland has a branch here. A Town Hall was erected in 1888, in the centre of the village, from plans by Mr. Allan Stevenson, of Ayr; the front is of Ballochmyle stone, and the interior of stone from Auchinleck; towards the cost, which was nearly £1,000, the Marquess of Bute gave £200, Lady Jane Stuart-Menteth £200, and the Lanemark Coal Co. Limited £100, the remainder being raised by subscription. The building contains a lecture hall to seat about 500 people, besides offices. A Free Library was established in 1828; it contains upwards of 1,200 volumes. The Established church was erected in 1833, and affords sittings for 1,000 persons. Mansfield House, the seat of Lady Jane Stuart-Menteth, is in this parish. The Marquess of Bute K.T. Jane, Lady Stuart-Menteth, and the Lanemark Coal Co. Limited are the principal landowners. The area comprises 48,096 acres; rateable value, £5,735; the population in 1891 was 4,419, and in 1881 3,781.

DAILLY is a parish in the southern portion of the county and a village, 93 miles south-west of Edinburgh (through Maybole and Ayr), 47 south by west of Glasgow, 46 north-north-east of Portpatrick, by the new road (which is longer by 3 miles than along the coast), 15 south by east of Ayr, 7 south from Maybole, and 6 north-north-east from Girvan. There is a railway station at Dailly on the South Western line. The parish, which extends about 8 miles from north to south, by from 2 to 6 broad, is bounded west by the parish of Kirkoswald, south by Girvan and Barr, east by Barr and Straiton, and north by Kirkmichael; it is in the small debt court district of Ayr and poor combination of Maybole. The uplands are bleak and pastoral, but the more level parts are well cultivated, enclosed and planted. Coal and limestone abound in several parts of the parish. The celebrated Alisa Craig is in this parish. The old parish church is in ruins; the one now in use was built in 1766. There is a Free church and chapels for Plymouth Brethren and Evangelists, and four board schools. Bargany House, the seat of the Earl of Stair; Kilkerran, of Sir James Fergusson bart. K.C.M.G., M.P.; Penkill Castle, the residence of Miss Boyd; Dalquharran Castle, of James Paterson esq. and Killochan Castle, of Tennant Ronalds esq. are in this parish. The Countess of Stair, Sir James Fergusson bart. M.P. of Kilkerran, and the trustees of F. T. R. Kennedy esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 17,962 acres; rateable value, £15,320; the population in 1891 was 1,830, and in 1881, 2,226, the village containing 566 in 1891 and 696 in 1881.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank: Mrs. Mary Wilson, postmistress. (Letters received through Maybole.) Deliveries, 10.40 a.m. & 6.40 p.m.; dispatches, 2.50 & 5.45 p.m

DALJARROCK, see COLMONELL.

DALMELLINGTON is a parish and village, the latter being a burgh of barony, with a station on the Glasgow and South Wesern and the North British railways, 72 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 49 south of Glasgow, 42 north-west of Dumfries, 24 south-south-east of Kilmarnock, 15 south-east of Ayr, 14 east of Maybole, 12 south of Old Cumnock, and 7 east of Straiton, situated on the north bank of the water of Doon, and near to the base of an eminence, from the summit of which a fine view is obtained. The parish is in the poor combination of Kyle and the small debt court district of Ayr, and extends 9 miles from north-west to south-east by 3 to 5 in breadth and is bounded on the south-west by Straiton, north by Dalrymple and Ochiltree and west by New Cumnock; about 2 miles south of the village is Loch Doon, celebrated for its fine trout and a great resort for anglers; boats are furnished by the proprietors of the inns at this place—the Black Bull, the Cross Keys, and the Eglinton. The loch is a beautiful sheet of water, with a hard rocky shore, extending 8 miles in length and 1 in breadth, abounding with trout of fine flavour. Some years ago a fishing party discovered at the bottom of the loch what appeared to be boats, and, having obtained the necessary assistance, they succeeded in raising three canoes, the largest measuring 24 feet in length by 4 in breadth, hewn out of a solid log of oak. Two were much decayed, but the third was so little impaired as to allow of its being floated on the surface, with a person in it, for a considerable time; it is now preserved by Alexander F. M'Adam esq. of Craigengillan, for the inspection of visitors. On an island in the lake are the remains of Balloch Castle, in which, in June, 1306, after the battle of Methven, Sir Chrystal Seton, brother-in-law to Robert Bruce, took refuge, but the castle being stormed he was captured and executed at Dumfries. In Dalmellington is a public library and a reading room, furnished with standard works, periodicals and newspapers; a sum has been left in trust for the support of the latter, and for the education of a certain number of children. About 3 miles north-west of Dalmellington, on the road to Ayr, are the extensive Dalmellington iron works and collieries, with eight blast furnaces. This company not only built the villages of Craig Mark and Waterside, but also many other houses on Lethan Hill, Burnfoot Hill, Benwhat and Kerse. The village of WATERSIDE,at which there is a station on the above mentioned railway, is lighted by gas. The total population of their houses alone, which are occupied exclusively by their own workpeople and families, who occupy 800 houses, is upwards of 3,500. The company have stores for supplying the workpeople with the necessaries they require. Alexander F. McAdam esq. of Craigengillen, Colonel the Hon. Augustus M. Cathcart, of Brocklock, the Duke of Portland and the trustees of H. Buchanan esq. of Downieston, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 17,783 acres; rateable value, £14,572; the population of the parish was 5,034 in 1891, and 6,383 in 1881, and of the village, 1,395 in 1891, and 1,437 in 1881; and in Waterside, 1,222 in 1891, and 1,473 in 1881.

DALRY.

DALRY is a parish and village-town in the Cunninghame district and poor combination, and in the small debt court of Beith, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 69 miles west by south from Edinburgh, 25 (22 by rail) south-west of Glasgow, 16 south-south-west of Paisley, 5 south-west of Beith, 4 north of Kilwinning, and 7 north of Saltcoats, pleasantly situated on a rising ground, surrounded by the rivers Caaf, Rye and Garnock, and consists of twelve streets, three of which diverge from a small central square; many of the houses are well built. The town is lighted with gas by a company, and supplied with water by a system of gravitation, the supply affording 130,000 gallons per day. There are three reservoirs in this parish, that at Camphill and Routenburn supplies Paisley; that at Munnoch is for Irvine and district; and the one at Auld Muir for the town of Dalry; the total cost of carrying out the scheme amounted to £10,500. The sanitary arrangements are under the control of the County Council. Dalry bestows the title of baron upon the Boyle family, Earls of Glasgow. The local industries comprise worsted spinning, which is extensively carried on by Messrs. Biggart & Co. Limited, blanket and tweed manufacturing by Messrs. Kyle, Aitken and Gardiner; the manufacture of tweeds and hosiery and of wool; lime, coal and ironstone abound in the neighbourhood, and there are extensive iron ore and coal mines belonging to the Eglinton Iron Co. and to Messrs. Merry and Cunninghame. There are branches here of the Clydesdale Banking Co. Limited, and the British Linen Company's Bank. The Public Hall, in Aitken street, belongs to a limited company; there is also a Good Templars' Hall, and in Garnock street there are the Victoria Assembly Rooms. The local library is in Garnock street; there are also reading and recreation rooms belonging to the Dalry Co-operative Society Lim. and a Working Men's Constitutional Association. The town maintains a Fever Hospital. In the centre of the town is a handsome granite fountain presented by the late Thomas Biggart esq. of Baidland Hill. The Established church, rebuilt and considerably enlarged, at a cost of nearly £6,000, is an edifice in the Gothic style, and was designed by Mr. David Thomson, architect, Glasgow, and has a tower with a lofty spire; four of the windows are filled with Munich stained glass, presented by the late Captain Blair R.N. of Blair, Messrs. Baird and Co. of Glasgow, the Misses Neill, of Swindridge Muir, in memory of their brother General Neill, who fell leading on his troops at the relief of Lucknow (Sep. 25-6, 1857), and by the leading heritors of the parish. There is an auxiliary Established church, and Free, United Presbyterian, Episcopalian and Roman Catholic churches, and a Mission Hall, opened in 1889, at a cost of about £4,000, defrayed by the late Rev. Robert Stevenson D.D. of this town. The cemetery is at Kirkland. There are several public schools, including the West End Public School, considerably enlarged at a cost of about £3,000, and now holding about 700 children. A public park of about 20 acres, presented to the town by Mr. John Blair W.S. Edinburgh, a native of Dalry, was laid out in 1892, at considerable expense, and includes skating and curling ponds. The weekly market is held on Thursday, and the annual fair on the last day in July. The F company, 1st Vol. Batt. Royal Scots Fusiliers, has its head-quarters here. Blair House, 2 miles from Dalry, is an ancient mansion, a portion of which retains the date of 1203, but the original and still existing tower is said to date from 1130; the fabric is in good preservation, and its walls are of extraordinary thickness; one of the passages, a modern alteration, passing through a wall fourteen feet thick; the mansion is at present occupied by Lt.-Col. F. G. Blair D.L., J.P. Visitors are permitted to inspect the beautifully laid out grounds, and the fine museum of British and Foreign curiosities contained in the house. In the parish is a natural cave, about 103 feet in length, and from 5 to 12 feet in height; the roof is encrusted with petrefactions, and over the entrance projects a vast rock, 30 feet by 27. The interior is arched, and expands near the middle into a spacious chamber, 35 feet long by 12 broad, and 12 feet in height. In the reign of Charles II. this cavern afforded a refuge to the covenanters of the parish, and it is also supposed to have given refuge to Wallace and his co-patriot Sir Bryce Blair, who was executed at Ayr by the English for the part he took with Wallace in the war of independence; adjoining is a farm known as "Wallace Fauld." To the west of the town is a beautiful natural cascade, which has a singular appearance during the continuance of frost. At Camphill and Routingburn in Dalry parish the Scottish army is said to have encamped previous to the battle of Largs, 3 Oct. 1263, in which Alexander III. defeated the Norwegians under Haco. Acreage of parish, 19,284; population in 1881, 10,215, and in 1891, 3,164, of the latter number 3,667 were returned as belonging to the town; rateable value, £43,302.

DALRYMPLE is a small parish and village, 4 miles south-east of Ayr, with a station on the South Western railway; the parish is in the poor combination of Kyle, and the small debt court district of Ayr, extends about 8 miles from north to south by 3 in breadth, and is bounded on the south by Kirkmichael, west by Maybole, north by Ayr, and east by Coylton. In the eastern portion of the parish are several coal and ironstone pits, which are wrought by the Dalmellington Iron Company Lim. Near the Roman road, which intersects the parish, was found in a moss a vessel of Roman bronze, by antiquarians conjectured to be of that kind used by the priests in their sacrificial oblations; and in 1834 was discovered near the same spot an ancient vase; both these relics are in the possession of the Rev. John Wallace, the minister of Dalrymple. In the parish are three British fortlets on commanding sites, and the ruins of three castles. The area comprises 7,833 acres; rateable value, £14,303. The population in 1891 was 1,338, and in 1881, 1,362.

DARNCONNER, see LUGAR.

DARVEL is a manufacturing town, in the southern portion of the parish of Loudoun, in the poor combination of Cunninghame and small debt court district of Kilmarnock, on the river Irvine, 10 miles east-by-south from Kilmarnock and 18 north-east from Ayr. The nearest station is at Newmilns, but the Glasgow and South Western railway are extending their branch from that town to Darvel and expect to open a station there during 1896. It is a police burgh and consists of one principal street, from which a few small ones diverge. The manufacture of lace, lace and tapestry curtains, and muslin is extensively carried on, and affords employment to a number of hands. The Marchioness of Hastings some years ago formed a cemetery. The Working Men's Institute was erected by Miss Brown, of Lanfine, in July, 1870, at a cost of £2,200; it contains a library and reading room, also a room for amusement. The places of worship are the Established church, an edifice in the Gothic style, erected at a cost of about £3,000, a Free church, and one each belonging to the United Presbyterians, Original Seceders, and Evangelical Union. There is also a free school, endowed by the late Alexander Mair, for the education of the children of this village. The latter school has now been placed under the direction of the school board. Population in 1881, was 1,701, and in 1891, 2,024.

DUNDONALD is a parish on the shore of the Firth of Clyde and contains the royal burgh of Irvine and the town of Troon (both which see); the kirktown is about 4 miles north-east of Troon and 4 south-east from Irvine, the nearest railway station being Drybridge on the Troon and Kilmarnock branch of the Glasgow and South Western railway line, about 2 miles north of the village; the parish extends for 8 miles along the shore and 1 to 4 in breadth; it is in the poor combination of Cunninghame and small debt court district of Irvine. Besides the parish church there is a Free church, and a large board school was built in 1895, at a cost of £3,000. There is a Convalescent Home in the village, in connection with the Glasgow Children's Hospital. Dundonald Castle, the property of the Earl of Dundonald, standing on a hill about 3 miles from the sea, is now a ruin; it was erected in the 12th century, and long occupied by the Lord High Stewards of Scotland; and in it Robert II. the first Stewart Sovereign, died. Auchans Castle, the residence of Samuel H. Montgomrey esq. and Lady Sophia C. Montgomrey; Auchans House, the residence of the Hon. Greville R. Vernon, and Fullarton House, of Matthew Arthur esq. are in this parish. The Duke of Portland, the Earl of Glasgow, J. A. Smith-Cunninghame esq. of Fairlie, J. S. Dean Campbell esq. of Corraith, William Finnie esq. of Newfield, and Lady Sophia Constance Montgomrey, of Auchans, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 12,365 acres; rateable value, £61,166; the population in 1891 was 9,545, and in 1881, 8,105; the towns of Troon and Irvine contained 8,545 in 1891 and 6,392 in 1881, out of the above population.

DUNLOP is a parish, partly in this county and partly in the county of Renfrew, and village, in the poor combination of Cunninghame and small debt court district of Kilmarnock; 8 miles north of Kilmarnock and the same distance east of Dalry; it has a station on the Glasgow and Kilmarnock branch of the Caledonian railway: the portion of the parish in this county extends 3 miles from north to south and the same in breadth, and is bounded west by Beith, south by Stewarton and east by Fenwick. The Established church was erected in 1835. In the churchyard is a small mortuary chapel, erected by Lord Viscount Clanaboyes, in 1641, over the grave of his father, the Rev. Hans Hamilton, who for 41 years was minister of the parish; it contains a well-executed monument in marble. A schoolhouse was also built by the same nobleman, in the wall of which is a stone bearing the date of 1641, and an inscription stating that it was erected and endowed by him "in love of his parish, in King James the Sixt his Raigne;" although in excellent preservation, it has long ceased to be occupied as an educational establishment. The village likewise possesses a Free church and a board school. A Public hall, including reading and recreation rooms, has been erected by public subscription; it is a neat stone building and cost about £800. A branch of the Clydesdale Bank Limited is established here. Dunlop has long been noted for the excellent quality of its cheese, which bears a high character throughout Scotland. Several firms are also engaged in ham curing. About the close of the 17th century, one Barbara Gilmour is said to have commenced the practice of making cheese from the entire milk, nothing but skimmed milk having been used in the process in this district previous to that period; at present all the cheese similarly made in the western counties receives the appellation of "Dunlop," a large quantity being made here annually. There is also a considerable trade in meal carried on by the inhabitants of the village and surrounding territory. Dunlop House, in this parish, is one of the finest mansions in the county; it is the residence of Major J. F. Dalrymple-Hay. Near the village, and resting on a small knoll, is a stone of large dimensions, called the "O'Great Stone," supposed to have been employed in some ancient rites of worship. Two fairs for the sale of dairy stock are held, one about the middle of May, the other on the 12th of November; both are generally well attended. Mrs. Dalrymple-Hay of Dunlop house is the principal landowner. The area comprises 6,078 acres; rateable value, £13,202; the population in 1891 was 1,346, including 404 in the village, and in 1881, 1,316, with 357 in the village. The area in Renfrewshire comprises 1,101 acres, with a population of 64 in 1891, and 47 in 1881.

FENWICK (anciently Finnick), is a parish and village, in Cunninghame poor combination and in the small debt court district of Kilmarnock, and is about 4 miles north-by-east from Kilmarnock, its nearest railway station, on the banks of the Macharnock stream and on the road to Glasgow. This parish was originally a part of Kilmarnock, from which it was disjoined in 1641, and was called New Kilmarnock or New Kirk of Kilmarnock; but the village of Finnick, now known as Laigh Finnick or Rose Finnick, to distinguish it from the new village which sprang up beside the Kirk, and was called the Kirktown, eventually gave its name to the whole parish. At a former period, the district was chiefly moorland, but the greater portion of the parish is now under cultivation. John Howie, who chronicled the sufferings of the martyrs and confessors of the Covenant, was tenant of the moorland farm of Lochgoin, in this parish, and his descendants still continue to occupy it. Many memorials of the Covenanters are preserved in the farmhouse, including the bible and sword of Captain Paton and the flag of the Phinick Covenanters used at Bothwell Bridge. Cattle fairs are held on the first Wednesday in May and the first Tuesday in November. The Earl of Loudoun, of Willesley hall, Ashby-de-la-Zouch, Lieut.-Colonel William Reginald Howison Craufurd, of Craufurdland and James Brown Paton esq. of Hairshaw lodge, Kilmarnock, are the principal landowners. Area, 18,104 acres; rateable value, £14,893 5s.; population of the parish in 1881, 1,152, and in 1891, 1,007.

GALSTON is a town and parish, with a railway station on the Glasgow and South Western branch, from Hurlford to Newmilns; in the eastern portion of the county, and includes parts of 3 towns, Darvel, Galston and Newmilns (the first and last will be found under their respective headings); the town is a police burgh lying on the river Irvine in the parishes of Galston and Loudoun, 15 miles north-east from Ayr, 22 south from Glasgow and 5 south-east from Kilmarnock; the parish, which extends 8 miles from east to west by 3½ in depth, is in the poor combination of Cunninghame and small debt court district of Kilmarnock and is bounded on the north by Loudoun, west by Riccarton and south by Sorn. The town is governed by a provost, 2 bailies and commissioners. There is a corn mill, and one for paper mill boards, the latter erected early in the 15th century; other industries are weaving and lace making and raising coal, of which a large quantity is obtained from the estates of the Duke of Portland, who is superior of the parish. Blair's school, opened in 1841, under the will of the late Charles Blair esq. of Galston, who bequeathed certain heritable property, to accumulate until the income amounted to £200 per annum, has under the Endowment Act now become incorporated with the public schools. Brown's Institute was erected in 1874, at a cost of over £3,000, given by Miss Brown, of Lanfine, and consists of a spacious reading room, well supplied with the daily newspapers and periodicals; a library, containing about 3,400 volumes, and recreation rooms. The places of worship are an Established church, an Evangelical Union chapel, and a United Presbyterian church, of Gothic architecture, which cost about £1,100. The Roman Catholics have a place of worship, dedicated to St. Sophia, opened in December, 1886; the style of architecture is strictly Byzantine, Dr. R. Rowland Anderson, of Edinburgh, being the architect; this edifice was the gift of Lord Bute, and cost upwards of £10,000. The Free church, a building of red sandstone, with a Gothic front, was erected in 1888, the cost, amounting to about £2,500, being defrayed partly by subscription and partly by a grant from the Ferguson bequest fund. The architect was Mr. J. B. Wilson, of Glasgow. The surface of the parish is diversified with hills, but the land is generally arable, and there is a considerable quantity of wood. The district is watered by some small tributaries of the Irvine and the river Avon, which rise in the upper part of the parish. About a mile from the town is Loudoun Castle, a large structure in the modern castellated style; near this is the old castle of Cessnock and Barr. Cessnock Castle is the residence of J. Harling Turner esq. J.P. The annual fairs are held on the third Thursday in April, the first Thursday in June, and the last Wednesday in November. The Duke of Portland and Miss Brown, of Lanfine, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 15,243 acres; rateable value, £27,929; the population in 1891 was 6,370, including 4,688 in the three towns, and 3,849 in the part of Galston town, and in 1881 was 5,961, with 3,651 in Galston; the entire population of the town of Galston was 4,296 in 1891 and 4,085 in 1881.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, Galston; Miss Marion Robertson, postmistress. (Railway Sub-Office. Letters should have R.S.O. Ayrshire added to them.) Deliveries, 7 & 12.40 a.m. & 6.50 p.m.; dispatches, 9.20 & 11.20 a.m. & 4.25, 6.30 & 8.35 p.m. Sunday, 12 noon only

GIRVAN.

GIRVAN is a parish, town and burgh of barony, in the district of Carrick and Maybole poor combination, 90 miles west-south-west of Edinburgh, 56 south-west of Glasgow, 35 north-north-west of Portpatrick, 31 north-north-east of Stranraer, 21 south by west of Ayr, 13 north by east of Ballantrae, 12 south-south-west of Maybole, and 6 south-west of Dailly, with a station on the Ayr, Maybole and Girvan branch of the Glasgow and South Western railway, extended to Portpatrick in 1876: the town stands on the left bank of the Garvan or Girvan, near to its influx with the Firth of Clyde, and at a point exactly opposite the rocky islet called Ailsa Craig, which is 11 miles distant, and rises out of the firth to the height of 1,075 feet: it is two and a half miles in circumference, and the top, which is conical, is covered with a luxuriant crop of heath, grass, ferns, and other plants, supporting great numbers of goats and rabbits, and on the precipitous sides of the rock inconceivable numbers of solan geese, puffins and gannets flutter about, and produce an incessant deafening noise. On a long terrace, or shoulder, of the craig, at the elevation of 200 feet from the base, stands a deserted square tower, or castellated house, still very perfect as a ruin. Higher up are two beautiful springs of water, one of which irrigates a marshy tract covered with various plants, and amongst others the hydrocatile vulgaris, which here grows to an extraordinary size. The rock (locally in the parish of Dailly) belongs to the Marquis of Ailsa. The harbour of Girvan, which underwent considerable improvements in 1869-70, and still further and more extensive in 1881-83, at the expense of the Harbour Commissioners, is now considered safe and convenient for shipping. Large quantities of grain of various kinds are annually exported hence, chiefly to Liverpool and Glasgow. The trade in coal and lime is important, but the principal trade of the place is now that connected with the herring fishery, which occurs twice a year, beginning in December and May. The government of the town is vested in two bailies and twelve councillors, three of the latter being chosen annually, on the retirement or otherwise of the like number on the 12th of October. A justice of the peace court is held every month and a small debt court three times a year. The Countess of Stair is the superioress of the burgh. There are two churches of the Establishment, United Presbyterian, Free church, Episcopalian and Roman Catholic churches and a Wesleyan Methodist chapel. The Episcopalian church is a structure in the Gothic style, and was erected at a cost of £1,100. The M'Kechnie Institute, at the corner of Dalrymple street and Ailsa street, erected in 1887-8 at a cost of about £3,000, was the gift of the late Mr. Thomas M'Kechnie, in memory of his deceased brother, R. M'Kechnie, and is a building of red sandstone from designs by Messrs. M'Kissack and Rowan, architects, of Glasgow, and consists of library, reading rooms for both sexes, and smoking and committee rooms. The charities include the endowment to the parochial school mentioned further on. The same donor left also the interest of £1,000, of which £12 is given to the precentor of the church, for the instruction of ten of the children in sacred music, the balance being divided among such poor householders as are not receiving parochial relief. A market, chiefly for grain, is held on Monday; and the fairs are on the first Mondays in April and October, for stock, hiring servants, and general business. Acreage, 14,580; rateable value, £28,672; population of the parish was in 1891, 4,906, including 4,081 in the town, and in 1881, 5,480, with 4,505 in the town.

IRVINE.

IRVINE is an ancient royal burgh, seaport, parish, and the head of a presbytery, in Cunninghame district and poor combination, with stations on the Glasgow and South Western and Caledonian railways, 67 miles west-south-west from Edinburgh, 25 south-south-west of Glasgow, 11 north of Ayr, 11 south of Beith, and 7 west of Kilmarnock. The town is agreeably situated on rising ground on the north bank of the river Irvine, about a mile from its junction with the Garnock water and the sea, and is united by a fine stone bridge of four arches to the suburb of Fullarton on the south side of the river but in the parish of Dundonald, which adjoins the Frith of Clyde, and includes the harbour and quay. In 1881 an Act of Parliament was obtained for extending the boundaries of the burgh, and for other purposes. By this act Fullarton, sometimes called the Halfway, was amalgamated with the burgh, so that the whole town is now under the jurisdiction of the municipality. The burgh is governed by a provost, four bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer and eleven councillors. A bailie court is held every lawful day, as business may require; and one for the recovery of small debts and for the trial of criminal cases before the justices is also held every Monday. The Dean of Guild Court is held on Tuesday. A sheriff court is held every alternate month. Irvine together with Ayr, and Campbeltown, Inveraray and Oban in Argyleshire form the Ayr burghs, returning one member to Parliament. Irvine burgh is of great antiquity. The earliest mention of the place is contained in the account of a dispute between Sir Ralph de Eglinton and the town of Irvine, and towards the close of the 12th century a charter was given to it. During the time of Alexander II. (1214-49) a charter existed, and this was confirmed by Robert the Bruce (1306-29). A monastery of Carmelites friars was founded here about 1300. A scheme for supplying the town with water was completed in Aug. 1878, by the authorities of the burgh of Irvine and the parish of Dundonald at a cost of upwards of £90,000. Arrangements have since been made for extending the supply to the towns of Kilwinning, Stevenston and Saltcoats, which by the Irvine Burgh Act, 1881, were transferred to the jurisdiction of the Corporation. The market is held on Monday, and the fairs on the first Tuesday in May, and on the third Monday in August commences the Marymass fair. Irvine was a customs port before 1760; its limits were defined and legal quays appointed in 1851, and in 1892 it was reinstated by Treasury warrant as a port of the United Kingdom. In the year 1894 there were registered at this port, 33 fishing boats, equal 107 tons, employing 42 hands, also 4 other vessels, equal 212 tons register and there were built 2 vessels equal 99 tons register. The harbour has been much improved, at very considerable expense, and the trade has greatly increased, especially in the export of coal. There are branches of the Royal, Clydesdale, British Linen, and Union Banks. The grain stores of J. F. Longmuir & Co. are extensive and substantial structures. There are also a ship-building yard, three steam saw mills, two iron forges, and two large engineering and foundry yards. Important chemical and chrome works have also been erected near the beach, which give employment to nearly 1,000 men. The principal inns are the Eglinton Arms and the King's Arms, in High street. The municipal buildings form an elegant structure, and include council chambers, court house &c. The parish church is a building of large dimensions, with a spire and clock, and stands on rising ground in the centre of a churchyard. There is also a Free church, two United Presbyterian churches, one for Roman Catholics, and Baptist chapel. At the north end of the town the Irvine Royal Academy was erected in 1814, at an expense of £2,250, of which sum the burgh paid £1,633, and the remainder was made up by public subscription; it has since been established by a royal charter, under the provisions of which it is now governed, and it has also been endowed with a sum of £1,000, left by John Ferguson esq. of Cairnbrock, the interest of which is given annually in bursaries, and there are besides numerous prizes; attached to the school is an extensive playground. There are also Board and Roman Catholic schools; a Literary and Social Institute, with reading and recreation rooms, and a large hall for public meetings and entertainments. The Templars' Hall here was the first of its kind in Scotland; there is also an Orange Protestant Hall. The statue of Robert Burns, who was born near Ayr, 25 January, 1759, but for some years worked at Irvine as a flax dresser, is a colossal figure of bronze, modelled by Mr. Pittendrigh Macgillivray A.R.S.A. and presented to the town of Irvine by Mr. John Spiers; the pedestal is ornamented with bronze panels displaying scenes from the poet's works. James Montgomery, a minor poet, some time editor of the "Sheffield Iris," and author of "The World before the Flood," the well-known hymn on "Prayer," and many other sacred poems, was born here, 4th Nov. 1771, in a little house, still standing in the street leading to the railway station, which has been purchased by some members of the Irvine Burns club with the view of preserving it. A tablet has been placed on the building, marking it as the birthplace of Montgomery. He visited his native town in 1841, and died at Sheffield, 30 April, 1854, and was buried in the general cemetery, where there is a monument with a statue in bronze, erected in 1861, at a cost of £1,000. John Galt, author of the "Annals of the Parish," &c. was born at Irvine, 2nd May, 1779; the house then occupied by his father's family was taken down in 1858 and the office of the Union Bank erected on its site; a tablet in the Bank office commemorates this circumstance. The screw propeller, the principle of which was shown by Robert Hooke F.R.S. in 1681, and later by Quet Bernoulli and others, was developed here in 1824 or 1825 by Messrs. W. M'Cririck, Maxwell Dick, and James Steadman, and successfully applied in 1836 by Fras. Pettet Smith and Capt. John Ericsson. The sect called Buchanites had its origin in Irvine, having been started here in 1779 by one Elizabeth Buchan. From 1618 to 1640 Irvine was the scene of the labours of David Dickson, afterwards principal of Glasgow University. On the 31st December, 1666, Blackwood and M'Coul, two Covenanters, were hanged at Irvine. The Marymass races are held on the Saturday following the third Monday of August, and the Eglinton Hunt meeting (over Bogside course) generally in the beginning of April. The Town Moor and the Links at Bogside, and at Gailes, which are also adjacent to the town, form excellent sites for military encampments, the 4th Battalion Argyle and Sutherland Highlanders (Renfrew Militia) having for many years chosen the Town Moor for the annual training, extending over three months in summer. Detachments of the Royal Artillery from time to time also encamp on the moor. At Bogside, on the Eglinton Estate and adjoining the moor, the Lanarkshire and the West of Scotland Artillery Volunteers have camps of instruction during the summer. There is a splendid land range here with a battery of 8 pieces, called Fort Eglinton. The camping ground at Gailes, which is on the Duke of Portland's estate, lies along the beach between Irvine and Troon. The Glasgow and Ayrshire Volunteers occupy this ground throughout the summer months. There are golf links near the town, the Eglinton links at Bogside and others at Gailes. Eglinton Castle, the seat of the Earl of Eglinton and Winton, stands within two miles of the burgh, and is famous in connection with the grand tournament held here 29 Aug. 1839, and the following week; admission to the grounds and gardens is obtainable by ticket. Rateable value, £28,349; population of the town in 1881, 8,517, and in 1891, 9,037.

KILBIRNIE.

KILBIRNIE, or Kilburney, is a populous town and parish, in Cunninghame district and poor combination, and in the small debts court district of Beith; 64 miles west-by-south from Edinburgh, 20 south-south-west of Glasgow, the like distance north of Ayr, and 3 west from Beith, 1¼ north-east from Glengarnock and Kilbirnie station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway, and with stations at Bridgend (Kilbirnie) and Glengarnock on the Caledonian system. The town is situated on the banks of the Garnock, in the heart of a fine country, and within a mile of the loch of Kilbirnie, which extends two miles in length by half a mile in breadth. The principal manufactories are the flax spinning, linen thread, and fishing-net works of Messrs. W. & J. Knox; Glengarnock Iron and Steel works, about a mile and a quarter south-east, employing about 2,000 persons; Messrs. Paton, Brown & Co. manufacturers of flannel shirtings, skirtings &c. and the rope works of Messrs. Robertson & Riddet, and J. Watt & Co. There is a branch here of the Clydesdale Banking Co. Limited. The parish church is a plain edifice, but contains some fine examples of elaborate carving in wood. The gallery in the Crawfurd aisle, a perfect mass of beautiful carved work, is supposed to have been executed by the orders of John (Lindsay-Crawford), 1st Viscount Garnock (d. 1709), the quartered escutcheon of whose arms, impaled with those of his wife Margaret (only daughter of John, first Earl of Bute), appear along its front; this gallery, for some time in a state of decay, has been restored by Mr. James Knox, of Kilbirnie Castle. In the churchyard, is the stately tomb of Captain Thomas Crawfurd, of Jordanhill, whose capture of Dumbarton Castle, in 1571, is one of the most daring feats recorded in history. There are also two Free Churches, and United Presbyterian and Roman Catholic Churches. The Cemetery, covering two acres, was laid out at a cost of £900. The old castle of Glengarnock, one of the most ancient and stately ruins in Ayrshire, is supposed to have been the residence of the family of De Morville, which flourished in great splendour during the reigns of Alexander I., David I., Malcolm IV., and William the Lion. They held the high office of constable of Scotland, and were lords of Galloway and Cunninghame. There likewise exist the extensive ruins of the old house of Kilbirnie, long the residence of the ancient family of Crawfurd of Kilbirnie; the Kilbirnie estates are now chiefly held by the Knox family. The parish of Kilbirnie comprises 10,335 acres; rateable value, £24,695, and had in 1881 a population of 5,243 persons, and in 1891, 5,468, and at present (1895), 6,250; of this number the village contains 4,000, having had in 1891, 3,528, and in 1881, 3,405.

WEST KILBRIDE.

WEST KILBRIDE is a parish and village in Cunninghame district and poor combination, with a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway; 73 miles west-south-west from Edinburgh, 30 south-west from Glasgow, 24 south-south-west from Paisley, the like distance north-north-west from Ayr, 22 south from Greenock, 15 north-west from Kilmarnock, 12 north-west from Irvine, 7½ south from Largs, 7 south-west from Dalry, 5 north from Saltcoats, 4½ south from Fairlie, and 4 north-west from Ardrossan; the village is surrounded on all sides by rising grounds, which on the west protect it from the keen sea breezes, and on the opposite aspect from easterly winds. The village is lighted with gas by a company. The scenery around is bold and romantic. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in weaving. There are branches here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Clydesdale Bank Limited, and a Public Library and Reading Room; a Convalescent Home is also maintained here, and there are Bowling and Curling Clubs. There is an Established church and Roman Catholic, Episcopal, Free and United Presbyterian churches and a general Cemetery. Near the village are the ruins of Law Castle and Porten Cross, and off the sea line of the parish one of the largest vessels of the Spanish Armada still remains sunk in ten fathoms of water. An attempt was made about a century ago to examine the internal condition of this ship, and the operation so far succeeded, that a piece of ordnance was raised from her hulk. The principal landowners are Hugh Ronald George Craufurd esq. of Auchenames, Lady Sophia A. Montgomrey, Lieutenant-Colonel Gou'd Hunter-Weston D.L., J.P., F.S.A. of Hunterston and Henry C. Hyndman esq. J.P. of Springside. Area, 10,119 acres; rateable value, £23,866; the population of the parish in 1891, was 2,302, including 1,617 in the village, and in 1881, was 2,088, with 1,363 in the village.

Seamill, a small village on the sea shore, about 1½ miles from West Kilbride, is a delightful summer resort and has a good hydropathic establishment, known as the Seamill Sanatorium, Mr. James Newbigging being manager.

KILMARNOCK.

KILMARNOCK is a large and important manufacturing town and a parish, in Cunninghame district and poor combination, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 65½ miles south-west of Edinburgh (through Glasgow), 21 south-west from Glasgow, 12 north-by-east from Ayr, and between 6 and 7 east-by-north from Irvine. The town is situated on level ground near the confluence of the Kilmarnock water with the Irvine. The streets are regularly laid out, and the houses, for the most part, are built of stone. This town, together with Dumbarton, Port Glasgow, Renfrew and Rutherglen, forms the Kilmarnock parliamentary district, returning one member to Parliament. The civil government of the town is vested in a corporation, consisting of a provost, six bailies and eighteen councillors. The magistrates preside in the criminal court by turns, and the justices sit monthly. Kilmarnock furnishes the title of baron to the Hay family, Earls of Errol. For many years Kilmarnock seems to have been distinguished only for the manufacture of Scotch bonnets and military caps. Subsequently the staple manufacture was that of carpets, and in this branch the town yet stands pre-eminent. An extensive trade is also carried on in the manufacture of shoes for exportation, tweeds, winceys and cotton goods; there are skin works and tanneries and woollen and worsted spinning is also carried on, but the iron trade may now be said to be the staple trade of the town, and there are many large machine making and iron founding establishments, including the Caledonia works, of Messrs. Andrew Barclay, Son & Co. Limited; the Glenfield Company Limited; the Townholm, Messrs. Grant, Ritchie & Co. and others. The Townholm Forge, of which Messrs M. Reid & Co. are the proprietors, is famous for the size and excellence of its forgings. Kennedy's Patent Water Meter Company Limited have also a large factory and here also are the engineering works of the Glasgow and South Western railway, for the manufacture and repair of locomotive engines, carriages, and other apparatus. Surrounding the town are extensive coal fields, from which the various works in the town are supplied, and quantities of coal are also despatched by railway to Ardrossan, Ayr, Troon, and Irvine, and thence shipped to various places. There are branches here of several banks, together with a local savings bank. The Town House, built in 1805, contains a court room for the magistracy, and public offices. The Court House in St. Marnock street, erected in 1852, is an elegant structure, attached to which are the sheriff's chambers, and the offices of the procurator fiscal, and those of the sheriff's clerk and other officers. The Corn Exchange buildings comprise a large public hall, erected by an influential joint-stock company. The premises of the Kilmarnock Equitable Co-operative Society, at the junction of John Finnie and John Dickie streets, comprise a fine range of buildings erected at a cost of £6,000. The "Public Libraries' Act, 1855" (18 & 19 Vict. c. 70) has been adopted here, and a public library established at the old mansion house of Elmbank, on the London road, and recently purchased by the corporation. To this library have now been transferred all the books, and also the funds of the Kilmarnock Library, founded in 1797, the latter including a bequest from the late Mr. Crawford, bookseller, of fully £100 annually, for the purchase of books. The Philosophical Society was formed in 1828, for the promotion of general and specially scientific knowledge. The Observatory, which occupies a fine site and is 70 feet in height, was erected in 1818 by the late Mr. Thomas Morton, at a cost of £1,000, and is well equipped. There is a good Philharmonic Society. The Liberal club is in Portland street; the Conservative club, in Sturrock street, is a fine stone building in the Italian style, from the designs of Mr. R. S. Ingram, architect, and was erected at a cost of about £1,400: it contains a spacious hall seating 400 people, and billiard, reading and recreation rooms, and was considerably enlarged in 1892 at a cost of £500. The Ossington Coffee House, built by Lady Ossington, a former proprietor of the Barony of Kilmarnock, who also bequeathed the sum of £3,000 for the endowment of the institution, contains a room liberally supplied with newspapers, magazines, and other periodicals. Besides these, there are located here four Masonic lodges, a society of the Independent Order of Oddfellows, one of the Free Foresters, one of the Free Gardeners, and others. The Fever Hospital and Dispensary, which occupies an elevated site, is a building of stone, and was opened in 1868, at a cost of £4,146.

The Buchanan Charity, left in 1875, on the death of the last survivor of the Misses Buchanan, of Bellfield, consists, according to a settlement made by the three sisters, of the mansion and estate of Bellfield, bequeathed by them for the benefit of the town of Kilmarnock and the village of Riccarton, close to which the estate, consisting of 240 acres, is situated. The following digest of the trust deed fully explains its nature. The trust, called the Buchanan Bequest, provides £5 yearly to the Certified Industrial Schools; £3 to Kilmarnock Infirmary; £10 to the parish minister of Riccarton, to be expended on flannel for deserving poor; £130 yearly as salary to a missionary for Riccarton parish, and the balance of the yearly rents from lands and minerals to accumulate. Part of the mansion is to be fitted up as a reference library, now containing 1,500 volumes, for the public of Kilmarnock and Riccarton, and the gardens and policies to be open for recreation: the rest of the mansion is designed to be fitted up as an asylum for aged and infirm people, who are also to be clothed and fed. In accordance with the terms of the bequest the estate and funds are now administered by the provost and magistrates of Kilmarnock, the Established Church clergymen of the town, the minister of Riccarton and the trustees under the settlement. The mansion and grounds are open to the public every week day, and part of Sunday.

The Shaw Memorial, at the market cross, was erected in 1848 to the late Sir James Shaw bart. Lord Mayor of London, 1805-6, and a native of Mosshead, in this neighbourhood, where he was born in 1764, and died 22 Oct. 1843. The memorial consists of a marble statue by Fillans, eight feet in height, in civic robes, and is mounted on a pedestal of the same altitude.

The civil parish of Kilmarnock consists ecclesiastically of four parishes—the Low, the High, formed in 1731, St. Marnock's, and St. Andrew's, each containing an Established church. Part of the original, or Low church, is of great antiquity. St. Marnock's church, erected at a cost of £5,000, is a large and handsome edifice, in the Gothic style, with a tower, and affords sittings for 1,700 persons. The Free church has six places of worship in the town, and one in the village of Crookedholm, in the parish; there are also four United Presbyterian churches in the town, one of which, in King street, has a tower with spire There are also chapels for the Original Seceders, the Evangelical Union, the Scottish Episcopalians, the Roman Catholics, and other denominations. The old parish churchyard and that of St. Andrew's are now closed, but a public cemetery, covering seven acres of ground, was opened in 1875, and enlarged in 1892. There are two School Boards, the burgh school board and the Landward school board; all public schools within the burgh are under the supervision of the former, and those outside the boundaries of the burgh under the latter. The Kilmarnock Academy, erected in 1875-6 by the school board, at a cost of £5,000, and enlarged at a cost of £3,000, is a building of red sandstone, in the Tudor Gothic style, from designs by Mr. William Railton, architect, designed to accommodate 600 boys and girls. Dr. Hugh Dickie B.A., LL.D. is the rector. There are also elementary board schools in High street and Low Glencairn street. The former Free school has been converted by the board into a Grammar school, and the Female Industrial school and the Science and Art school in Woodstock street, are also under the control of the school board. Kay's Endowed schools, in Wellington street and Bentinck street, founded by Alexander Kay, a native of Kilmarnock, who left the sum of £6,000 for their building and endowment, have been transferred to the school board, under a scheme of the Endowed School Commissioners, and the interest of the proceeds is applied to educational purposes.

The Kay Park owes its existence to the late Mr. Alexander Kay, of Glasgow, and a native of Kilmarnock, who died in Jan. 1866, and by his will left £10,000 to purchase grounds for a public park and to maintain the same, and in 1878, the present site, consisting of nearly forty acres, was purchased from the Duke of Portland at a cost of £9,000. It includes the Clerk's Holm, and stretches from Braehead House to the Townhead bridge, and from the river on the west to Grassyards road on the east. A sum of about £3,000 was spent in laying out the park and forming drives and walks. In the centre of the Clerk's Holm is an ornamental fountain erected at a cost of £800, by gift of the late Mrs. James Crooks; a band-stand has also been erected, and a band plays here on Saturday afternoons. The park was publicly handed over to the burgh council, 9 Aug. 1879, and there is a limited fund for its maintenance. In 1882 the council purchased Strawberry Bank, an adjoining property, consisting of eight acres, for £1,800, and this has been incorporated with the Kay Park; portions of both are reserved for feuing purposes, and there is a small ornamental lake. In this section of the park stands a monument, erected in honour of the early parliamentary reformers. The Burns' Memorial, which stands in the park, was originated at the public anniversary of the poet, held Jan. 26th, 1877, and consists of a museum and library, within which is placed a statue of Burns; the building, erected in 1878-9, is in the Scottish baronial style, from designs by Mr. Ingram, architect, Kilmarnock, and has a height of 80 feet. The statue, of Sicilian marble, was executed by Mr. W. G. Stevenson, Edinburgh, and cost £800. The entire cost of the building and statue was about £2,700. The collection of Burns' holograph MSS. preserved here is the most complete in existence and includes the MSS. of many of his best known poems, besides many of his letters to correspondents in Kilmarnock and the neighbourhood. The Mackie Library, also kept here, contains almost every published edition of the poet's works and comprises upwards of 800 volumes.

Dean Castle, formerly the property of the Boyds, Earls of Kilmarnock, but now ruinous, stands in a dene or hollow, less than a mile north from the town. It was burnt down in 1735. Kilmarnock House, another edifice once belonging to and the last residence of that noble family, is in St. Marnock street. From this house William Boyd, 4th and last earl, proceeded in 1745, to join the standard of the Pretender, but he was taken prisoner at Culloden, and executed on Tower hill, 18 Aug. 1746. The building is now occupied as an industrial school. About three miles from the town, on the Carmel, is Rowallan Castle, a fortress of considerable antiquity, though greatly decayed. It was the seat of the barons of Rowallan, and is famous as the birthplace of Elizabeth More, or Mure, the first wife of Robert the Second of Scotland. It was also the residence of Sir William Mure, author of a metrical translation of the Psalms of David, and other poetical works. The estate now belongs to the Hastings, or Loudoun family, whose residence is near Galston. Among the residences may be named the Mount, Caprington Castle, Annanhill House and Craufurland Castle.

The markets, which are held on Tuesday and Friday, are abundantly supplied with every necessary article of domestic consumption. Fairs are held the second Tuesday in May, last Thursday in July (commonly called the "gooseberry fair"), and the last Thursday in October, for horses. The cheese show and fair, held at the end of October, is affirmed to be the largest in the kingdom, and is attended by dealers from all parts of the country. 15,000 tons of cheese have been exhibited here at one show. The October show is purely an agricultural one. About the middle of April a large show of cattle has been held for years. It ranks next to the great Ayr show. The Duke of Portland, Lady Howard de Walden, the trustees of the late John White, of Grougar, and the Earl of Loudoun are the principal landowners. The area of the civil parish comprises 9,444 acres; rateable value £127,461, exclusive of railways (of which £108,437 applies to the burgh and £19,024 to the landward portion); the population of the entire parish was 27,968 in 1891, and 25,864 in 1881. As showing the progress of the town, it may be mentioned that in 1801 the population of the parish was only 8,079; the population of the 4 ecclesiastical parishes into which the old parish is divided was in 1891 respectively, High Kirk, 3,114; Kilmarnock (Old), 12,423; St. Andrew, 8,161 and St. Marnock, 3,587. The parliamentary and police burgh had in 1891 a population of 28,447.

Crookedholm is a hamlet in the parish of Kilmarnock. Hurlford is the nearest railway station, half a mile distant. Population returned with the parish.

KILMAURS is a town and burgh of barony and parish in Cunninghame district and poor combination and in the small debt court district of Kilmarnock, with a station on the Glasgow, Barrhead and Kilmarnock joint railway. The town is two miles north-west from Kilmarnock, and stands on the right bank of a rivulet called Kilmaurs or Carmel water. It was erected into a burgh of barony by James V. at the instance of Cuthbert, 3rd Earl of Glencairn, and his son, Lord Kilmaurs. The government of the town, which consists principally of a single street, is vested in two bailies (chosen annually by the portioners), before whom debts may be recovered. It is lighted with gas from works belonging to a company. The most prominent trade now is the manufacture of boots and shoes, and the factory of Messrs. Kellie & Co. gives employment to a number of hands. Coal is also raised in the parish. The town house, a small edifice with a tower and clock, stands in the middle of the street. The public hall, recently erected by public subscription at a cost of about £1,000, is used for meetings and entertainments. There is a local Farmers' Society. The Established church has been thoroughly restored, and a new chancel and tower erected at a cost of about £3,000, defrayed by the heritors and members of the congregation. In the churchyard is a fine memorial tomb to William, 9th Earl of Glencairn, and chancellor of Scotland, who died in 1664. There are also Free and United Presbyterian churches, and a Board school. The market, which was for a long period held on Thursday, has fallen into disuse; but fairs are still maintained on the 11th of June, and on the third Wednesday in that month, and the 11th of November. Near the church is an ancient building, the origin and purpose of which are unknown. The Dowager Lady Howard de Walden and Lady Sophia Montgomrey, of Southampton, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 5,900 acres; rateable value, £22,649 6s.; the population in 1891 was 4,453, and in 1881, 3,704, the town having 1,713 in 1891, and 1,203 in 1881.

Crosshouse is a small village and quoad sacra parish in the civil parishes of Kilmaurs and Dreghorn, 2¼ miles west from Kilmarnock, with a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. The collieries and fire-clay works in the neighbourhood give employment to a number of the inhabitants. There are Established and Roman Catholic churches here, also Board and Roman Catholic schools. Population in 1891, 2,772.

Gatehead is a hamlet in the parish of Kilmaurs, 2½ miles west from Kilmarnock and ½ south from Kilmaurs, with a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. Population returned with the parish.

KILWINNING is a market town and parish, in Cunninghame district and poor house combination and Irvine small debt court district. The town is situated on rising ground about 2 miles from the sea, and is 24 miles south-south-west from Glasgow, 3 north-west of Irvine 4 north-east of Saltcoats, the same distance south of Dalry, 10 west-north-west of Kilmarnock, and 5 east from Ardrossan, with stations on the Glasgow and South-Western and Caledonian railways. A new branch of the Lanarkshire and Ayrshire railway, from Barmill to Ardrossan, was completed in the summer of 1888, the station being close to that on the Glasgow and South-Western line. The town is lighted with gas by a company, and is governed by a provost and two junior magistrates, having been constituted a police burgh in Nov. 1889. The trade consists partly in the weaving and manufacture of gauzes, muslins, shawls for the Glasgow and Paisley markets and in the neighbourhood are large iron, coal and fire-clay works. Several engineering works, an iron foundry, and a worsted spinning mill are also carried on. The agricultural produce of the parish is considerable, and coals, which are obtained in abundance, are conveyed by a railway passing from east to west across the parish. There are branches here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited, and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited. A hospital, in Fergushill road, for the use of several parishes, is now (1896) being erected by the County Council. The Established church, a mean edifice, has, however, an elegant tower of four stages, in the Early English style, erected at a cost of £2,000, with embattled parapet and pinnacles, and contains a clock with dials. There is also a Free church, and chapels belonging to the Evangelical Union, Original Seceders, United Presbyterians and Roman Catholics. The picturesque ruins of the ancient abbey, founded by Hugh de Morville, in 1140, adjoin the church, but consist of little more than the gable of the south transept, a lofty fragment in the Lancet style, and an arch once leading into the nave. The public park, in Dalry road, was formed with a sum of £7,000, bequeathed by the late John M'Gavin esq. formerly of Kilwinning. The Board school, built under the Scotch Education Act, at a cost of £8,700, will hold about 800 children. Kilwinning is famous as being the first place in Scotland where freemasonry was established, and it is traditionally said to have been introduced by the foreign architect who was employed in erecting the abbey. Until the period of the Reformation the ancient masonic lodge here held its meetings in the chapter house of the monastery, but in 1779 a lodge was built in a plain Gothic style, and continued to be used until 1893, when it was removed for the purpose of making a new entrance to the churchyard. The new lodge, erected and opened in the same year, stands in the main street, a short distance west of the old site, and is a good building of red Mauchline stone, the design being a free treatment of Scottish Renaissance style, by Mr. J. B. Wilson, architect, Glasgow. The main entrance door is semi-circular, with pilasters at each side, and a balustraded balcony above. The upper floor is lighted by a wide bay window in five divisions, and above it is a typical Scotch gable, with the usual corbie steps, and across it runs a carved frieze bearing the words "Mother Lodge." The large upper room, 24 feet by 20 feet, is used for meetings of the lodge, and there are several small rooms and an entrance hall. The ceiling is ornamented with wreaths of thistles, with various Masonic emblems interlaced. It is also remarkable from being the seat of a company of archers ascertained to have existed so early as the year 1488; and a society of that kind is still in existence. Fairs are held on the first Monday in February and the first Monday in November; and a cattle show in connection with the Farmers' Society is held annually. In 1881 the parish contained a population of 7,037, and in 1891, 7,007, of which 3,835 belonged to the town; area. 10,989 acres; rateable value, £40,259. Eglinton Castle, the seat of the Earl of Eglinton and Winton, is famous in connection with the tournament held here Aug. 29, 1839, and the following week. The Earl of Eglinton and Winton, and Lady Sophia C. Allanby, of Exbury House, Southampton, are the principal landowners.

KIRKMICHAEL.

KIRKMICHAEL is a small village and parish in the district of Carrick and Maybole poor combination. The village is 3½ miles east from Maybole station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 76 south-west from Edinburgh, 22 south from Kilmarnock, 10 south of Ayr, the same distance east of Dalmellington, 8 north-east of Dailly, and 4 west by north from Straiton, pleasantly situated in a valley, on the road from Newton Stewart to Glasgow, 36 miles from the former, and 44 from the latter. The general surface of this parish is hilly, towards the south and east mountainous and rocky; but the whole is more or less cultivated. The Girvan stream runs through the parish; the Doon forms its boundary for several miles, and the Dyrock water flows through the village. The ancient church was dedicated to St. Michael; the present structure was built in 1787 on the old site. In the churchyard is the tomb of Gilbert M'Adam, who was shot in 1685 by the laird of Culzean and Ballochmyle, for his adherence to the covenanters. The Board school was built in 1875, at a cost of £1,100, and will hold 150 children. Area of the parish, 15,930 acres; rateable value, £13,104 17s. 5d. Population in 1881, 1,989, and in 1891, 1,870; of the village, 310.

Cross-hill is a village on the left bank of the Girvan, in the parish and about 2 miles south of Kirkmichael, and is a quoad sacra parish in itself for church and school purposes. There are Established and Free churches here, and also a Board school. Population in 1891, 1,178, and in 1881, 740.

KIRKOSWALD

IS a parish and village in the district of Carrick, and is in Maybole poor combination. The village is 13 miles south-south-west from Ayr, and 4½ south-east from Maybole station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, and on the road from Portpatrick to Glasgow, 90 miles from the former, and 48 by the new road from the latter. The sea coast here presents a sandy beach with a rich sward extending to the sea mark; and there are two lakes, from which many small streams wind through the district towards the sea. Culzean Castle, the seat of the Marquess of Ailsa, who is lord of the manor, is a fine and ancient mansion placed on a rock overhanging the sea; and on the land side are gardens and a noble park of great extent. Not far from the castle is a fort mounted with 13 guns and a mortar battery, both kept in efficient order. At Crossraguel, in a low valley between Kirkoswald and Maybole, are the remains of the abbey of St. Mary, founded in 1244, by Duncan, first Earl of Carrick, and at one period inhabited by Cluniac monks from Paisley. At the Reformation it became the property of the Earl of Cassillis, but now belongs to the Right Hon. Sir James Fergusson bart. G.C.S.I., P.C., M.P. of Kilkerran. A lighthouse stands on the site of Turnberry Castle, once the residence and property of Robert the Bruce, and not more than a mile from it lies the farm of Shanter, once the residence of Douglas Graham, the hero of Burns's poem, "Tam o' Shanter." Area of the parish comprises 14,861 acres; gross rateable value, £15,410 17s. 2d. The population in 1891 was 1,652, and in 1881, 1,781.

LARGS is a town, police burgh and watering place on the east shore of the Firth of Clyde, opposite the north end of Great Cumbrae Island, and a parish at the extreme north-west of the county, 70 miles west by south from Edinburgh, 30 south-west from Glasgow, 14 south from Greenock, and 20 north from Irvine, and has a station of the South Western railway, by which there is a direct communication with Glasgow, via Ardrossan, as well as with Edinburgh by the North British line, and with Glasgow &c. by steamer. The town is governed by a provost and commissioners. The parish extends 8 miles from north to south by about 4 in breadth, and is bounded north and east by Renfrewshire, south by Kilburnie parish, and west by the firth; it is in the small debt court district of Kilmarnock. In 1263 Haco, King of Norway, was defeated by the Scottish army under Alexander III., on the plain on which the town stands. The town is the summer resort of large numbers of visitors, and possesses some good hotels and boarding houses, as well as several good shops, and has branches of the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and the British Linen Company Bank. Considerable business is carried on in the fishery. The annual fair, commencing on the first Tuesday in June after the 12th (St. Columbus's day), lasts two days. At Mackerston place the inhabitants of the town have erected a granite fountain to the late John Campbell, surgeon, for 61 years a resident of the town.

The parish church is a structure of red stone, with a spire and clock. There are also a Free church, one for United Presbyterians, the gift of John Clark esq. J.P., and erected at a cost of £20,000; an Episcopal church, and one for Roman Catholics. An aisle in the parish church, built by Sir Robert Montgomerie, in 1636, is the burial place of the Montgomeries, of Skelmorlie, and has underneath a vault in which lies the body of Sir Robert, enclosed in a leaden coffin bearing a Latin inscription. Knock Castle is the residence of George Elder esq. D.L., J.P. and Brisbane House, of Charles Thomas Brisbane esq. J.P. Buildings have been erected at the east end of the town to take the place of the old Brisbane Academy, and the building formerly used by the academy was purchased by J. Stevenson esq. of Hailie, and having been converted into a library to contain the former Mechanics' Library, increased by gifts of books from Mr. Stevenson, has been transferred to trustees to be held for the benefit of the poor. The area of the parish comprises 21,850 acres; rateable value, £ . The population in 1891 was 5,320, of whom 3,187 were in the burgh, and in 1881 it was 5,149, with 3,079 in the burgh.

LOUDOUN is a parish, in the north-eastern portion of the county, in the poor combination of Cunninghame, and small debt court district of Kilmarnock. It contains on its southern border the towns and police burghs of Newmilns and Darvel and part of the town of Galston (which see). Its kirktown lies 4½ miles south-east of Kilmarnock and 15 north-east from Ayr. The parish extends 10 miles from east to west by 3 in breadth, and is bounded east by Lanarkshire, north by Renfrewshire and the parish of Fenwick, west by Kilmarnock and south by Galston. There is a railway station at Newmilns, on the Glasgow and South-Western line. About 2 miles west of Newmilns and 1 east of Loudoun Kirktown is Loudoun Castle, the seat of Baron Donington. It is a large building in the baronial style, standing in the midst of an extensive and well-wooded park. The parish kirk of Loudoun, bearing the date of 1015, is near the mansion and the only part now standing is that which formed the choir, now the burying place of the family of Hastings, and here rest the remains of Lady Flora Hastings, to whose memory, and that of her mother, a granite obelisk was erected in 1888, by a near relative, Miss Henry, of Cheltenham. In the parish is also Pate's Mill, celebrated in the song "The Lass of Pate's Mill." Lord Donington and Miss Brown, of Lanfine, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 15,486 acres; rateable value, £26,766. The population in 1891 was 6,379, including 5,336 in the three towns, and in 1881 was 5,239, with 4,243 in the towns. The post offices are at Newmilns and Darvel, and the places of worship, Established and Free church, are in the same towns.

LUGAR,

WITH CRONBERRY AND DARNCONNER.

LUGAR is a village in the parish of Auchinleck, 2½ miles north-east of Cumnock, with a station on the Ayr and Muirkirk section of the Glasgow and South-Western railway. There are large ironworks adjoining the village, containing five blast furnaces, belonging to Messrs. Wm. Baird & Co. Limited, and in connection with them is a co-operative store. The Lugar Institute is a building of stone, the gift of William Weir esq. erected in 1892, and comprises billiard, card and reception rooms, a large hall for public meetings, swimming and private baths; the cost was about £5,000. The Marquess of Bute and Captain Campbell are the principal landowners. The population in 1891 was 1,288.

Cronberry is a village in Auchinleck parish, 2 miles north-east of Lugar, with a station on the Ayr and Muirkirk section of the Glasgow and South-Western railway. The population in 1891 was 632.

Darnconner is a village 3 miles north-west of Lugar, in Auchinleck parish. The population in 1891 was 1,198.

MAUCHLINE.

MAUCHLINE is a considerable town and parish in Kyle poor combination, 2½ miles west from Katrine, with a station about half a mile distant, on the Glasgow and South-Western railway: the town is pleasantly situated and surrounded on all sides by a delightful country and is lighted with gas by a company. The trade consists chiefly in the manufacture of fancy boxes &c. in sycamore wood faced with various tartan patterns, for which this town has long been noted and largely made by Messrs. W. & A. Smith: Messrs. Andrew Kay & Co. whose works are at The Haugh, have a wide reputation for the manufacture of curling stones. There is a branch here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, a Public Library and a Temperance Hall. The Established church, erected in place of the old kirk, the scene of the "Holy Fair," is an elegant structure in the Gothic style with a steeple, and there are also Free and United Presbyterian churches. In the cemetery are the graves of the Rev. Mr. Auld, Nanse Tinnock, Mary Morrison and several other persons who figure in the satires of Burns. Fairs are held on the first Thursday after the 4th February, the first Wednesday after the 18th May, the fourth Wednesday in June, the first Wednesday in August, the 26th of September, the 4th of November and the fourth Wednesday in December. Mauchline Castle is an ancient structure of considerable antiquarian interest. Burns resided several years at Mossgiel, a small farm about half a mile to the north of Mauchline, on the left side of the road from thence to Kilmarnock; the steading may still be seen, environed by a few trees, as well as the fields, in traversing which, it is said, he composed some of his best poems. His chief resort when he visited Mauchline was the public house of John Dow, a thatched house of two flats, nearly opposite the churchyard gate, now entirely re-built and occupied as houses and shops. The cottage of "Poosie Nancy," or Mrs. Gibson, the scene of the "Jolly Beggars," stands immediately opposite the churchyard gate. The principal landowners are Maj.-Gen. Sir Claud Alexander bart. of Ballochmyle J.P., D.L. the Duke of Portland, Sir William Frederic Miller bart. of Glenlee, the trustees of Lady Cunningham and William Hamilton esq. The area comprises 8,907 acres; rateable value, £16,811 12s.; the population in 1891 was 2,339, including 1,454 in the town, and in 1881 2,504, with 1,616 in the town.

MAYBOLE is a parish, small town, and the head of a poor combination, in the district of Carrick, with a station on the Ayr and Girvan branch of the Glasgow and South-Western railway, 7 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 52 north-by-east from Portpatrick, 44 south-south-west from Glasgow, 25 north from Ballantrae, 22 south-by-west from Kilmarnock, 12 north-by-east from Girvan, and 9 south from Ayr. The town, which is beautifully situated, consists chiefly of narrow streets, and has few public buildings of any importance. It is lighted with gas by a limited company, and is governed by police commissioners. The principal industry is the manufacture of boots and shoes, and there are also agricultural implement works. The town house, erected in 1887 by public subscription, is a handsome structure, and supersedes the old building, once belonging to the Ken-nedys of Blairquhan. There are Conservative and Liberal clubs, a bowling club and a coffee and reading room. The Carrick Farmers' Society holds its meetings here. The ancient collegiate church has been for some time in ruins, but the burial ground is still used. The parish church is in Cassillis road; there is also a quoad sacra church at Maybole West, besides Free, United Presbyterian andEpiscopal churches, and Wesleyan Methodist and Roman Catholic chapels. There are two Board schools, and a Roman Catholic school. The mansion house or castle of the Kennedy family, Earls of Cassillis, is the finest surviving specimen of the various mansions formerly existing in Maybole. It is a stately, well-built structure, standing in the centre of the town, and is now occupied by Thomas Smith esq. factor to the Marquis of Ailsa, who is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are the Marquis of Ailsa, The Right Hon. Sir James Fergusson bart. G.C.S.I., K.C.M.G., P.C., M.P. and Wm. Baird esq. In the vicinity are the celebrated ruins known as "Crossraguel." The area comprises 21,993 acres; rateable value, £41,175. The population in 1891 was 7,599, including 5,470 in the town, and in 1881 was 6,628, with 4,474 in the town.

Culroy, or Minishant, is a small village in the parish of Maybole, 3½ miles from that town, and on the road to Ayr, from which it is 5½ miles distant. In this village is a manufactory for woollen goods. The church was erected by the late Sir Peter Coats, in memory of his wife, who died 21st April, 1877, and there is a board school. The population of Minishant in 1891 was 146.

Dunure, or Fisherton, is a small village in the parish of Maybole, 6¾ miles from the town, and is chiefly inhabited by fishermen. Dunure House, the property of Francis T. R. Kennedy esq. is at present occupied by George White esq. Near the village are the ruins of Dunure castle, the ancient seat of the Kennedys, who have now removed their residence to Culzean. The population of the quoad sacra parish of Fisherton in 1891 was 598, that of the village of Dunure being 217.

MONKTON and PRESTWICK form a parish in the district of Kyle, which also includes New Prestwick, a suburb of Ayr.

Prestwick, or Prestevicke, a small village about two miles from Ayr, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, was at one period a place of some consequence, having been created a burgh of barony at an early date; and its charter, renewed by James VI. in 1600, granted to it a weekly market and an annual fair, but the market has fallen into disuse. The market cross, which is of considerable antiquity, still exists, and there is a council house in which the bailies and freemen meet quarterly to regulate the affairs of the burgh. At Prestwick there are fine golf links, where the ancient game has been played for many years. The Prestwick Golf Club has a large and handsome club house, and there is also the St. Nicholas Club, both having a large number of members. Population in 1891 was 1,479, and in 1881, 1,064.

Monkton is a village on the sea coast, and on the road to Glasgow, 4 miles north from Ayr, and also has a station about one mile distant on the Glasgow and South Western railway. The population in 1891 was 387, and in 1881, 354. Area of the parish comprises 3,769 acres; gross rateable value, £20,209. The population in 1891 was 2,608, and in 1881, 2,121.

MUIRKIRK.

MUIRKIRK is a parish and town in Kyle district and poor combination, and in Old Cumnock small debts court district, with a station near the town, and another at Glenbuck, on the Caledonian and Glasgow and SouthWestern railways; the town is 50 miles west-south-west from Edinburgh, 30 south from Glasgow, 26 east-by-north from Ayr, 24 south-east from Kilmarnock, and 16 north-west from Sanquhar, near the right bank of the water of Ayr, and at the junction of the roads leading from Glasgow to Dumfries, and from Edinburgh to Ayr.

The town is lighted with gas by a company. Considerable portion of the land here is profitably employed in grazing and pasture, and coal, iron and limestone are abundant. Messrs. William Baird & Co. Limited have three blast and several puddling furnaces and rolling mills constantly in operation, for the manufacture of pig and malleable iron, besides extensive works for the manufacture of chemicals. There is a branch here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited. The Baird Institute, opened in Nov. 1887, was the gift to the town of J. G. A. Baird esq. M.P., J.P. and is a building in the domestic Gothic style, consising of reading and recreation rooms, and a library &c. The total cost was over £2,000. There is also a Temperance Hall. Fairs are held for hiring on the first Tuesday after the 18th February, and the first Thursday after the 18th December, and for pleasure &c. on the second Friday in June. The principal landowners are Charles Howatson esq. J.P., C.C. of Glenbuck, the Earl of Home, John G. A. Baird esq. M.P., J.P. of Muirkirk, the Hon. A. M. Cathcart, of Brocklock, Captain C. Tufnell R.N. of Dollars, and Sir Windham C. J. C. Anstruther bart. D.L., J.P. of Anstruther. Area 30,229 acres; rateable value, £26,306; the population in 1891 was 5,165, including 3,329 in the town, and in 1881, 5,123, with 3,470 in the town.

Glenbuck is a small mining village in the parish of Muirkirk, about 3 miles north-east from that place, with a station on the Caledonian railway, about one mile from the village. The works of the Cairntable Gas Coal Co. Limited, give employment to a large number of the inhabitants. Population, 1,199.

NEWMILNS is a manufacturing town, situated on the river Irvine, in the parish of Loudoun, 2 miles east of Galston, 24 south of Glasgow, and 18 north-east of Ayr, and is the terminal station of a branch of the Glasgow and South Western railway running from Hurlford; it is a burgh of barony and police burgh, and is in the poor combination of Cunninghame and small debt court district of Kilmarnock. It was first created a burgh of barony in 1490 by King James IV. and this charter was confirmed by Sir Matthew Campbell, of Loudoun, in 1566. The bailies are competent to hold courts, from which there is no appeal, except the court of sessions, and in other respects their jurisdiction is as ample as that of most royal burghs. There is a police commission for the better regulation and improvement of the town, consisting of seven members; the chief magistrate is the chief commissioner. The manufacture of muslins and lace is carried on here extensively, a large number of hands being employed in this branch. A Board school was erected in 1894-5 at a cost of about £7,000; there is also one endowed by the late Lady Flora Hastings, and built at a cost of over £6,000, now under control of the board. A new Town Hall is about to be erected. The Working Men's Institute was erected by Miss Brown, of Lanfine, and is similar to those at Galston and Darvel. In the centre of the town are the remains of an old castle, said to have been erected as early as that of Edinburgh, but nothing is known of its ancient possessors. The population in 1891 was 3,704, and in 1881 2,860.

NEWTON, see AYR.

OCHILTREE is a parish and a small but pleasant village, in Kyle district and poor combination, with a station, about 1½ miles distant, on the Glasgow and South-Western railway, and is 64 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 49 north-west from Dumfries, 37 south from Glasgow, 28 north-by-east from Girvan, 22 north-west from Sanquhar, 16 south from Kilmarnock, the like distance north-east from Mauchline, 11½ east from Ayr, and 4 west from Old Cumnock; the village stands on the south side of the Lugar water, and on the high road from Ayr to Dumfries and Edinburgh. The country around is delightfully picturesque, and the parish is well watered. The great Scottish reformer, John Knox, married his second wife at this village; she was the daughter of Lord Ochiltree, who at that period resided at Ochiltree House. Ochiltree formerly gave the title of baron to a branch of the family of Stewart. Here is a subscription library. The Marquess of Bute K.T., Captain John York, William Campbell esq., James P. Wilson esq. of Polquhairn, Captain Gordon and John Morton esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 18,328 acres; rateable value, £19,021; the population in 1891 was 2,062, including 499 in the village, and in 1881, 1,493, with 523 in the village.

Post & Money Order Office & SavingsBank: Mrs. Janet Weir, postmistress. Letters arrive through Old Cumnock. Delivery, 9.15 a.m. & 6.55 p.m.; dispatch, 2 & 7.30 p.m. The nearest telegraph office is at Dumfries House

PATNA, a small village in the parishes of Straiton, Dalmellington, Dairymple and Kirkmichael, with a station about half a mile distant, on the Glasgow and South-Western railway, and is also a quoad sacra parish in itself for church and school purposes. The village stands on the banks of the Doon, which abounds with trout. Coal and ironstone are plentifully obtained in this neighbourhood, and the working of these minerals furnishes employment to many of the villagers. There are Established and United Presbyterian churches. The Duke of Portland is the chief landed proprietor. Board school, erected in 1876, at a cost of £1,800, for 200 children. The population of the village in 1891 was 908, and in 1881, 603; the population of the parish in 1891 was 633.

PRESTWICK, see MONKTON.

RICCARTON is a parish and village, in the district of Kyle and small debt court district of Kilmarnock, on the left or south bank of the Irvine river, which separates it from Kilmarnock, and on the road from that town to Ayr. The village stands on an eminence, a mile to the south of Kilmarnock, with which it is connected by a long street. The parish includes the village of Hurlford. There is a public hall and an institute. The Established church here was erected in 1823, and has a fine and lofty steeple. Riccarton was once the residence of Sir Richard Wallace, uncle of the Scottish patriot Sir William Wallace, who frequently retired here after his marauding expeditions. A considerable quantity of coal is raised in this parish. The principal landed proprietors are Dow. Lady Howard de Walden, William Cathcart Smith Cuninghame esq. J.P. of Caprington, the Duke of Portland, and Mrs. Tufnell. Area comprises 7,550 acres; rateable value, £23 416 1s. 5d.; the population in 1891 was 7,355, including 3,637 in Hurlford and 2,307 in Kilmarnock; in 1881 the figures were 7,112, 3,728 and 1,940 respectively.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, Riccarton; John Marshall, postmaster. Letters are received through Kilmarnock. Deliveries, 8.15 a.m. & 1, 5 & 7.50 p.m.; dispatches, 9 a.m. & 12 noon & 4, 7 & 9 p.m

SALTCOATS.

SALTCOATS is a seaport town and police burgh, partly in the parish of Ardrossan, and partly in that of Stevenston, with stations on the Glasgow and South-Western and Caledonian railways, and is less than a mile each from Ardrossan and Stevenston, 73 miles south-south-west from Edinburgh, 29 south-south-west from Glasgow, 19 north from Ayr, and 14 west by north from Kilmarnock. The town was made a burgh on 25th May, 1885, by the adoption of the General Police Act for Scotland, and is much resorted to in the summer by visitors from all quarters, on account of its facilities for sea bathing. The harbour here was constructed at the beginning of the 18th century, for the shipment of coal, brought down by canal from the extensive fields in the immediate neighbourhood. The shipping and shipbuilding trade of the port has, since 1852, been for the most part transferred to the harbour and docks at Ardrossan. The making of salt created at one time a very large trade. The manufacture of salt, however, ceased in 1890. Saltcoats is, nevertheless, still a flourishing town. Its close proximity to Ardrossan, on the one side, with its extensive harbours, docks and public works, and to Stevenston with its foundries on the other, and the collieries in the neighbourhood of the town, has not only improved the trade of the place, but increased the population and stimulated building to a very large extent. The town has been thoroughly drained by the two Parochial boards (Ardrossan and Stevenston), and is lighted with gas and supplied with excellent water by a system of gravitation. The extensive sands stretching from Saltcoats to Irvine have been frequently suggested as a suitable deposit ground for the sewage of Glasgow. Five churches and three new manses have been built of late years, besides the Free Church school and other public schools; and there has been constructed at the north end of the town a commodious school and another at the east end, built under the Scotch Education Act, to accommodate about 600 children. The Royal Bank of Scotland and the Bank of Scotland have branches here. The Town House, in Countess street, was built in 1892, in place of the former structure, erected in 1825. A justice of the peace court is regularly held here on the first Friday in every month. The Albert Hall and Good Templars' Hall are in Green street, and in Canal street is a Volunteer Drill hall. The Mission Coast Home consists of three blocks of buildings, for the free reception and treatment of about sixty inmates, each remaining for a short period; the home is maintained by voluntary subscriptions. There are also two Homes for the Destitute. The Saracen's Head, which is the principal hotel, has attached salt water baths. Population of the town in 1891, 5,895, 1881, 5,096. The rental of the burgh is now (1895) £24,610.

SEAMILL, see WEST KILBRIDE.

SKELMORLIE is a large village in the parish of Largs, on the coast, two miles south of Wemyss Bay, and a quoad sacra parish formed out of the parishes of Largs in Ayrshire and Inverkip in Renfrewshire, and is a summer resort for visitors. The nearest railway station is at Wemyss Bay, on the Paisley and Wemyss Bay branch of the Caledonian line. The parish is in the small debt court district of Kilmarnock. The village is lighted by gas supplied from works in the place. The Wemyss Bay Hydropathic Establishment stands on a cliff close to the village. The Established church has been rebuilt (1894-5), a new chancel having been erected and a north aisle, the building now consisting of a chancel, nave, north aisle and tower, the latter being 100 feet high. The Earl of Eglinton is the principal landowner. The population of the village in 1891 was 951, and in 1881, 757, and that of the Ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 1,380, of whom 1,079 were in Ayrshire and 301 in Renfrewshire.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, Skelmorlie (Sub-Office. Letters should have S.O. Ayrshire added); Robert Raphael, postmaster. Deliveries, 6 & 9.30 a.m. & 6 p.m.; dispatches, 7.45 & 11.20 a.m. & 3.10, 5.5 & 6.55 p.m.; sunday, 2.30 p.m

SORN is a parish in the north-east of the county, in the poor combination of Kyle, and small debt court district of Ayr; it contains the town of Catrine (which see), and is bounded on the east by Muirkirk, on the south by Auchinleck, on the west by Mauchline, and on the north by Galston and Strathaven; its form is nearly square, measuring about six and a half miles each way. Formerly this parish formed part of the extensive one of Mauchline—the parish church standing about three miles distant from that village. The land, originally moor, has been much improved and well enclosed, and there are fine plantations near the Ayr, which river runs through the parish from east to west. Sorn abounds with coal, limestone and ironstone. Dugald Stewart esq. the late celebrated professor of moral philosophy in Edinburgh, was born in the neighbourhood of Catrine. Sorn Castle, about a mile and a half from Catrine, once the seat of the Loudon family, is now the property and residence of James Somervell esq. J.P. James Somervell esq. Sir Claud Alexander bart. Ballochmyle, Henry Farquhar esq. Capt. R. M. Campbell, of Glaisnock, Arthur Campbell esq. and Charles Houston esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 19,195 acres; rateable value, £20,198; the population in 1891 was 3,919, including 2,458 in the town of Catrine, and in 1881, 4,255, with 2,638 in the town.

Sub-Post Office, Robert Watson, receiver. Letters arrive through Mauchline. Delivery, 8.55 a.m.; dispatch, 2.50 p.m. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Catrine, three miles distant. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid

STEVENSTON is a parish on the shore of the Firth of Clyde, south-east of Ardrossan, its town being 3 miles south-west of Kilwinning, and one east of Saltcoats, the greater part of which town is in this parish extending 5 miles from north to south by 1 to 3 in breadth, and is in the poor combination of Cunninghame, and small debt court district of Kilmarnock, and is bounded north by Ardrossan, east by Irvine and Kilwinning, south and west by the firth. It derives its name from Stephen or Steven, the son of Richard, who obtained a grant of lands from Richard Morville, a constable of Scotland; the latter, a very celebrated man, died in 1189. Under this grant, Stephen settled here, and gave his patronymic designation to the place. The parish abounds in valuable seams of coal. The extensive ironworks of Ardeer were erected here by Messrs. Merry & Cuninghame in 1852. There are very large works for the manufacture of dynamite, in the occupation of Nobel's Explosives Co. Limited, and three large foundries. A valuable freestone quarry has recently been re-opened. The Bank of Scotland has a sub-branch establishment here. The Established church is a large building of modern erection, very prominently situated. The old church formerly belonged to the Abbey of Kilwinning. There are also Free and United Presbyterian churches. In the centre of the town is a school, built under the Scotch Education Act, for 650 children. The area of the parish comprises 3,771 acres; rateable value, £28,412; the population in 1891 was 6,209, which included 1,667 in the town of Saltcoats, and 4,263 in the town of Stevenston, and in 1881 it was 5,694, with 1,767 in Saltcoats, and 3,556 in Stevenston.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, Fullarton place, Stevenston (Railway Sub-Office. Letters should have R.S.O. Ayrshire added); Matthew Orr, postmaster. Deliveries, 7.20 a.m. & 3.30 & 6.30 p.m.; dispatches, 7.45 & 10.50 a.m. & 1.50, 3.55, 4.40, 5.40, 6.25 & 9 p.m

STEWARTON.

STEWARTON is a town and parish in the district of Cunninghame, and in Cunninghame poor combination, 16 miles south-by-west from Glasgow, 8 north from Irvine, 5½ north from Kilmarnock, and 3 north-north-west from Fenwick, and is situated in a pleasant part of the country, on the banks of Annock water, with a station on the Glasgow, Barrhead and Kilmarnock Joint railway. The parish, which is about ten miles in length, and from three to four in breadth, is a rich agricultural district, and has long been famous for its dairy produce. Stewarton, for centuries an inconsiderable and obscure village, is now a police burgh; it is lighted with gas by a company, and is governed by a senior and two junior bailies and six commissioners of police. The chief industries are carding and spinning for the carpet and bonnet trades, the manufacture of Scotch bonnets, military forage caps, hosiery and the manufacture of spindles and flyers, and bee-boxes for apiaries. There are branches here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. District courts for the recovery of small debts are held on the first Thursday in each month, and such business as falls under the jurisdiction of justices of the peace for the parishes of Stewarton, Dunlop and Fenwick, is transacted at the same time. The Cuninghame Institution has an extensive library and reading room, besides a recreation room, all amply furnished and liberally supported by the lord of the manor. There is also attached a large and a lesser hall, several committee rooms &c. An hospital, erected and presented to the burgh by John James Kerr esq. of Robertland, was opened in 1895. The cost of the building was about £5,000. There are Established and Free churches, one each for United Presbyterians and Independents, and a Methodist chapel. The Board school, erected under the Scotch Education Act, holds about 600 children. There is also a Board school at Kingsford in this parish. Fairs are held on the Wednesday before the last Thursday in October for cattle, this being the largest fair for Ayrshire dairy stock in Scotland; summer fair Monday before first Tuesday in May, for cattle, and horse fair on the Wednesday before Skeirs Thursday, and first Wednesday in May. The principal landowners are John William Herbert Cunninghame esq. of Lainshaw, John James Kerr esq. of Robertland, David Provan esq. J.P. of Wardhead House, and Lieut.-Col. Charles Somerville M'Alester, of Kennox. The area comprises 13,626 acres; rateable value, £25,910 13s.; the population in 1891 was 3,804, including 2,687 in the town, and in 1881 was 4,309, with 3,130 in the town.

STRAITON is a large parish and village in Carrick district, 80 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 48 south-by-west from Glasgow, 30 north from Newton-Stewart, 26 south from Kilmarnock, 14 south-east from Ayr, 14 north-east from Girvan, 7 south-east from Maybole, 7 north-east from Dailly and 6 south-west from Dalmellington; the village is finely situated on the banks of the Girvan, and on the road leading from Glasgow to Newton-Stewart. The nearest railway station is Kilkerran, 6 miles distant, on the Ayr, Maybole and Girvan branch of the Glasgow and South-Western line. The parish, which extends about 20 miles in length by 8 in breadth, consists for the most part of pasture land, the surface, especially in the south-east, being wild and rocky, interspersed with a number of small lakes; there is, however, a considerable supply of natural wood and several extensive plantations, and besides the Girvan and lakes, the parish is watered by the river Doon. The inhabitants are for the most part occupied in agricultural pursuits. About half a mile south of the village are the remains of an oblong entrenchment, presumed to be of Roman origin; various ancient relics have been found on the spot, including two carved vases or urns, containing ashes. Milton Lodge, the property of and occupied by Sir E. H. Blair bart. is about a quarter of a mile from the village. Blairquhan Castle, also the property of Sir E. H. Blair bart. and now the residence of Sir Donald Horne Macfarlane kt. is a mansion in the Tudor style, about one mile from the village, on the road to Girvan. Genoch Lodge, three miles and a half from the village and the property of the Marquess of Ailsa, is at present tenanted by Major Sturrock and James Dykes esq. as a shooting and fishing residence. The Marquess of Ailsa, A. F. M Adam esq. the Right Hon. Sir James Fergusson bart. G.C.S.I., P.C. and Sir Edward Hunter Blair bart. are the proprietors of the land. Rateable value, £13,169 2s. 7d.; area, 49,801 acres; the population in 1891, was 1,060, and in 1881, 1 241.

TARBOLTON.

TARBOLTON is a parish and town in the district of Kyle, with a station about 1½ miles from the town and another at Annbank, both on the Glasgow and South-Western railway; the town is 12 miles south-east from Irvine, 8 south from Kilmarnock, 8 north-east from Ayr and about 5 miles from the shore of the Firth of Clyde, and is surrounded by a fine country; it was erected into a burgh of barony in the reign of Charles II. There is a Free Library and Reading Room, the gift (in 1878) of the late John Lorimer esq. a native of Tarbolton. The parish church, completed in 1821, at a cost of upwards of £2,500, is an elegant structure, and has a tower with spire containing a clock, having four dials. The parish is about 7½ miles in length, and its average breadth is about 4½. The Duke of Portland, John Bell esq. of Enterkine, Hugh Hamilton esq. of Pinmore, the Trustees of William Orr Paterson esq. of Montgomery, John Stirling esq. of Whitehaven, the Executors of William C. Cunningham esq. of Atton Lodge, Thomas Davidson esq. of Drumley and John C. Montgomerie esq. J.P. of Dalmore are the principal heritors. A fair is held the first Tuesday after the 11th of June. Area of parish, 12,059 acres; rateable value, £23,929 3s. 2d. The population in 1891, was 3,586, including 917 in the town and in 1881, 3,599, with 922 in the town.

TROON,

WITH BARASSIE AND LOANS.

TROON is a town and seaport in the parish of Dundonald, 75 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 31 south-west from Glasgow, 7 south from Irvine, 9 south-west from Kilmarnock and about 8 north from Ayr, with a terminal station on a branch of the Glasgow and South-Western railway. The bay is extensive, and the port also has the advantage of a secure harbour, into which vessels of great burthen can confidently enter with the wind from almost any point. There are two superior dry docks for repairing vessels, large storehouses, a shipbuilding yard, and a rope and sail manufactory. During 1894, six vessels, equal to 615 tons register, were registered as belonging to the port, besides 27 fishing boats, equal to 62 tons and employing 34 hands, and 5 steamers, equal to 659 tons register, and one sailing vessel of 1,470 tons, were also built. A line of railway runs from the extremity of the harbour to Kilmarnock conveys immense quantities of coal, thence shipped to Ireland, France &c. The place also affords good sea bathing and is much visited for this purpose during the season. The town is lighted with gas by a company. The British Linen Co.'s Bank and the Union Bank of Scotland have branches here. There is a Reading Room on Temple hill, where also stands the Unionist Club and the Post Office, erected in 1894; the Public Hall is in West Portland street. A new Established church is now (1896) in course of erection, and there are Free and United Presbyterian churches and a Roman Catholic chapel. Near the town are extensive golf links. Two local newspapers are published here, the "Troon Times" on Thursdays (1d) and the "Troon Herald" on Fridays. The population of the town was, in 1891, 3,315, and in 1881, 2,383.

BANFFSHIRE.

This county, which is of no great extent, is bounded on the north by the North Sea, on the south and on the east by Aberdeenshire, and on the west by the shires of Elgin and Inverness. Its form is elongated, being 50 miles in extent from north to south, with a border of very irregular outline, but varying much in width, being 15 miles wide at the southern extremity between Benavon and Cairngorm, narrowing to 6 south of Ealasaid hill, and after extending again to 18 between Drummin and Cabrach it narrows to 8 a little south of Keith, northwards of which it extends to 35 miles, which is the length of its sea coast line.

The river Deveron for a considerable distance forms the north-eastern boundary between this county and that of Aberdeen and enters the sea at Banff; and the Spey, its western, where it marches with Elgin. This district was at one time a component part of the province of Moray, which altogether forms one of the finest tracts of ground in the northern part of Scotland. On the eastern side of the Deveron, in the district of Buchan, the parish of Gamrie and some other spots of land belong to Banffshire, which both in point of size and in population ranks as the fifteenth county in Scotland, containing 640 square miles, or 410,110 acres; and having a population in 1891 of 30,748 males and 33,442 females, or a total of 64,190, against 62,736 in 1881; the number of inhabited houses being 12,707.

Soil, Surface and Climate, Produce and Manufactures.—The soil, with few exceptions, is deep loam or tenacious clay. The face of the country is agreebly diversified by an intermixture of valleys and ranges of hills, with many beautiful fertile braes, productive of the finest crops, or serviceable for the excellence of their pasture. The Strath of Glen-Avon proceeds from the forest of Glen-Avon, in a north-westerly direction, and Strath Devon to the east. Betwixt these is Glen-Livet, from whence to the north diverges Glen Fiddich, with Glen Isla further north. The principal mountains in the county are:—Noath, 1,830; Buck, or Cabrach, 2,377; Knockhill, 2,500; Corryhabbie, 2,558; Ben Rinnes, 2,747; and Cairngorm, 4,244 feet above the level of the sea. The chief crops in 1894 were: oats, 50,626 acres; turnips, 22,491; barley, 7,713; potatoes, 1,976 and hay, 11,526; the total corn crops being 58,596 acres and green crops 25,482; while land under grass was 64,520 acres; permanent pasture 10,817 acres; the total area of land and water being 405,432 acres. The live stock comprised in 1894, 8,804 horses, 43,760 cattle, 66,740 sheep and 2,841 pigs; great attention is paid to the cultivation of turnips for feeding purposes, the rearing of cattle forming for the most part the chief object of the farmer. The Aberdeenshire polled cattle, and the pure short-horned are the breeds most esteemed. In many parts of the county fine flocks of sheep are to be met with, both of the Cheviot and the black-faced varieties. The fisheries are also of importance, more than a dozen towns and villages being connected, to a greater or less extent, with this industry. There were in 1894, 1,237 boats with an aggregate tonnage of 20,239 tons and employing 9,500 men and boys, registered at the port of Banff, and besides 10 sailing vessels=293 tons. Cod, ling, haddock, whiting, halibut, skate and flounder frequent the Firth, and turbot and mackerel are occasionally caught, whilst in the season the herring yields a rich harvest to the fishermen. The curing of fish is of consequence, many persons being engaged in this branch of trade in several of the towns, in which are also extensive distilleries, Glenlivet whisky having become a famous brand. Under the auspices of parliamentary commissioners, the county has experienced considerable improvement in being opened out by new roads. Limestone may be quarried beneath the surface of nearly the whole county, and at Portsoy is a fine vein of serpentine stone, called "Portsoy marble," as well as a species of granite which, when polished, exhibits the resemblance of Hebrew characters. Freestone, ironstone, marl and slate are also found in various parts. The chief articles of export are grain, fish and whisky; the salmon of the Spey and Deveron together also form an article of great consideration. The principal imports are coal, iron, timber and manures. The climate of Banffshire is precarious. In the hilly districts, all the evils of cold and rain are often felt; and as frost and snow frequently set in without any interval of good weather, the harvests are not only endangered, but at times are not finished until the end of October. The low ground of the shire, from Duffhouse to Forglen and Kinnairdy (a tract of about twelve miles along the Deveron), and from Banff to Gordon Castle, including the districts of Boyne and Enzie, must be excepted, being nearly equal to the climate of Moray, and greatly surpassing most parts of the country in the fertility of the soil, the improvement of its agriculture, and the richness of its productions.

Rivers, Railways &c.—The rivers, besides the Spey, which, rising in Inverness and debouching in Elgin, only forms the western boundary of this county, are the Deveron, reaching the sea at Banff and the smaller rivers of Livet, Isla, Avon, Tervie, Rinnie, Fiddish, water of Crombie and water of Caiplaich. The Spey and Deveron furnish quantities of salmon. The principal sheet of water is Loch Avon in the extreme south of the county. The railways belong to the Great North of Scotland system, and commencing from the east run as follows: the branch from Inveramsay through Turriff ends at Macduff; the main line from Aberdeen through Huntly, after sending a branch from Grange Junction north-east to Banff, reaches Keith and there branches southward to Dufftown and Aberlour and goes on through Mulben to Elgin, while a coast line from this latter town to Tillynaugh Junction below Banff feeds the various ports, such as Portsoy, Cullen &c.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Banffshire contains nineteen entire civil parishes and eleven parts of parishes, and is partly in the synod of Aberdeen and partly in that of Moray in Ross; it contains two royal burghs—Banff and Cullen; these are also contributory burghs, or those which, in conjunction with others, are represented in parliament. The county returns one member. The parliamentary constituency in 1894-5 numbered 7,520. The valuation of the county for 1894-5 was (exclusive of railways), £237,614, and the valuation of railways £22,916.

ABERCHIRDER AND MARNOCH.

ABERCHIRDER is a village in the parish of Marnoch, with a station named Glenbarry on the Great North of Scotland railway in the parish, 9 miles south-west of Banff and about 3 miles north of the river Deveron; it is in Buchan poor combination and Banff small debt court. Aberchirder was constituted a police burgh on 27th of Nov. 1889, by adoption of the General Police and Improvement (Scotland) Act, 1862. The parish church of Marnoch, built upwards of 100 years ago, and renovated in 1884, is a plain stone building with belfry on west gable and has sittings for 700 persons. The Episcopal church (St. Marnan), built in 1824, consists of a plain nave, with vestry and organ chamber added in 1875; there are sittings for 150 persons. A Cottage Hospital was erected in 1892 to the memory of Miss Elizabeth Ogilvie Rose Innes, of Netherdale Cottage, to whose bequest of £5,000 the inhabitants are indebted. The chief landowners are the Duke of Fife, the trustees of the late John Forbes esq. T. G. Rose Innes, of Netherdale, W. T. Reid, of Ardmeallie, and trustees of Chalmers Hospital. Cattle markets are held on second Tuesday in January, first and third Tuesday in March (old style), Monday before 28th May (feeing), first Monday in June, first Tuesday in August, the day before Huntly in September, the Monday before 28th Nov. (feeing) and first Monday in December. The parish of Marnoch embraces an area of 14,954 statute acres; rateable value, £12,482; population of the parish in 1881, 3,230, and in 1891, 8,006, the village of Aberchirder containing 1,222 of that number.

ABERLOUR AND CRAIGELLACHIE.

ABERLOUR is a parish and village, founded in 1812, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway. The village, formerly called Charlestown, created a burgh or barony in 1814 and police burgh in 1894, is about 6 miles south-west of Dufftown, where the river Lour joins the Spey; it consists of one long street and a large square. The places of worship are an Established church, a Norman structure with tower and clock; a Free church; the Episcopal church, a structure in the Early English style, was erected in 1880, at a cost of £11,000, commenced by the late Miss Macpherson Grant, and completed at an outlay of £9,000: the chancel screen was exhibited at the Paris Exhibition of 1862: the organ, a powerful instrument, was erected in memory of Miss Macpherson Grant: the altar is of Caen stone and green Irish marble and elevated on nine steps: the tabernacle is of wrought brass, which with a massive silver sanctuary lamp were the gift of the Duke of Newcastle, to commemorate his visit here in 1887: there are seven stained glass windows: the church has 250 sittings. Near this is an Orphanage, established in 1875, open to all denominations, and supported by voluntary contributions: this institution is for the reception of orphans and fatherless children in Scotland and elsewhere: girls are also received and trained for service, and they are looked after while earning their living, and a home made for them when out of situation or ill: there are now upwards of 250 inmates. Ben Rinnes, 2,755 feet above the level of the sea, is in this parish. A short distance from the village stands Aberlour House, formerly the property of Miss Macpherson Grant, but now belonging to John Ritchie Findlay esq. D.L., J.P.: it is in the Grecian-Doric order, of quadrangular form, and of two storeys, and from its situation splendid views of the surrounding country can be obtained. There are two branch banks in the village. The distilling of whisky is carried on extensively, the Dailuaine distillery having made large additions to their premises. Fairs are held on the first Thursday in April and the third Thursday in May and November (feeing). Acreage of the parish, 14,781; population in 1881, 1,912; in 1891, 2,072, of which the village of Aberlour contained 1,011.

Craigellachie is a pleasant village, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway, in the parish of and situated 2 miles north-east from Aberlour. The Spey is here crossed by an iron bridge of a single span of 150 feet, which was erected from designs by Telford, in 1815, at a cost of £8,000. From the bridge a fine view of the river is obtained. The Craigellachie distillery was erected in 1890. This beautiful district is frequented by a large number of visitors during the summer season, and a commodious hotel (The Craigellachie) was erected in 1892. The Craigellachie Auction Co. Limited, hold a sale for cattle &c. at their mart every Wednesday.

ALVAH is a parish 2½ miles south-south-west of Banff station, on the river Deveron, which is here crossed by a private bridge, erected in 1772 by the Earl of Fife, and is in the small debt court district of Banff. The parish is 6 miles long and 3 wide, for the most part fertile, the Hill of Alvah being a conspicuous landmark for this coast. Trustees of the late Sir Robert I. Abercromby, Conan Morison and the Duke of Fife K.T. are the principal landowners. Acreage of parish (including the detached portion of King Edward), 11,488; rateable value, £9,992 3s. 11d.; population in 1891, 1,332.

BANFF.

BANFF is a royal burgh, the capital of the county and head of a parish, 155 miles north-by-east of Edinburgh, 80 east of Inverness, 46 north-by-west of Aberdeen, 35 east of Elgin, 25 east-by-north of Fochabers, 13 east of Cullen and 8 east-by-south of Portsoy, on the coast of the North Sea, pleasantly situated on the side of a hill overlooking the west bank of the Deveron and its confluence with the sea. This town was part of the ancient thanedom of Boin, whence the name seems to be derived, for in some old charters it is written Boineffe and Baineffe. Tradition says it was founded by Malcolm Canmore, in 1163, and it was erected into a royal burgh in 1372 by Robert II. who endowed it with the same privileges and placed it on the same footing as Aberdeen. A branch railway of the Great North of Scotland line, from the west by Keith and Strathisla, terminates in Banff, and one from the south by way of Turriff, terminating at Macduff, has a station at the end of Banff bridge. The town comprises several well-built streets, with good shops, and is clean and neat. The modern town house is surmounted by an elegant spire. A drinking fountain was presented in memory of Walter Biggar esq. and Mrs. Ann Duff, his wife. There are also a museum and libraries, and the Town and County Club, opened in September, 1881. The river Deveron, which abounds with salmon, is here crossed by a substantially-constructed bridge of seven arches, which gives access to the seaport of Macduff and to the adjoining county of Aberdeen, via Turriff.

The inner harbour of Banff is secure, but has not a great depth of water; the outer basin, which is defended by a pier and breakwater, has a greater depth, and affords very good shelter. A Morton's patent slip apparatus is here fitted up. The port, which extends from Penan to Garmouth, stands sixth in the list of Scotch ports as regards tonnage of sailing ships. Shipping.—The number of vessels (all sailing ships) registered at this port is 55, with a tonnage of 5,731 tons. In 1894 the entries inwards were 818 vessels, with an aggregate tonnage of 74,838, consisting of 348 with cargoes and 50 in ballast coastwise; total, 398; equal, 35,945 tons; and 369 with cargoes and 51 in ballast from foreign ports; total, 420; equal, 38,893 tons. The vessels cleared were 782, aggregate tonnage 71,432 tons, consisting of 170 with cargoes and 199 in ballast coastwise; total, 369; equal, 33,433 tons; and 209 with cargoes and 204 in ballast to foreign ports; total, 413; equal, 37,999 tons.

The number of fishing boats registered—under Sea Fisheries Act, 1868—at Banff in 1894 was 1,237, of 20,239 tons, employing 6,500 men and boys, besides 10 sailing vessels, aggregate 293 tons. The chief trade is of an export nature, and comprises salmon, herring and other fish. It is governed by a provost, three bailies and five councillors. The town council are also commissioners under the Police (Scotland) Act, 1892. Banff forms part of the Elgin parliamentary district of burghs. A small debt court is held each Tuesday during the session.

The places of worship are a church of the Establishment, a neat modern erection with handsome spire, a Free church, and others belonging to Episcopalians, United Presbyterians, Roman Catholics and Wesleyan Methodists. Banff Academy, now the Burgh School, stands high as an educational institution, and an infant department, called the Ramsay School, has recently been erected. There is also a boarding establishment for young ladies. Chalmers' Hospital was founded in 1861, in terms of a bequest by the late Alexander Chalmers, of Clunie, long a merchant in this town, and is for the support, maintenance, cure and relief of destitute, sick and diseased persons, of both sexes, born, domiciliated and resident in any town or parish in the county of Banff; the inhabitants whereof shall make collections at their respective parish churches in aid of the funds of the hospital. It is adapted for 50 patients, with the requisite buildings for officials and attendants. A permanent revenue for the support of the hospital is derived from the rental of the lands of Clunie and Knockorth. A Cholera and Small Pox Hospital has also been erected on a beautiful site on the Braeheads to the west of the town. The weekly corn and provision markets are held on Friday; Brandon fair on the last Fridays in May and November. There are five branch banks, a distillery, brewery, saw mill and iron foundry. Ship and boat building, rope and sail making and tanning are also carried on. The burgh boasts of one of the finest hotels (the Fife Arms) in the north. A newspaper, the "Banffshire Journal," is published in the town (on Tuesdays). From the bridge a fine view is obtained of Duff House, the seat of the Duke of Fife K.T.; this elegant mansion is partly in the Corinthian and partly in the Composite style, and the front is elaborately decorated with sculpture; the interior is replete with curiosities, and embellished with an extensive collection of paintings by foreign and British artists. Troup House is the residence of Mrs. Garden-Campbell. A castle of considerable strength and magnitude formerly stood here, and vestiges remain of part of the ancient wall, the moat, and traces of the entrenchments, but a modern mansion now occupies part of the site. Edward I. visited Banff Castle on Sunday, the 22nd of July, 1296, after Baliol, King of Scotland, had surrendered to Edward, at Montrose, on the 7th July. After he had defeated Wallace at the battle of Falkirk, Edward marched north and visited Banff Castle a second time, 4th Sept. 1298, and the public records show that it was the last stronghold possessed by the English north of the Grampians. The Castle thereafter became a constabulary, the residence of the king's representative or constable, who exercised judicial authority in the county. Dr. James Sharp, the celebrated Archbishop of St. Andrews, was born in Banff Castle in May, 1613. Acreage of the parish, 6,217; rateable value, £19,230: in 1891 the burgh of Banff had a population of 3,871, and the parish 4,763.

BOYNDIE, see WHITEHILLS.

BUCKIE, which was established as a fishing village a little more than a century ago, has now grown to the largest, and, in many respects, the most important town in the county of Banff. Its name, unlike most of the other places in the district, which are of Gaelic derivation, is obviously of German origin, being derived from "Bucht"—a bay. Situated as it is on the shore of the North Sea, its name is accurately descriptive. The Great North of Scotland and Highland Railway Companies have each stations here. It is in the parish of Rathven, 20 miles west from Banff, 6 west from Cullen and 7 east from Fochabers. In the beginning of 1888 the General Police Act was adopted, and Easter Buckie, or Buckie proper, and Buckpool are both included in the police burgh of Buckie. The town is divided by the burn, Buckie proper, of which the trustees of the late John Gordon esq. of Cluny, are the superiors, lying on the east, and Buckpool, of which Sir Robert G. Gordon bart. of Letterfourie, is superior, on the west of the said burn. The tenure under which property is held is mainly feu right. The town is possessed of two harbours, the one in Buckpool, constructed about 1862, at a cost of £18,000 (two-thirds of this amount was contributed by the Board of Fisheries, and the other third by Sir Robert G. Gordon); the other harbour, commenced in 1874, was built at the sole expense of the late John Gordon esq. of Cluny, at an expense of about £70,000; D. Cunningham esq. C.E. Dundee, was the engineer. As might be expected from the origin of the town, and also its natural capabilities, fishing is the principal trade. The Buckie fishing district comprises the neighbouring stations on the coast; for boats on register see Banff. A number of curing stations and other stores have been erected by the Cluny Trustees. Steam service is carried on from Leith and Aberdeen to Buckie. In 1893 Sir Robert G. Gordon gave up his right, under certain conditions, to a body of 13 Harbour Commissioners. In that year a Provisional Order was passed by the Board of Trade, and confirmed by Act of Parliament, by which it is provided that the harbour shall be very considerably extended and improved. At present (1895) an inside jetty is in course of construction. The town is governed by a provost, two bailies and nine councillors. A small debt court is held here. The ecclesiastical structures are prominent buildings. First and foremost is the Roman Catholic church with its two spires, the Established church with its crowned tower, the Free and Episcopalian chapels both with elegant spires, besides the U. P. church, a substantial building. The Masonic and Literary Institute, in Cluny place, opened in 1891, was erected at a cost of about £2,000; it contains a council room, reading room, library, museum, billiard room &c. There are two good hotels in the town. The houses generally are of a substantial character, and the North of Scotland Bank Limited, the Town and County Bank Limited and the Union Bank Limited, occupy respectively modern buildings. Besides the fish curing trade there are other industries, including net and rope factories and steam saw mills, and at Inchgower is a large distillery, of which Messrs. Alexander Wilson and Co. are the proprietors. In June, 1893, a public park was presented to the town by Lady Gordon Cathcart. Cairnfield House, the seat of John P. Gordon, and Letterfourie, the seat of Sir Robert G. Gordon bart. are in the vicinity, the latter being the principal landowner. A newspaper, "The Banffshire Advertiser," is published on Thursdays. Rateable value, £13,267; population in 1891, 5,680.

CABRACH parish, part of which was formerly in the county of Aberdeen, is now all included in that of Banff, extending in length 5 miles by about 3 in breadth, 12 miles south-east from Dufftown station on the Great North of Scotland railway and 11 south-west from Kinethmont station on the Inverurie and Huntly branch of the same railway, distant from Aberdeen 45 miles west-north-west and from Huntly 18 south-west. The Buck of Cabrach, a hill 2,368 feet in height, is in this parish. In the parish are an Established church (the register dating from 1731), seating about 300 persons; and the United Presbyterian, erected about 1869, for 200: a tablet was erected in 1876 in memory of James Stewart, of Lesmurdie and Newmill. The Deveron and the Fidditch water this parish. The mountains abound with game. Acreage, 34,103; population in 1881, 682, and in 1891, 646.

CULLEN is a royal burgh, a maritime town and the capital of the parish of its name, 191 miles north-north-east of Edinburgh, 22 east of Elgin, 13 north-east of Fochabers, 14 west of Banff and 6 west of Portsoy. The harbour was erected in 1819, at a cost of £4,000, and has lately undergone extensive improvements. The burgh is situated on a commanding eminence overlooking the Moray Frith. Formerly it consisted of two distinct towns, the Sea Town and the Old Town, but between 1820-30 the latter was wholly removed from its site adjacent to Cullen House to its present position, the church alone remaining. The town, which presents an aspect of neatness, is indebted to the Seafield family for many of its improvements. It has a station on the Great North of Scotland railway, and to the west the line is carried over the town by a series of arches which terminate in a viaduct of eight arches between 70 and 80 feet high, spanning the mouth of Cullen burn, which separates the parishes of Cullen and Rathven. The burgh joins with Banff, Elgin, Inverurie, Kintore and Peterhead in returning a member to Parliament. A justice of the peace small debt court is held on the first Tuesday in every month. The acting magistrates are the provost, two bailies and nine councillors. The Established church is a pre-Reformation building of much interest, with a history dating back upwards of six centuries: it contains numerous ancient monuments and inscriptions in an excellent state of preservation: a fine example of an aumbry, with an appropriate inscription from the Vulgate, graces the north-east wall. There are also Free and United Presbyterian churches, the former built in 1844 and the latter in 1882. In 1876 a Board school was erected at a cost of £2,500. There is a public news-room and library in the town. A fair is held on the third Friday in May. The curing of fish and its exportation is carried on by several of the inhabitants. There are also branches of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the North of Scotland Bank Limited, a brewery and two good hotels.

The Dowager Countess of Seafield is the principal landowner. Cullen House, which by favor of the Dowager Countess of Seafield is thrown open to the public on Tuesdays and Fridays, is an ancient and irregular edifice; the interior is, however, furnished with modern taste, and adorned with paintings by eminent masters: Cullen stream passes under the south walls, and on the opposite side are the park and pleasure grounds, which are connected with the house by an elegant arch of 84 feet span. Not far distant once stood the castle in which Elizabeth, queen of Robert Bruce, died. An eminence, called Castle Hill, at the western extremity of the town, is the site of an ancient fortification, which must formerly have been a place of great strength; an almost perpendicular rock renders it inaccessible from the north, and it is surrounded in every other direction by a deep ditch; vitrified stones have been frequently extracted from beneath the surface. Carvings in stone of the national and other arms, with two small bronze cannons of Queen Mary's time, still remain on the Castle Hill. In the centre of the town is the cross bearing the town's arms—the Virgin and Child; the shaft dates from the days of William and Mary; the main part of the erection is of recent date. The ruins of Findlater Castle, a building of great antiquity, are situated about 2 miles east of Cullen. In 1881 the parish of Cullen, the area of which is 881 acres, rateable value £5,864, had a population of 2,236, and in 1891, 2,319, of which the town contained 2,100.

DUFFTOWN AND MORTLACH.

DUFFTOWN, a village, founded in 1817, was created a police burgh under the "General Police and Improvement (Scotland) Act" in 1863. The burgh is in the parish of Mortlach and is 118 miles north of Edinburgh, 52 north-west of Aberdeen, 30 south-west of Banff, 14 north-east of Inveravon, 10 south-west of Keith and 6 south-east of Aberlour, situated a short way to the north of the old decayed hamlet of Mortlach, near the junction of the Dullan and the Fiddoch waters. It has a station on the Elgin and Keith branch line of the Great North of Scotland railway, via Rothes and Craigellachie Junction. This place is improving in appearance under the auspices of its patrons, the Duke of Fife and the Duke of Richmond and Gordon, the former having in 1881 carried out a thorough system of drainage at a cost of about £700. Streets are being opened up, and a large number of feus have been taken, several of which have been built upon. The burgh is formed with a square in its centre, from which streets diverge from each side. In the centre of the square stands a large square tower of considerable height, with four Gothic turrets at the corners, surmounted with a belfry containing one bell; it was formerly used as a gaol, and contains a good clock with four dials. During the summer months the burgh is much frequented by visitors, on account of its healthy situation and the beautiful scenery in and around its vicinity. There are two hotels, viz. the Fife Arms and the Commercial, the former of long standing. An extensive trade in lime is carried on by the Tininver and Richmond Lime Co. and Mr. James Kemp, Parkmore Lime Works, and there are five distilleries, the Glenfiddich distillery being under the proprietorship of Messrs. William Grant and Sons; the Mortlach-Glenlivet distillery under that of Messrs. George Cowie & Son; the Balvenie distillery, Messrs. W. & J. Grant; the Parkmore distillery of the Parkmore Distillery Co. and the Convalmore distillery of the Convalmore-Glenlivet Distillery Lim. There are two branch banks, viz. the Town and County Bank Limited and the North of Scotland Bank Limited. A commodious Masonic Hall was built in 1887, which is also used for meetings &c. A sheriff court for small debt cases is held four times a year, in January, April, July and October, as fixed by the sheriff. The places of worship comprise a church of the Establishment, which is of very ancient date, restored in 1877 at a cost of £1,500: in 1888 a fine organ was erected at a cost of £700: the building has three fine lancet windows in the east end, and contains several interesting monuments, one being erected in 1420 in memory of a chamberlain of Balvenie Castle, another to a John Gordon, of Brodland, who died in 1433 at Buchromb, also one at the end of the 17th century, interesting as being the monument of an ancestor of the present Duke of Fife: it is asserted that this church was the cathedral of the first Bishopric of Scotland, and the three bishops were buried there, the bishopric being afterwards transferred to Aberdeen. The Free church has a beautiful stained window, presented by Lord Mount Stephen, and a tower surmounted by a steeple were added in 1891, when the church was enlarged and remodelled. There are likewise an Episcopal church, in the Gothic style, erected in 1880 by Canon Jupp, of Aberlour, in memory of his mother, and will seat 135 persons: the east circular window is stained; and a Roman Catholic chapel. The Stephen Cottage Hospital was founded in 1889 by Lord Mount Stephen, of Montreal and London, a native of Dufftown; it is beautifully equipped and contains 10 beds, £2,500 having been expended on its erection; the endowment fund is £5,500, and it is open to the inhabitants of Mortlach and Glenrinnes. The Mortlach Parish Hall, opened in 1894, is a handsome addition to the buildings of the town; it belongs to the parish trust authorities and cost £1,600, which was raised by private subscription and grants from the church authorities; it comprises among other things a public reading room and library: the hall itself will hold 700 people. The parish is famous as the scene of the signal victory gained over the Danes by Malcolm II. in 1010, which was fought a few hundred yards south-west of Balvenie Castle. The district also possesses the ruins of Auchindoun Castle and Balvenie Castle. A cattle market is held on the fourth Thursday of every month, and feeing markets the third Wednesday in May, the second Wednesday in July and the third Wednesday in November. Population of the parish of Mortlach in 1881, 2,934, and in 1891, 2,754, of which Dufftown contained 1,469.

INVERAVON is a parish on the banks of the river Avon, below its junction with the Livet, lying chiefly in Banffshire, a small portion being in the county of Elgin. It has two stations, Ballindalloch and Blacksboat, on the Craigellachie and Boat of Garten branch of the Great North of Scotland railway, and is about 42 miles south-west of Banff, 8 south-west of Aberlour, 22 south-west of Keith, 14 south of Rothes, 22 south-by-west of Fochabers and 22 south of Elgin. The surface is irregular, but is not mountainous, except the lofty region of Ben Rinnes, 2,755 feet, which is mostly in this parish and abounds in grouse. Ballindalloch, the elegant mansion of Sir George M'Pherson Grant D.L., J.P. is pleasantly situated at the confluence of the Avon and Spey. A dilapidated castle is among the remains of antiquity. Cattle markets are held at Inveravon on the 14th of May and 26th of July (also grain and feeing), and at Glenlivet on the fourth Wednesday from October to May inclusive. Acreage, 48,964; population in 1881, 2,568, and in 1891, 2,319, of which Glenlivet contained 1,477.

INVERKEITHNY, a parish in the south-eastern corner of Banffshire, about 10 miles south of Banff, lies on the right or south bank of the Deveron, along which it extends about 6 miles, and measures from one to 4 miles in breadth. Marnock bounds it on the north, Turriff and Auchterless on the east, Forgue on the south and Rothiemay on the west. The district is chiefly hilly. It is in Banff small debt court. Turriff and Huntly, on the Inveramsay and Macduff and the Keith and Inveramsay branches of the Great North of Scotland railway, are the nearest railway stations, both being 9 miles distant. The principal landowners are the trustees of the late John Forbes esq. of Haddo, and Thomas G. Rose Innes esq. of Netherdale. The parish church, built in 1881, is a plain stone building with belfry on the east side, and is built of Moor boulders, harder than granite and Elgin freestone, according to plans prepared by Messrs. Reid, architects, Elgin: it stands on the site of the old church, the belfry of which is placed on the vestry of the new church: there are sittings for 450 persons. Acreage, 7,641; rateable value, £5,424; population in 1881, 909, and in 1891, 826.

Post Office, Inverkeithny; James Walker, postmaster. Letters through Turriff. Delivery, 12.20 p.m.; dispatch, 12.30 p.m. The nearest money order office is at Forgue, 2 miles distant. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid

KEITH is a market and post town and parish, the latter chiefly in the county of Banff, but extending into that of Elgin. The town is 170 miles north of Edinburgh, 22 south-west of Banff, 17 east-south-east of Elgin, 50 north-east of Aberdeen, 60 east of Inverness, 8 south-east of Fochabers, 17 south-south-west of Portsoy and 12 south of Cullen, situate on the banks of the Isla, in the centre of an amphitheatre of hills. The Great North of Scotland railway makes a centre of this town, coming from Aberdeen via Huntly and continuing on by Craigellachie Junction to Elgin and Lossiemouth in the north-west and Boat of Garten in the south, with a branch running north-east from Keith to Portsoy (where it connects with the coast line) and Banff; while the Highland railway runs via Mulben to Elgin, Forres and Nairn (with branches to Fochabers and Burghhead), and has also a line from Keith to Portessie. It is divided into three distinct towns, namely, Old Keith, New Keith and Fife Keith; the latter, erected by the Earl of Fife, is separated from Old and New Keith by the Isla. The old town has declined considerably since the establishment of the new. New Keith was begun about the year 1750 by the Earl of Findlater, upon a barren tract of land, feued off in tenements of 15 yards by 60. It is formed on a regular plan of three parallel streets and a square; in the principal street there are many good shops and hotels. There are no authentic documents to record the origin of Old Keith, but it has certainly existed for over six centuries, and was at one time the county town. The Court of Registry possessed an extensive jurisdiction, including four pleas of the Crown. The last criminal hanged was Gilbert Dallachy, condemned for theft, about 1690. On the banks of the Isla, a little below the town, are the ruins of a castle, which belonged to the Oliphant family. Tradition says that part of the castle was built overhanging a deep pool in the river at the foot of a small waterfall, into which this part fell. The Suit-Roll-Croft, on the banks of the Isla, near Keith, was the gathering-place of the Clan Gordon; Suttrall House, Fife Keith, now marks the gathering-place. Keith was the birth-place of Ferguson, the astronomer. On the Caird's Hill, denoting the "hill of friends," are remains of a Druidical temple, near which several tumuli have been opened, and found to contain various sepulchral remains. Tradition relates that an encounter took place in Old Keith, upwards of 150 years ago, between Mr. Gordon, of Glengerrick, and Peter Roy M'Gregor, the leader of a band of freebooters, who, after a desperate resistance, was defeated, himself taken prisoner, and his gang destroyed. A sheriff court for small debt and debt recovery cases, and for proofs in ordinary actions and other business, is held every alternate month in the Institute Hall. The present Established church, opened in 1819, is an elegant and commodious edifice in modern Gothic style, and will seat 1,800. The Episcopalians, Free Church, United Presbyterians and Roman Catholics have each a place of worship. There are also five public schools. There is also a Public Reading Room and Library, in the former of which the principal daily papers and leading periodicals are taken, while the library contains a number of useful and instructive books; a chess room is attached to the reading room for members. Markets are held on the first and third Saturday in each month, except June and September, when they are held on the third Wednesday, and feeing markets in March, May, July (harvest) and November. Keith was noted for the great animal fair, which lasted a week, about the middle of September. Traders from Glasgow and Dundee, and the south generally, were met there by customers from the northerly parts of the kingdom, including the Orkney Islands. The number of horses and cattle was very great, and even yet the horse market in September is one of the largest in the north. The market stance is at the south end of the town, and is of considerable extent. The extensive manufactory belonging to Messrs. G. & G. Kynoch, for the production of Scotch tweeds, gives employment to a considerable number of hands. In addition there are large flour and meal mills, manure manufactories, two extensive distilleries, agricultural implement manufactory and a brewery in the old town. Three branches of the respective establishments of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the Town and County Bank Limited and the North of Scotland Bank Limited are in operation, the latter having also a branch in Fife Keith. Auchlunkart House, the seat of William F. D. Steuart, is situated in the parish. The Duke of Fife, the Countess of Seafield and William F. D. Steuart, of Auchlunkart, are owners of the manor and the principal landowners. The "Banffshire Herald" is published here. The parish, which embraces an area of 18,195 statute acres, rateable value £27,309, contained in 1881 a population of 6,396, and in 1891, 6,628, of which the town contained 4,622.

Newmill is a village in the parish of Keith, 1½ miles from that town, and with the neighbouring district was erected into a quoad sacra parish in 1867. A church and manse in connection with the Establishment were built in 1870. It has also a Free Church mission hall. Population in 1881, 651, and in 1891, 1,421.

KIRKMICHAEL,

AND THE VILLAGE OF TOMINTOUL.

KIRKMICHAEL is a large parish, occupying the south-western extremity of the county from beyond the mountain of Cairngorm to near the confluence of the Livet with the Avon, a distance of 22 miles by a breadth of from 3 to 6 miles, 12 miles from Abernethy railway station. The Duke of Richmond and Col. John Gordon Smith J.P. of Delnabo, are heritors, and Sir George Macpherson Grant bart. of Ballandalloch, are also the principal landowners. The church of the parish is in Tomintoul, a village in which are also two public schools, and another place of worship for the Established, besides one each for the Free Church and Roman Catholics. The Richmond Arms in the village is an excellent and well-conducted inn and posting-house. The Town and County Bank Limited have a branch here. The area is 75,750 acres; the population of the parish of Kirkmichael was, by the return for 1881, 1,073, and in 1891, 1,043; of this number Tomintoul contained 695.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, Tomintoul; William Meldrum, postmaster. Letters from all parts arrive (by mail coach from Ballindalloch R.S.O. carrying passengers) at 2.55 p.m. & are dispatched at 5.45 a.m

Sub-Post Office, Bridge of Avon; Mrs. Margaret Grant, postmistress. Letters received through Ballindalloch R.S.O. Delivery, 3.55 p.m.; dispatch, 5.20 p.m. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Tomintoul, 2 miles distant

MACDUFF,

CROVIE, AND THE PARISH OF GAMRIE.

MACDUFF is a seaport town in the parish of Gamrie, about a mile east from the town of Banff, on the opposite side of the Deveron river, and on the declivity of a hill descending towards the shore of the North Sea, and has a station on the Turriff and Macduff section of the Great North of Scotland railway; in the small debt court district of Banff. The town, which forms a portion of the parliamentary burgh of Banff, is governed by a provost, bailies and six councillors, and has risen, since the early part of the 18th century, from being little more than the hutage of a few fishermen to a place of respectable size and trade. It is built on the property of the Duke of Fife, whose fine seat is in the neighbourhood; and to a nobleman of this title it is indebted for its chief improvements and prosperity: through his influence it was created a burgh of barony by George III. in 1783, when its name was altered from Doun to its present appellation; it has from that period increased in extent and consequence. The church occupies a conspicuous position on an eminence, and the Duke of Fife has ornamented its precincts with a cross which is highly effective at a little distance. Among the schools is one for poor children of both sexes, called the "Murray Institution," from its having been founded in 1849 by a Mr. Murray, of London, a canvas manufacturer and a native of Macduff: this school has been transferred to the School Board by virtue of a scheme under the provision of the Educational Endowments (Scotland) Act, which also provides for the administration of the funds, which amount to about £6,000. A town hall has been built by voluntary subscription at a cost of £2,100. Macduff harbour is now considered one of the best on the Moray Frith, it having been much improved by the Duke of Fife; as a station for the herring fishery, it is exceedingly valuable, a great supply of that fish being shipped from this port: several vessels trade with the Baltic, the number of fishing boats (which are registered under Banff) is very considerable, and in the curing of fish there are some thriving establishments. There are two branch banks, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the North of Scotland Bank Limited. The greater portion of the grain produced for twenty miles east of Macduff is exported hence, as are salmon, cod and herring, and the country inland is supplied with coal, bone manure and lime, a manure factory being established here. Population of Macduff in 1881, 3,641, and in 1891, 4,164.

The parish of Gamrie extends along the coast, which is precipitous and indented with caverns, about 9 miles, by an average breadth of about 2½. The land is partly under tillage and partly in pasture. Acreage, 17,293; rateable value, £22,187; population of the whole parish in 1891, 7,003.

Crovie is a small fishing village in the parish of Gamrie, situated one mile east of Gardenstown. Macduff is the nearest railway station, 8 miles distant. Population in 1891, 298.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, Duff street, Macduff; Mrs. Isabella Hay Henry, postmistress. Deliveries, 7.30 & 11.55 a.m. & 4 p.m.; dispatches, 5.30 & 9.40 a.m. & 2.45, 3.30 & 4.45 p.m.; saturday only, 10 p.m

Post Office, Dubford; Miss Grace Ingram, postmistress. Letters received through Banff. Deliveries, 9 a.m. & 5.5 p.m.; dispatches, 8.15 a.m. & 3.30 p.m. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Gardenstown, 1¼ miles distant

Post Office, Longmanhill; Lewis Henry, postmaster. Letters received through Banff. Delivery, 4.30 p.m.; dispatch, 8.45 a.m. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Macduff

PORT GORDON is a coast village in the parish of Rathven, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway, about 2 miles west from Buckie, which is the small debt court district. The harbour is commodious, and the greater part is built of Portland cement concrete, at the sole expense of the Duke of Richmond and Gordon. There is a place of worship for the Methodists and also a public school. Its inhabitants are exclusively occupied in fishing and the ship coasting trade; they employ stake and bag nets for the capture of salmon, which are here abundant, being in the immediate vicinage of Speymouth. A narrow rivulet separates this village from Port Tannachy. Rateable value, £1,689; population in 1881, 1,132, and in 1891, 1,255.

PORTSOY AND FORDYCE.

PORTSOY is a seaport in the parish of Fordyce, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway, 178 miles north of Edinburgh, 62 east-by-north of Inverness, 18 east-north-east of Fochabers and 8 west-by-north of Banff, and situated on a tongue of land projecting into the North Sea at the head of one of those little bays by which this part of the coast is in many places indented. It was erected into a burgh of barony about the 16th century by the Baron of Boyne, whose descendants embracing the fortunes of the Pretender in 1715 forfeited their lands to the Crown, and these were subsequently granted to the Earl of Findlater and Seafield, and are still in the possession of that family. The town is small and irregularly built, but, as a port, is in a thriving condition. The point of land on which it stands forms a safe harbour, sufficiently deep for vessels of upwards of 100 tons burthen. The town adopted the General Police and Improvements Act on October 8th, 1889, the number of commissioners being nine, and is in the Banff small debt court district.

The places of worship are a church of the Establishment, erected in 1816, at a cost of £2,000, and restored in 1881; a Free church, built in 1844, at an expense of £1,800, and rebuilt in 1871; an Episcopal church, constructed in 1840, at an expenditure of £2,480; a United Presbyterian church, built in 1866, at a cost of £830; and a church for Roman Catholics, erected in 1828. Board schools were built in 1877, costing £2,848, and in 1887 an additional sum of £497 was expended on them. There is a Christian Institute in the town, in connection with which is a library, available to the members free and to the community at a low charge; the library contains about 1,600 volumes, the various departments being well represented. The port, besides the proceeds of the herring fishery, which has been greatly extended of late years, has a considerable trade in the exportation of grain and the importation of coal. Fish curing and distilling are prominent industries. The stone raised from the quarries of this district (which has obtained the name of "Portsoy marble") is a beautiful mixture of red, green and white accumulations, and is wrought into tea cups, vases and small ornaments, likewise chimney-pieces. Some singular specimens of schistus, and a species of asbestos of a greenish hue are met with in this neighbourhood; but the most remarkable mineral production is a granite, of a buff or flesh colour, which, except here and in Arabia, has not been discovered throughout the world. This district also abounds with excellent limestone. The Dowager Countess of Seafield is the principal landowner. The extensive ruins of the old castles of Boyne and Findlater, lying to the east and west of Portsoy, possess great attractions for the antiquary and pleasure seeker. A weekly newspaper, "The Banffshire Reporter," is published here every Wednesday. Rateable value, £4,569; population in 1881, 2,312, and in 1891, 2,274.

FORDYCE is a parish of great antiquity, about 8 miles west of Banff, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway; the parish is in the small debt court district of Banff. There are Established and Free churches, the first named built in 1806 and the latter in 1843. Large Board schools were erected in 1881-82, at an expense of £1,839, at which there are a number of bursaries, administered by the governors of the County of Banff Bursary Fund, tenable by boys for five years with four years in addition at Aberdeen University. At what was formerly the old parochial school the late Sir James Clark bart. physician in ordinary to Her Majesty, and the late John Forbes esq. physician extraordinary to H.R.H. the Prince Consort, received the early part of their education. The most remarkable remnant of antiquity in the village is a large castellated building, standing on the east side of The Square, and bearing the date of 1592; this originally belonged to the Durn family, but is now the property of the house of Seafield. Acreage of the parish, 17,198; rateable value, £21,953; population in 1881, 4,289, and in 1891, 4,268, of which the village contained 316.

Sandend is a small fishing village in this parish, situated about 3 miles west of Portsoy. The nearest station is Glassaugh, about a mile distant from the village of Fordyce and the same from Sandend.

Post Office, Fordyce; William Thomson, postmaster. Letters received through Portsoy R.S.O. which is also the nearest money order & telegraph office. Delivery, 8.25 a.m.; dispatches, 8.20 a m.&12.35p.m

RATHVEN, a parish, extends about 10 miles along the coast of the Moray Frith, by from 3 to 5 in breadth, with a station on the Keith and Portessie branch of the Highland railway. The greater portion of the land is hilly, but the more level parts near the sea are arable and fertile, being greatly enriched by sea manure, and in some parts there are thriving plantations: it is within Buckie small debt court district. Throughout the district the supply of limestone, sandstone and slate is abundant, and the memorials of antiquity are numerous, the Danish "cairn" being the most general. Acreage, 23,166; rateable value, £36,615; the population of the entire parish of Rathven in 1881 was 11,140, and in 1891, 12,925.

WHITEHILLS AND BOYNDIE.

WHITEHILLS is a village in the parish of Boyndie, 2½ miles west-north-west of Banff, chiefly inhabited by fishermen, and is reached by rail to Ladysbridge or by omnibus from Banff.

Boyndie parish is 2½ miles south-west from Banff, on the Great North of Scotland railway, and is 5 miles long by 2 wide, in the small debt court district of Banff. The Banffshire Lunatic Asylum at Ladysbridge, opened in May, 1865, and the interesting ruins of Boyne Castle are also in this parish. Ladysbridge is a station on the Tillynaught and Banff branch of the Great North of Scotland railway, distant 1½ miles from Whitehills. Acreage of Boyndie parish, 6,945; rateable value, £8,639; population in 1891, of the parish, 2,113, of Whitehills, 1,097.

BERWICK-UPON-TWEED,

WITH SCREMERSTON, SPITTAL AND TWEEDMOUTH.

BERWICK-UPON-TWEED (so denominated to distinguish it from North Berwick, in East Lothian, and several Berwicks in England) is a county of itself (so constituted by 6 and 7 Wm. IV. c. 103), a municipal borough and seaport, union and market town, and head of a county court district, 334 miles north-by-west from London, 64 north-by-west from Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and 49 north from Morpeth; from the city of Edinburgh it is distant 58 miles south-east (by rail), and from Glasgow 103 east-by-south; it is in the Berwick-upon-Tweed division of the county of Northumberland for parliamentary purposes, in the Norhamshire and Islandshire petty sessional division, rural deanery of Norham, archdeaconry of Lindisfarne and diocese of Newcastle. It is a town of considerable importance, of Saxon or Teutonic origin. The etymology of its name is as doubtful as the period of its establishment is obscure. Maitland, the historian of Edinburgh, entered into a dissertation to prove that the title was transferred by the Saxon founders from a town of note of the same name in their own country—in the like manner as European emigrants designate cities and towns on the continent of America; others, and among them Camden, allege that the word Berwick is deduced from "Barwica," signifying "a village belonging to a manor;" while Leland concludes it to be a shortened form of "Aberwic," from the Cymric aber, the mouth of a river, and the Scandinavian wick, a creek or station for ships. Berwick was fortified and defended by a garrison at a very remote period of British history; it became the chief town of the district, and was the centre, on various occasions, of many important transactions. The town stands on a gentle declivity on the north side of the river Tweed, about half a mile from the spot where that stream empties itself into Berwick bay, and is said to have been of importance as a barrier town in the 8th and 9th centuries. Prior to the year 1551, Berwick was alternately in the hands of the English and Scotch, but in pursuance of a treaty effected in that year between Edw. VI. and Mary, Queen of Scots, it was erected into a free burgh or distinct liberty, in some measure independent of either kingdom, having a small district attached to it, called "Berwick bounds," stretching about three miles north, and the like distance up the Tweed, and it is described as a large and populous town so early as the reign of David I. of Scotland (1124-53). It continued in the possession of the Saxons for some ages, and was subsequently held by the Danes. Malcolm II. of Scotland having defeated Eadulf Cudel, Earl of Northumbria, in the year 1018, became possessed of all the Lothians down to the Tweed, after which time Berwick remained in Scotch hands till the reign of Henry II. when it was delivered up to the English as security for the fulfilment of a treaty made in Dec. 1174, between William I. of Scotland, who having joined Henry's three sons in rebellion, was taken prisoner near Alnwick, and conducted in chains before Henry, who obliged him to pay homage for the whole of Scotland, and as a security he was forced to deliver up the fort of Berwick, together with all the principal forts of Scotland. In 1291, 3 Aug. commissioners from both kingdoms, 104 in number, assembled at Berwick to determine the respective claims of Robert Bruce and John Baliol to the Scottish crown, when, after numerous conferences, on the 14th Nov. the king appointed John Baliol successor to the crown.

After the battle of Halidon Hill (1333) the town surrendered to the English, though considered a part of Scotland, and because of its peculiar position has been since specially mentioned in Acts of Parliament affecting England and Wales.

Berwick was but little affected by the conflicts of the Houses of York and Lancaster; on the accession of James VI. of Scotland to the English crown, he made his state entry into England from this town, the importance of which, as a border town, thenceforward declined. Before the Civil war, an agreement, known as "The Pacification of Berwick," was concluded here 17 June, 1639, between Charles I. and 5 Scottish commissioners, for the disbandment of their respective forces, and during the progress of the contest, the town maintained for the most part a neutral attitude. In the risings of 1715 and 1745, the populace sided with the English. Her present Majesty the Queen visited the town on the opening of the railway viaduct, 29 Aug. 1850.

The town is surrounded by regular fortifications, the old line of which extended 2 miles 282 yards; the present walls, built chiefly in 1560, in the time of Queen Elizabeth, are only about one mile and a third in length, and at the present time the ramparts, which are in the custody of the Corporation, form an excellent promenade entirely round the town. The ancient castle, of which only the western curtain with its two towers, remains, occupied a considerable eminence to the north-east of the town, and must have been of great strength. The modern town, well and regularly built, is united to Tweedmouth by a fine bridge of hewn stone, of fifteen spacious and elegant arches; the whole length of the bridge is 1,164 feet, and its width is 17 feet. It was commenced in 1610, in the reign of James I. and finished in 1634, in the reign of Charles I. at a total cost of about £15,000, and is now lighted with gas. About a quarter of a mile higher up the river is the railway viaduct, known as the "Royal Border Bridge," designed by the late Mr. Robert Stephenson and Mr. T. E. Harrison, civil engineers, and opened by Her Majesty and the late Prince Albert on the 29th August, 1850, the total cost being £184,143. This magnificient structure spans the broad valley of the Tweed, and completes an important link in the chain of railway communication between London and Edinburgh by the north-east coast. It forms the northern extremity of the North-Eastern Railway; and in magnitude of construction and grandeur of design is, perhaps, one of the most remarkable architectural achievements of modern times. The foundation stone of this noble structure was laid on the 15th May, 1847, without any public ceremony. The viaduct consists of 28 circular arches, each 61 feet 6 inches span, springing from lofty piers 8 feet 6 inches broad at the narrowest point. One half of the arches span the river—here a broad and beautiful stream—and the remainder are built on the neighbouring land south of the Tweed. The total length of the bridge is 2,152 feet, and its greatest height from the bed of the river 138 feet 6 inches, including the parapets; its breadth between the parapets is 26 feet, allowing a double line of rails to be laid, and the greatest depth of water at high tide is 23 feet. The viaduct is built entirely of stone, with the exception of the inner part of the arches, which is brick laid in cement. The large embankment at the south end of the bridge, five-eighths of a mile in length, and in some places 60 feet high, completes the junction of Tweedmouth with Berwick, and at each of these places there are passenger and goods stations. The pier, begun in 1810 and finished in 1821 at a cost of £61,536, is 960 yards in length, and forms a fine breakwater, with a lighthouse at the extreme end; the pier, combined with Pier road, which extends westward, affords a fine and salubrious promenade.

By an order, gazetted May 30, 1848, the port of Berwick-upon-Tweed was re-limited, and appointed to extend on and after June 1st in that year, from St. Abb's Head, the limit of the port of Leith, and to continue along the coasts of the counties of Berwick and Northumberland to the south side of Alnwater, being the northern limit of the port of Shields; also to include Farne and three smaller islands; and the limits seaward to extend three miles from low water mark out to sea. Fishing boats and their implements are to be distinguished by the letters B.K.

The exportation of coal from the mines in the neighbourhood forms an important feature in the commerce of the port, while that of grain, manure, and salmon caught in the Tweed (the latter sent to the London markets), is nearly equally profitable. The principal fishing stations are from the mouth of the river to Norham, a distance of seven miles. The season commences on the 15th February, and terminates on the 14th September. The port has the privilege of the "Warehousing Act, 1825" (6 Geo. IV.), and is now a bonded port for the reception of wines and colonial produce.

The town appears to have possessed a municipality with a guild from an early period, and James I. in his 2nd year (1604-5) granted to the borough a new charter, extending the privileges of the Corporation, and augmenting the number of its officers, besides giving to it the power of life and death. Under the provisions of the "Municipal Corporations Act, 1835," the government is vested in a mayor, six aldermen, and eighteen councillors, with a recorder and the usual assistant officers, under the style of the "Mayor, Aldermen, and Burgesses of the Borough of Berwick-on-Tweed;" the same Act divided the borough into three wards, and provided it with a commission of the peace; there is also a sheriff. The peculiar power of life and death was abolished by the "Limitation of Jurisdiction of Quarter Sessions Act, 1842." Sessions are held quarterly, presided over by the Recorder, W. T. Greenhow esq.; the corporation, as lords of the manor, hold courts leet and baron twice in the year, and Berwick is included in the first circuit of county court towns under the acts for the recovery of debts. The limits of the borough are defined by the Boundary Act to comprise the parish of Berwick and the respective townships of Tweedmouth and Spittal. The borough was first represented in the English Parliament in the reign of Henry VIII., and from that time (1529) it continued to send two members, until the passing of the "Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885," when it was included in the Berwick-upon-Tweed division of Northumberland, which extends from Felton on the south to Berwick on the north, taking in the whole of the coast from the Coquet to the Tweed, being bounded by the limits of the county on the west. It contains the petty-sessional divisions of Bamburgh, Coquetdale North, Glendale, Norhamshire and Islandshire, Coquetdale East (except the parishes of Gloster Hill, Morwick, Acklington, Acklington Park, Amble, Hauxley, Warkworth and Tongstone), and the municipal borough of Berwick-upon-Tweed.

This place gave the title of duke (March 19, 1687) to James Fitz-James, natural son of King James II.

Up to the year 1310 Berwick was ecclesiastically in the archdeaconry of Lothian and diocese of St. Andrews, but was transferred by Edward II. to Durham, and so continued until 1882, when it became part of the new diocese of Newcastle-on-Tyne, formed by Order in Council, 17 May, 1882, under the "Bishoprics Act, 1878" (41 and 42 Vict. c. 68).

The parish church of the Holy Trinity, begun in 1648, and finished in 1652, is an edifice of stone, in a Pseudo-Italian style, and forms a parallelogram, 90 feet by 64 feet, divided by arcades of five arches into a nave, with aisles of equal length, and on the north side a smaller aisle and large vestry west of it, and a chancel, 23 feet in length: there being no tower, the 4 bells are placed in the bell-tower of the Town Hall. In 1855 it was repaired and enlarged by the addition of a chancel and the interior re-arranged, at a cost of £3,000, and in 1867 was further improved, at a cost of more than £4,000. There are 1,500 sittings. Since the public cemetery in the North road was opened, it is only in rare cases that interments are allowed in the churchyard. The register dates from the year 1572. The benefice is a vicarage, and there is a lectureship belonging to the church, in the gift of the Mercers' Company of London. The Ecclesiastical commissioners are the rectors. The rectorial tithes amount to £2,300 yearly.

St. Mary's church, Castlegate, is a neat stone edifice, erected in 1858, at the expense of the late Captain George Gordon, who presented £3,000 towards its completion, is a building of polished ashlar stone, in the Lancet style, consisting of chancel, nave, transepts, north vestry and a small tower at the south-west angle of the nave, with an octagonal gabled belfry, surmounted by a spire and containing one bell: the lower stage of the tower forms a porch. There are 472 sittings. The register dates from 1859. The living is a vicarage.

The Catholic Church of Our Blessed Lady and St. Cuthbert, in Ravensdown street, is a building of stone, erected in 1829, and has 300 sittings. The other places of worship comprise one of the Church of Scotland; three for the Presbyterian Church of England, that in Wallace green being a very fine building, erected at a cost of nearly £6,000; a United Presbyterian church, Wesleyan, Primitive Methodist and Baptist chapels, a Presbyterian Mission hall and Salvation Army barracks.

The Cemetery, on the Edinburgh road, about 1 mile from the town, comprises about 9 acres, well laid out and planted with evergreens and trees: there are two mortuary chapels, in the Gothic style, and an entrance lodge. The ancient bier removed from the old church is deposited here, and bears the date 1620. The cemetery is under the control of a Burial Board of 9 members.

The Town Hall, which stands in the middle of the east end of High street, was erected in 1754-61, and is a building of stone in the Classic style, approached by an ascent of fifteen steps: above the portico rises a tower, adorned with columns of the Tuscan, Doric and Ionic orders, and surmounted by a spire, the whole reaching a height of 150 feet, and containing an excellent peal of 8 bells, 4 of which are the parish church bells, placed here, owing to there being no tower attached to the church; they are rung before the commencement of each service and the early and curfew bells are still rung daily except on Sundays, at 5 a.m. and 8 p.m.; there is also a clock with 4 dials lighted by gas. The municipal affairs of the borough are transacted here: and the magistrates sit daily for the hearing of petty police cases: the hall in which public meetings are held, and where the recorder holds quarter sessions four times a year, will hold 700 persons. There is also a council chamber, police office and cells to contain 14 prisoners; the ground floor is appropriated to the sale of poultry, eggs and butter.

The Corn Exchange, in Sandgate, is a large and commodious building, erected by a limited liability company, and was opened in June, 1858. Besides being well suited for the purpose for which it was built, it is also available for meetings and entertainments, and is licensed for stage plays. It is well lighted and heated, and will hold 1,500 persons.

The Queen's Rooms, in Hide hill, erected by Mr. J. D. Purves, in 1880, are also used for meetings, entertainments &c. The large hall (with gallery) will hold 1,000 persons.

The Literary Institute, Art School and Museum, in High street, is a very substantial building, erected in 1881, at a cost of £2,000. It contains reading rooms, museum of natural history of the district, and a school of art.

The Masonic Hall, situate on the Parade, and erected in 1873, is a handsome building of stone, and in Coxon's lane is the Good Templars' Hall, built in 1874, and seating 600.

There are Subscription Reading Rooms, with a billiard room in Palace green; numerous clubs and political associations, and an Athletic Society.

The Dispensary and Infirmary, on the Low Greens, was first instituted in 1814; the present building was erected in 1874, and is supported by voluntary contributions; it is available for 16 in-patients, and in 1892 there were 75 in and 360 out patients.

The Local Charities for pensions and distribution, amount to about £150 yearly.

At Berwick is the depot of the 25th Regimental District (King's Own Scottish Borderers), comprising 1st and 2nd battalions (25th foot), with the Scottish Borderers Militia as the 3rd battalion, which is stationed at Dumfries.

Berwick is also the head quarters of the Northumberland Artillery Militia, and at Ravensdowne are the head quarters of the 1st Berwick-on-Tweed Artillery Volunteers.

The Barracks, on the Parade, near the walls on the east side of the town, were erected in the year 1719, and form a handsome pile of buildings arranged so as to form a quadrangle, 217 by 121 feet; the principal or north front, includes the officers' quarters, mess-room and guard-room; and the remaining portions afford room for 240 men. In 1893 additional buildings were erected on the King's Bastion for ten married soldiers with families.

The Artillery Drill Hall, in Ravensdowne, built in 1891, is an edifice of stone, with a tower of two storeys; the hall is 82 feet long by 53 wide, and 16 feet high, and there are mess and other rooms attached.

The Coastguard station, entered from and on rising ground above the Pier road, to the south-east of the town, was erected in 1879, and has a life-saving apparatus (the property of the Board of Trade) and two boats, one being a life whaler; there is a staff of one officer and six men.

The educational establishments of Berwick are the Grammar School, the Corporation Academy (for the children of freemen solely, the salaries of the rector and teacher and all other expenses being paid by the Corporation), and National, British, and Roman Catholic schools; besides these there are a few conducted privately.

The banks here are the British Linen Co. Bank, Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, North Eastern Banking Co. Limited and Messrs. Woods & Co. of Newcastle, all in Hide hill; National Bank of Scotland Limited, Bridge end; and the Berwick and Tweedmouth Savings Bank, Sandgate.

There are three good hotels—the King's Arms, in Hide hill, the Red Lion, in High street, and the Station hotel, by the North-Eastern station, Tweedmouth, all of which are complete and comfortable establishments.

The Maclagan Memorial, in High street, is an ornamental drinking fountain erected in 1893 to Philip W. Maclagan esq. M.D.

Berwick can scarcely be said to possess any staple trade except the salmon fisheries. Here are two breweries, the cycle factory of Messrs. Joseph Devey & Co. and seed crushing works carried on by the executors of the late Mr. Matthew Young; sail, rope and sack making and fish curing are also carried on.

The Corn Market, at the foot of Hide hill, near to Sandgate, is a spacious building of stone, in the Gothic style, opened in June, 1858, and is licensed for stage plays; the market, held on Saturday, is well attended.

There is an auction mart in the Magdalen fields and near the station, the property of a limited company. Messrs. John Embleton & Son are the present lessees and hold sales every alternate Monday.

The fish market, which is in general abundantly supplied, is held in the centre of the High street, facing the Town Hall. Salmon, cod, whiting, haddocks, lobsters and crabs are the principal fish caught near here.

The cattle market, in Castlegate, was opened in October, 1886, and markets are held every Saturday; there is also an annual fair, for cattle and horses, on the last Friday in May.

The March hirings for farm servants are held on the 1st Saturday in March.

Six newspapers are published here.

The rateable value is £62,893. The population of the municipal and local board district was in 1881, 13,995, and in 1891, 13,347, showing a decrease in ten years of 648.

TWEEDMOUTH is a populous parish and township, now form'n part of the borough of Berwick. It is situated at the south end of the bridge, about a quarter of a mile from Berwick, and consists of several streets irregularly built, but the general appearance of the place has been much improved of late years. The North-Eastern stations for both goods and passengers are at the eastern end of the town. The inhabitants are extensively engaged in the salmon fishery; and the other branches of trade, exports and imports, are of the like nature with those of Berwick. There are works for the manufacture of agricultural implements and engineering and boiler works, large timber and saw mills and boat building yards, which provide employment for a fair proportion of the inhabitants. Fish curing is also carried on. The Corporation of Berwick, who are lords of the manor of Tweedmouth, and Robert W. Ramsey esq. are the principal landowners. The dock, opened 4th October, 1876, admits vessels up to 500 tons burthen, and has an area of 3½ acres, and a depth of 21 ft.; the cost of construction was about £35,000. There is railway communication from Tweedmouth station to the dock by a branch of the North-Eastern Railway. The parish church of St. Bartholomew, rebuilt in 1783, and enlarged in 1866, is an edifice of stone, consisting of chancel, with vestry, nave, north transept, and a western tower with one bell: there are 350 sittings. The living is a vicarage. There is also an English Presbyterian church, and one connected with the Church of Scotland. Population included with that of Berwick. The rateable value, including Spittal, is £50,568. The cemetery, covering 9 acres, was formed in 1857; it has two mortuary chapels, and is managed by a Burial Board of 9 members.

Ord, a widely scattered locality here, was in 1891 constituted a separate parish for civil purposes, and comprises the village of East Ord, and the hamlets of Middle and West Ord.

SPITTAL, which derives its name from an ancient hospital once existing here, is a township, parish and populous village, about three-quarters of a mile from Berwick, and is situated at the mouth of the river. The curing of herrings is largely carried on, and there is also a spade and shovel manufactory, and extensive manure works. The gas works for the borough of Berwick are in this parish, and belong to a limited company; the waterworks are also situated here. Many good houses have been built for the accommodation of visitors who resort hither for seabathing. There is also a valuable mineral spa, the waters of which contain iron, lime, magnesia, and sulphate of soda. During 1894 a substantial sea-wall of concrete, about half a mile in length, was constructed. A steamboat and several ferry boats ply frequently between Berwick and Spittal during the summer season. The church of St. John the Evangelist, consecrated in 1871, is a building of stone in the Gothic style, comprising chancel, nave and south aisle, and seats 350 persons. There is also a Presbyterian Church of England, a United Presbyterian church, a meeting house for Christians, and a Mission hall and British and National schools. The Public hall was erected by the Good Templars in 1885, and will seat 500 persons.

Scremerston is a scattered village, in the civil parish of Ancroft, and was formed into an ecclesiastical parish, 14 Sep. 1844, in the county of Northumberland, 3½ miles south-south-east from Berwick, its post town. Here are the extensive collieries, lime and brick works of the Scremerston Coal Co. Limited. The church of St. Peter, erected in 1842-3, is a building of stone in the Gothic style, and has a tower with spire, containing one bell. The living is a vicarage. There is also a Primitive Methodist chapel and a National school. The Lords of the Admiralty are lords of the manor and the principal landowners.

BERWICKSHIRE

Occupies the south-east angle of Scotland, lying along the river Tweed, which on the south divides it from Roxburghshire, and on the south-east from Northumberland; in shape it is somewhat of a pentagon, the other three sides being its east coast, which runs due north from the town of Berwick-on-Tweed to Eyemouth, where it turns to the west for a few miles, afterwards continuing its course north to St. Abb's Head, from which point it runs north-west to Cockburnspath, where it joins Haddingtonshire, which county bounds its fourth or north side, the fifth, the west, being bounded by Edinburghshire and Selkirkshire. The coast has no prominent harbours or sea lochs or any large bays; the county measures 34 miles from east to west and 23 from north to south, and comprises 294,805 acres, or 460 square miles. In 1891 it had a population of 15,444 males and 16,962 females; total, 32,406, against 35,392 in 1881, and had in 1891, 6,837 inhabited houses, against 7,103 in 1881. In point of size Berwick ranks as the nineteenth Scottish county, and in population as the twenty-fourth.

Early History.—At the period of the Roman invasion Berwickshire was inhabited by tribes of British called "Otadinii;" and it was subsequently overrun by bands of Saxons, who engrafted their language and manners on those of the original inhabitants. The conquests by these foreigners extended a considerable way along the shores to the east and west; and in the course of time they gave the land of which they thus possessed themselves the title of Lothian, which it still retains in the western division. The entire area of Berwickshire was comprised in this Saxon territory, which was distinguished by the name of "Saxonia," superseding its previous designation "Bernicio." Until the year 1020, this district of country was included within the kingdom of Northumberland; in that year it was ceded to King Malcolm II. by Cospatrick, Earl of Northumberland, who settled in Scotland and was created Earl of Dunbar. About the beginning of the eleventh century, many Norman and Anglo-Saxon families settled in Berwickshire, as well as other parts of Scotland. It is recorded as a fact that at Berwick-on-Tweed originated those laws which were framed and applied in Scotland for the regulation of burghs and their guild associations. Lying on the main route from England, Berwickshire suffered in the succeeding centuries in all the wars between the two hostile nations, and was occasionally involved in jurisdictional disputes with its ecclesiastical neighbour, the Palatine Bishop of Durham, and Berwick and the bridges across the Tweed were in general the main objects of contention. From the variety of successes and disasters which Berwickshire underwent for so many centuries, and from its successive occupation by different mixed nations, the people of this part of North Britain have not that distinct Scottish character so directly recognised in places more distant from the frontier. By their language and personal appearance, especially the former, the inhabitants of Berwick and its neighbourhood are easily particularised, and, in common with the Northumbrians, they speak with that remarkable "burr" which is found nowhere else in the kingdom. The "Men of Merse" distinguished themselves at Flodden and other bloody fields, under the command of Lord Home; and there is a tradition that a party, led to the Holy Land by some of their feudal chiefs, obtained on its ensanguined plains the highest honours for their unconquerable intrepidity. When Charles I. paid his first visit to Scotland, in the year 1633, Lord Home met him at Berwick with a train of 600 Merse gentlemen "gallantly arrayed" on horseback.

Surface, Soil &c.—Berwickshire is divided into three districts, namely Merse, Lammermoor (or Lammermuir), and Lauderdale. The Merse, so called from the word "march," or boundary, is the largest and most valuable district, occasionally giving name to the whole county, and embracing that tract of low land between the Lammermoor hills on the north and the river Tweed on the south, having Lauderdale for its western boundary. It is the most compact and extensive piece of level ground in Scotland, comprising 130,000 statute acres; in appearance it resembles a wide-spread portion of some of the English fertile counties, and is well enclosed and furnished with trees and plantations. Lammermoor, which consists of nearly 90,000 statute acres, is a highly pastoral district, with generally a wild, brown aspect, and runs on the northern border of the Merse, so as to divide the vales of Edinburgh and Haddington shires from the valley of the Tweed. The district of Lauderdale, which has received this title from the Leader water, along whose bank it ranges, is a mixture of hill and dale, the land in the valleys being essentially arable; this portion of the county contains about 67,000 statute acres.

The mountains, which lie mostly in the north-west of the county, none of them reach 2,000 feet above sea level, the highest being Crib Law, 1,670 feet; Blythe Edge, 1,521; Collie Law, 1,286; Riddel Law, 1,270 and Dun Law, 1,292.

Produce, Minerals, Manufactures &c.—Within the last century very great exertions have been made to improve the agricultural character of the county, and in this respect it differs nothing from the neighbouring territory of East Lothian. The chief crops are barley, 20,524 acres; oats, 35,030; turnips, 28,058; hay, 12,616; potatoes, 2,180; the total corn crops being 58,405 acres and green crops, 31,724; land under grass, 102,076; permanent pasture, 41,965. Total area of land and water, 293,946 acres. The live stock in 1894 comprised, horses, 5,751; cattle, 17,570; sheep, 296,548 and pigs, 4,001. The exports of Berwickshire consist of corn, sheep and eggs; and these, indeed, may be considered as the extent of its commerce. Minerals do not exist in sufficient quantity to be of great benefit, although some coal exists in the vicinity of Berwick, and in the parishes of Mordington and Cockburnspath; and limestone is, almost consequently, found in its proximity. Marl and gypsum have likewise been raised, and freestone and whinstone of various kinds exist in several parts of the shire. The county is strictly pastoral and agricultural. Manufactures as yet have made little or no progress within its borders; what is connected with this system of industry finds its chief seat at the town of Berwick, on the borders. Paper is made at Chirnside Bridge, and the manufacture of woollens is carried on at Earlston and Cumledge. The herring fishery, which is pursued at Eyemouth and other ports, is a profitable industry, as is also the curing of this fish.

Rivers & Railways.—The rivers mostly flow from north-west to south; the Leader, Eden, Langton and the Black and White Adder all flow into the Tweed, while the Eye debouches into the North Sea at Eyemouth. The Tweed is a large river, but it is not capable of navigation; it is, however, of great value from its salmon fisheries, which are under a strict system of water police. The Eden, which runs southwards from Lammermoor, has a remarkable fall, near the house of Newton Don, of about forty feet, exhibiting a fine appearance when there is a flood. It is a peculiarity of the Blackadder that no salmon can live in it; if any happen to enter they are said to die in a few days, though they are caught plentifully in the Whitadder, which also abounds with trout &c. The North British railway has the control of the lines in the county, entering it from the town of Berwick-on-Tweed, and passing north to Burnmouth, where it turns westward and north-west to Reston, whence there is a branch line running south-west through Edrom, Langton and Greenlaw to Earlston, and thence to St. Boswells; the main line continuing on through Cockburnspath to Dunbar and Edinburgh; the southern and south-eastern portion of the county is supplied by the North-Eastern railway, on the English side of the border, running via Norham, Coldstream and Kelso.

Divisions and Representation.—Berwickshire comprehends (exclusive of Berwick town) thirty-one parishes and two parts of parishes; and thirty-four ecclesiastical parishes, forming the Presbyteries of Duns, Chirnside and Earlston, in the synod of Merse and Teviotdale, and contains one royal burgh, Lauder, which until under the Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885, joined with Haddington, Dunbar, North Berwick and Jedburgh in returning one member to parliament, but was then merged in the county, which is represented by one member in parliament. The parliamentary constituency for 1894-5 was 5,509. The valuation of the county for 1894-5 was (exclusive of railways) £295,192, and the valuation of railways, £20,411.

ABBEY SAINT BATHANS is a parish, situated in the midst of the Lammermoor hills, 7 miles north-north-west from Duns, and 5 from Grant's House, the nearest railway station, on the east coast route of the North British railway, in the Duns small debts court district. The soil is light and dry, and on the banks of the Whitadder, fertile and well cultivated; but the hilly district is barren and covered with heath. There is an Established church here. In this parish are the remains of an ancient abbey of Bernardines, founded in 1170, and dedicated to St. Bathan. Edwin's, or Wodin's, about a mile below St. Bathans, on the Whitadder, consists of three concentric circles of stone, seven and ten feet distant from each other, the diameter of the innermost circle being about 20 feet. George Gillon Turnbull esq. W.S. is lord of the manor, and owns most of the land. The parish has an area of 4,797 acres; rateable value, £2,314 5s. 6d.; the population in 1891 was 163, and in 1881, 200.

AYTON is a parish and village, 2½ miles south-west from Eyemouth, and 8 north-west from Berwick; the village occupies a delightful situation on the left bank of the Eye, and has a station about ¼ mile distant, on the main line of the North British railway. It is lighted with gas from works the property of a company. A justice of the peace court is held here monthly, and a sheriff's court for the recovery of small debts four times a year. The Established church was erected in 1864-5, at a cost of about £7,000, near to the old fabric, then in a dilapidated state, and is an edifice in the English Gothic style of the 14th century, with a lofty tower, and affords nearly 800 sittings. There are also two United Presbyterian churches. In the parish are various remains of ancient encampments, and urns and fragments of armour have been occasionally brought to the surface by the plough. Ayton Castle, to the east of the village, held a distinguished place during the border wars, but was demolished by Thomas, Earl of Surrey, in 1497; it is now the residence of Charles E. Galbraith esq Balabraes is the residence of Sir Walter Grindlay Simpson bart. The principal landowners are Henry Liddell-Grainger esq. of Belford, Northumb. Lord Tweedmouth, Hon. James Archibald Douglas-Home D.L. and Daniel Grant. The parish has an area of 6,699 acres; rateable value, £16,611 17s. 3d.; the population was in 1891, 1,827, and in 1881, 2,039; the village had 653 in 1891 and 771 in 1881.

BUNKLE (anciently "Bonkyll") and PRESTON form a parish in the Duns small debt court district, about 4 miles north-north-east from Duns station, and the same from Reston station, both on the North British railway. During the 13th and 14th centuries the lands in the parish of Bonkill were held by a family of the same name, and by marriage descended to Sir John Steward. The soil on the high lands towards the Lammermoor hills was at one time thin, dry and poor, but by the application of lime and marl it has been much improved. The rest of the parish, particularly on the banks of the Whitadder, is a fertile loam, and well cultivated. The Earl of Home, who is lord of the manor, Col. David Milne-Home R.H.G. of Paxton House, Berwick-on-Tweed, and Edwin Robert John Sandys-Lumsdaine esq. J.P. of Blanerne, are the principal landowners. Area of the parish 9,189 acres; rateable value, £9,192; population in 1891, 672, and in 1881, 726.

BURNMOUTH (or Ross and Burnmouth) is a small fishing village in the parish of Ayton, with a station on the North British railway, and about 2½ miles from Ayton and 6 from Berwick, and is situated on a harbour at the foot of an almost perpendicular ledge of rock. The heights in the vicinity afford very beautiful and varied scenery, extending to the Elldons on the south, Lammermoor on the west, and Bamborough on the east; here is a coastguard station. A number of boats are employed here for herring fishing, and others of a larger class are employed for white fishing in the winter season. There is no place of worship.

Ross is a conjoint village with Burnmouth, but in the parish of Mordington. The population of Ross and Burnmouth was returned 324 in 1891, and 371 in 1881.

CHANNELKIRK is a parish, situated among the Lammermoor hills, 5½ miles from Fountainhall station on the North British railway, in the small debt court district of Lauder and Kelso poor law combination. The parish is traversed by several rivulets, which unitedly form the river Leader, or Lauder, but the hills are mostly covered with heath, and are very bleak and unproductive.

Uxston, now called Oxton, about 4 miles north-north-west from Lauder, on the south of the Edinburgh road and in the upper part of the vale of the Leader, is now the only village in the parish of Channelkirk, the village of that name, about 2 miles west of Oxton, being now represented only by the church and the manse belonging to it. Area of the parish, about 14,191 acres; rateable value, £5,290; population in 1891 515, and in 1881, 607.

CHIRNSIDE is a parish in the small debt court district of Ayton, and in Kelso poor combination, lying to the east of the Merse and on the north side of the Whitadder, and extending 4 miles in length, by about 3 in breadth. The village, situated on an eminence affording extensive views, is 50 miles east-by-south from Edinburgh, 13½ north-north-east from Greenlaw, 9 north-west from Berwick and 6 north-east from Duns and has a station 1 mile distant, on the North British Railway; it consists of two streets, the buildings of which are for the most part detached and straggling, and extend nearly a mile in length, but in the upper part of the village are several good stone houses; an excellent supply of water is brought from about a mile distant. There is a reading room and library and a children's mission hall. Besides a church of the Establishment there are United Presbyterian and Free churches. The estate of Ninewells, the family seat of the Humes, is in this neighbourhood, and David Hume, the celebrated historian, though born in Edinburgh, 26 April, 1711, was from his infancy brought up in this parish; the mansion is at present occupied by Harold John Tennant esq. M.P. In this locality are some remains of ancient encampments. Harold M. Innes esq. who is lord of the manor, and Lord Tweedmouth are the principal landowners. Area, 5,553 acres; the rateable value is £11,336 5s. 9d.; the population in 1891 was 1,459, including 854 in the village, and in 1881 was 1,516, with 939 in the village.

Chirnside Bridge is a hamlet about 1 mile west, and here the Whitadder stream is crossed by a good bridge and also by a stone viaduct carrying the railway. On the banks of the river a species of gypsum is found, and in other parts of the district marl is obtained abundantly. Chirnside railway station is situated in this hamlet.

COCKBURNSPATH is a parish and village on the sea coast, in the Dunbar small debt court district and East Lothian poor combination, with a station on the North British railway, and is 35½ miles east from Edinburgh, 21 north from Greenlaw, 14 north from Duns, 8 south-east from Dunbar and 21 north-west from Berwick, on the road between Berwick and Dunbar. The shore is precipitous, presenting a line of cliffs about one hundred feet above the level of the sea; behind the cliffs the ground rises gently towards the hills, having many deep glens, or ravines, whose sides are sometimes sloping and covered with verdure; but the general appearance is rocky, with overhanging woods; one of these ravines is crossed by the Peaths, or Pease bridge, erected in 1786, from the design of Mr. Henderson; it is 123 feet in height from the bottom of the Pease burn, which flows beneath, 300 feet in length and 15 feet wide. The public hall, erected in 1883-4, will seat 200 persons. The ruins of the church of Auld Cambus, formerly united with this parish, are still standing. In the village are Established and Free churches and there is a United Presbyterian church at Stockbridge, about a mile south. Nearly a quarter of a mile west of the bridge are the remains of an ancient castle and many traces of camps are visible on the rising grounds. Fisher's Cove is a small fishing village about a mile north and consisting of some fifteen or twenty houses, and on the way down to the small boat harbour is a curious tunnelled passage, with branching caves extending a considerable way into the rock. This village suffered a terrible disaster in the storm of October, 1881, when of the twenty-one fishermen who put to sea in the morning eleven perished. Sir Basil F. Hall bart. D.L. of Dunglass and Thomas Broadwood esq. J.P. of Crawhill, Dunbar, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 12,652 acres; rateable value, £10,612; population of the parish in 1891, 1,112, and in 1881, 1,130.

OLDINGHAM is a parish and village in the small debt court district of Eyemouth and in Kelso poor combination; the parish is 10 miles in length and 5 in breadth, lying on the coast of Berwickshire and is bounded on the north and east by the German Ocean and is much resorted to for sea bathing The village, a burgh of barony, is 45 miles south-east of Edinburgh, 21 north-north-east of Greenlaw, 17 south-east of Dunbar, 13 north-north-east of Duns, 11 north-north-west of Berwick, 4 north-north-west from Ayton and about 3 miles from Reston station on the North British railway; it stands on a small eminence in the centre of a fine valley, a short distance from the sea and near to St. Abb's Head, where a lighthouse was erected in 1862, and subsequently a building for fog signalling, and consists of two of three small streets, meeting at a cross. The hall formerly used by the volunteers is now let for public meetings and entertainments. The Established church incorporates part of the fabric of the priory church; it was altered and restored in 1857 and affords 500 sittings; there is also a United Presbyterian church. St. Abb's is a village in this parish. Coldingham Loch, about a mile west from St. Abb's and 250 feet above the sea level, is triangular in form and upwards of a mile in circumference and covers about 30 acres. On the top of Earnsneugh, 440 yards north of the loch, are the ruins of two oblong British camps, called the Tunlaw, or Townlaw. Fast Castle, in this neighbourhood, is supposed to be the place described as Wolf's Craig, in Sir Walter Scott's "Bride of Lammermoor." On the south side of the town stand the ruins of the once magnificent priory of Coldingham, rebuilt by King Edgar, who personally assisted at its consecration. All that now remains of it is the east gable and north side of the church, forming part of the modern parish kirk and a few straggling fragments, including a small Saxon arch, part of the palace said to have been erected here by the royal founder of the priory. A nunnery was settled here in the 7th century, of which St. Ebba, the daughter and sister of kings, became abbess in 670. The principal landowners are John Allan, of Peelwalls, Ayton; the Right Hon. A. J. Balfour P.C., M.P. of Whittinghame; Robert Fitzroy Bell, of Templehall; the trustees of the late Walter Carter, of West Reston Mains; Miss Conlon, of Houndwood; Mrs. Turnbull Cookson, of Houndwood; Mrs. Isabella Cameron Bell, of Abbey park; Sir Basil Francis Hall bart. D.L. of Dunglass; Col. David Milne-Home R.H.G. of Wedderburn and Billie, the Earl of Home and the North British Railway Co. The area of the parish comprises 24,021 acres; rateable value, £29,542; the population was, in 1891, 2,946, and in 1881, 3,173, that of the village being 492 in 1891, and 572 in 1881.

COLDSTREAM.

COLDSTREAM, anciently called Lennel, is a burgh of barony and parish on the north bank of the Tweed and in Kelso poor combination; the town is 1½ mile from Cornhill station on the Kelso branch of the North Eastern railway, 47 miles south-east from Edinburgh, 14 south-south-west from Berwick, 10 south-east from Greenlaw, the like distance south from Duns, and 9 north-east from Kelso. The streets are in general spacious and well paved and contain many good houses and the town is lighted with gas, and supplied with water from works erected in 1852 by the late Sir John Marjoribanks bart. of Lees, within his grounds. The Tweed is crossed about 220 yards east of the town by a bridge of freestone, erected in 1766, at a cost of about £7,000, from the plans of Mr. John Smeaton, the famous engineer, and the designer, in 1759, of the former Eddystone lighthouse. It consists of seven arches, including two for abutments, and is 305 feet long and 25 feet wide. In 1830 it underwent a thorough repair at a cost of about £2,000. From this bridge a very delightful view is afforded, both up and down the river. The town is governed by the commissioners of police for the burgh. The justice of peace courts are held as occasion requires, and sheriff small debt courts four times a year. The Town Hall is in the High Street; there is also a Library; a Working Men's Club and a Mechanics' Institution, erected in High street, in 1863, at a cost of £1,200, and containing a large lecture room, library, reading rooms &c. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland and of the British Linen Co.'s Bank. There are Established, Free and United Presbyterian churches, and a meeting house for the Catholic Apostolic community. In the Market place stands a fountain, erected by the late Sir John Marjoribanks bart. in connection with the waterworks, and near the church is an obelisk, erected by the inhabitants as a memorial to the donor of the water supply, who died in 1884, when his baronetcy became extinct. At the east end of the town is a memorial, erected by the friends of the late Charles Marjoribanks esq. sometime M.P. for Berwickshire, to record the successful result of the contested election for the county in 1832. The Tweed bridge occupies the site of an ancient ford, by which Edward I. entered Scotland with his forces in 1296; it was generally used during the Border wars both by the English and Scottish forces, and last by a Scottish army in 1640, when the Scots crossed the border by this means, Aug. 20, in their advance against Charles I. This neighbourhood is the scene of most of the incidents in Sir Walter Scott's "Marmion," and here was raised in 1660, by Gen. Monk, the famous regiment, still known as the "Coldstream Guards," and now forming the 2nd regiment of Foot Guards. During the winter season Coldstream is much resorted to by the nobility and gentry for foxhunting; the Duke of Buccleuch's and the Berwickshire and East Lothian packs meet regularly in the neighbourhood. South-west of the town is the beautiful house and pleasure grounds of Lees, the seat of Charlotte, Lady Marjoribanks, and to the north-west is The Hirsel, the seat of the Earl of Home D.L., J.P.; Stainrigg House is the residence of Gen. John Cockburn-Hood C.B., D.L., J.P. The principal landowners are the Earl of Home, the Earl of Haddington, Miss Milne Home, of Milne Graden, George John Marjoribanks esq. and Charlotte Lady Marjoribanks. The area of the parish comprises 8,320 acres; rateable value, £17,856; the population in 1891 being 2,388, including 1,535 in the burgh and 2,561 in 1881, with 1,616 in the burgh.

CUMLEDGE, see DUNS.

DUNS, OR DUNSE.

DUNS (or Dunse) is a parish and burgh of barony, in Kelso poor combination, with a station about half a mile east on the North British railway, and is 45 miles east-by-south from Edinburgh, 15 west from Berwick, 11 south-west from Ayton, and 8 north-north-east from Greenlaw. The present town is built on a fine plain, under the southern slope of Duns Law, upon which hill the old town, destroyed by fire, formerly stood; the plain of Duns, 25 miles long, is encompassed on three sides by the Lammermoor ridge, and the river Whitadder, which produces the finest trout, flows past it. Duns Law, at the back of the town, rises to the height of about 500 feet, and the scenery from its summit is strikingly beautiful.

Duns is a place of great antiquity; but from its situation near the border, it was frequently subject to irruptions by the English, and on one of these occasions the town records were burnt, and its early history lost. The present town is generally well built, and is lighted with gas, and supplied with water by local companies. The town is governed by a chief magistrate and commissioners under the General Police and Improvement Act, 1862, and the Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892; the feuars manage, by a council of nine, the property vested in them, and a sheriff, small debt and debts recovery court is held eight times in the year, viz. the last Friday in January, February, March, May, June and November, the second Friday in July and the first Friday in October, at which debt claims of limited amount are adjudicated; the ordinary sheriff court is also held every Friday, except during the vacations, which are regulated by the Sheriff Court Act. The trade is chiefly in flour and grain, but rope making is also carried on. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, and the British Linen Company's Bank. The Town Hall, standing in the centre of the market place, was originally founded by the Earl of Moray, but the present hall, a building in the Gothic style, was erected in 1816 by the feuars, assisted by subscriptions. The Corn Exchange and the County buildings are both in Newtown street; the latter, which also contains the police station, was considerably enlarged in 1895, and here the courts are held. There is a Public Library and a Working Men's Institute. The 2nd Vol. Batt. K. O. S. B. have their head-quarters here, and a fine drill hall was erected in Langtongate in 1894, at a cost of £2,500, and a detachment of the A squadron Lothians and Berwickshire Yeomanry Cavalry is also stationed here. The parish church, burnt down in February, 1879, was rebuilt on a larger scale by the heritors of the parish, at a cost of upwards of £4,000, and re-opened in December, 1880. There is also a Free church, two belonging to the United Presbyterians, an Episcopalian church and a Roman Catholic church, and there are two hotels, viz. the White Swan and the Black Bull. The weekly market on Tuesday and the fairs for sheep, cattle &c. are now nearly if not quite obsolete. A sale by auction is held every alternate Monday for cattle by Messrs. R. G. and W. B. Swan, and is well attended. A fair for hiring servants is held the first Tuesday in March, and single hirings are held on the first Tuesday in May and November. The fine public park was formed in 1895; the land was presented to the town by Mr. Smith, of Whitchester, and the expense of laying it out has been wholly defrayed by Sir James Percy Miller bart. of Manderstone. Duns Castle, a fine modern mansion, in the castellated style, stands about half a mile north-west of the town. The ancient edifice was erected about 1320 by Thomas Randolph, 1st Earl of Moray, the nephew and co-patriot of Bruce, but is now the seat of Robert Hay esq.; it was restored and considerably enlarged in 1820 by its then proprietor, Colonel Hay, and contains some fine paintings, including many saved from the Seton gallery, and in particular the well-known family group representing George, 5th Baron Seton, the attached friend of Queen Mary, surrounded by his family, as also several portraits of the Stuarts, presented by the exiled Royal family to an ancestor of Mr. Hay. The learned and celebrated metaphysician and theologist, Joannes Duns Scotus, was born here about 1265, and died at Cologne 8th Nov. 1308. The Rev. Thomas Boston, author of "Human Nature in its Fourfold State," and other works, was born here, 7th March, 1676; d. 20th May, 1732; Abraham Robertson LL.D. professor of astronomy at Oxford and Thomas M'Crie D.D.Edin. were likewise born here. Robert Hay esq. of Duns Castle, who is lord of the manor, Colonel David Milne Home, late R.H.G. of Wedderburn, Sir James Percy Miller bart. D.L., J.P. of Manderston, and Mrs. Robert M. G. Baillie Hamilton, of Langton, are the chief landowners. The area comprises 11,396 acres; rateable value, £24,103 6s. 7d.; the population in 1891 was 3,137, including 2,198 in the town, and in 1881, 3,353, with 2,437 in the town.

At Cumledge, about 2 miles north from Duns, a hamlet in that parish, there is a large steam and water mill for the manufacture of blankets and plaidings.

EARLSTON.

EARLSTON (anciently "Ercildoun") is a parish and village, with a station on the North British railway, 31 miles south-east from Edinburgh, 11 west-by-north from Kelso, 18 south-west from Duns, 15 north from Jedburgh, 10 south-west from Greenlaw, 8½ north-east from Galashiels and 7 south from Lauder, in Kelso poor combination and the small debt court of Lauder. The village is seated in a rich valley encompassed by hills of a moderate height, interspersed with thriving plantations; the Leader river flows on the west of the parish, and the Eden on the east. The manufacture of woollens and ginghams is carried on here, and the latter have a high reputation for excellence of quality. At the west end of the village, on the bank of the Leader, are the ruins of an old tower, once the residence of Sir Thomas Learmouth, commonly called "the Rhymer," who flourished in the 13th century. A stone in the wall of the church bears the following inscription in ancient characters, "Auld Rhymer's race lies in this place." Cowdenknowes, the residence of Colonel Charles Hope J.P. is an ancient building, standing on the side of a hill. Carolside, the seat of the Right Hon. Lord Reay G.C.I.E. is in this parish. There are two fairs—on the 29th of June and the third Thursday in October, for cattle and horses, and a cattle and sheep market and also a corn market every alternate Monday. Redpath is a village in this parish. The area comprises 9,968 acres; rateable value, £11,368; the population in 1891 was 1,784, including 1,060 in the village, and in 1881, 1,767, with 1,010 in the village.

ECCLES is a parish and village, 6½ miles from Kelso station (the nearest) on the North Eastern railway, nearly 6 miles north-west from Coldstream, in Kelso poor combination; the parish is nearly 8 miles in length by 6 in breadth, lying to the west of Coldstream, and bordering the river Tweed. The surface of the country is in general level; the soil is rich and the grounds are well enclosed. Antonshill, the residence of James Hunter esq. J.P. is in this parish. There was once a nunnery here of considerable size. "Deadriggs," on Crosshall Farm, in this district, was formerly the scene of a battle, and a stone which rises nine feet above the surface of the ground is said to mark the grave of one of the Percys, who fell in the contest. The area comprises 12,418 acres; rateable value, £19,000; the population was in 1891, 1,446, and in 1881, 1,546.

Birgham, formerly called Brigham, from a bridge once existing here, is a small village in this parish, 3 miles south-east of Eccles village.

Leitholm is a small village in this parish, 4 miles north-west from Coldstream. There is a United Presbyterian church, and also a Board school in the village.

EYEMOUTH is an ancient seaport and burgh of barony and a parish, with a terminal station on a branch of the North British railway, and is 50 miles east from Edinburgh, 21 north-east from Greenlaw, 21 south-east from Dunbar, 20 north from Coldstream and 8 north-north-west from Berwick, on the estuary of the Eye. It was known as a port as early as the reign of Alexander II. (1214-49). Shipping can work into and out of the bay at all times of the tide, or lie at anchor in the haven secure from all winds except the north and north-east, or when the passage cannot be effected up the Frith of Forth. The herring fishery is a source of profitable employment to the greater part of the inhabitants, there being 96 boats employed during the season. The annual produce of the fishing amounts to about £40,000. The trustees of the harbour obtained the sum of £25,000 from the Public Works Loan Commissioners for improvements of the harbour, completed in 1887, and a further sum of £10,000 has been advanced by the Fishery Board of Scotland for the improvement of the entrance. The port was added to the Berwick-on-Tweed Customs port in August, 1847. The St. Abb's Lodge of Master Masons and the Land o' Cakes Royal Arch Chapter hold their meetings here in a lodge room established in 1757; it was in this room that Burns, the poet, was made a Royal Arch Mason. Fairs are held on the first Thursdays of June and October. The head quarters of the 1st Berwickshire Volunteer Artillery, which consists only of one company, are in this town. On a small promontory on the coast here are the remains of a regular fortification, supposed to have been constructed by a French officer entrusted with the command of the troops of the Queen Regent. The principal landowners are Col. David Milne-Home, late R.H.G. of Wedderburn and Billie, Mangus Sanderson and Mrs. Margaret Mickle, of Hallydown. The area comprises 1,004 acres; rateable value, £8,426; the population in 1891 was 2,670, including 2,576 in the town, and in 1881, 2,935, with 2,825 in the town.

FOGO is a parish and village, to the south of that of Polwarth, in the small debt court district of Greenlaw and 3½ miles distant from Greenlaw station on the North British railway; the parish is intersected and watered by the Blackadder, upon the right bank of which the village stands, and about a mile further up the river is the ancient hamlet of Chesters, occupying the site of a Roman encampment. The parish is 6 miles in length by between 3 and 4 in breadth, and the land is chiefly arable and fertile. The Established church here is an edifice of some interest, and contains in the Harcase aisle part of a pre-Reformation tombstone. Major-General Henry Trotter D.L. of Charter Hall, who is lord of the manor, and the Hon. Mrs. Askew-Robertson, of Ladykirk; Sir John Home Purves bart. and Colonel David Milne-Home R.H.G. of Wedderburn, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 4,652 acres; rateable value, £5,899 5s. 1d.; the population in 1891 was 420, and in 1881, 468.

The nearest post town is at Greenlaw, 3½ miles distant

GORDON is a parish and village, in Kelso poor combination and in the small debt court district of Duns, 5 miles south-west from Greenlaw, on the road from Edinburgh to Kelso, and about a quarter of a mile from Gordon station on the North British railway. The river Eden intersects the parish, which extends 7 miles in length by from 2 to 4 in breadth. Huntly and Huntlywood, the names of two farms in the parish, each claim the honour of giving the title of Marquess and Earl to the Gordon family, until 1836 Dukes of Gordon. Greenknowe Tower, a venerable structure (now the property of the representatives of the late James Dalrymple esq.), was frequently used in ancient times by the inhabitants as a place of refuge from incursions of the English. There is a small library containing about 300 volumes, supported by subscription. Arthur Newton esq. who is lord of the manor, and the Earl of Haddington are the principal land owners. The area comprises 9,713 acres; rateable value, £9,691; the population in 1891 was 843, and in 1881, 832.

GREENLAW is a burgh of barony, parish and town, in Kelso poor combination, with a station on the North British railway, and is 37 miles south-east from Edinburgh, 20 west from Berwick, 12 east from Lauder, 7½ south-west from Duns and 10 north-west from Coldstream. It is situated in a valley, on the north bank of the Blackadder, which is here crossed by two bridges; the town consists of one long street, with a large square or green, where the fairs are held. Old Greenlaw was one mile to the south, but of this place no traces now remain. Greenlaw was constituted the head burgh of the county by a royal charter, granted in 1596, and confirmed by Act of Parliament in 1696. A sheriff court and one for the recovery of small debts are held monthly; the justices' court sits at Duns. The county buildings, standing in the Market square, were erected in 1831, and presented to the shire by the late Sir W. H. Campbell. The parish of Greenlaw lies in the centre of the Merse, extending 7 or 8 miles in length, from north to south, and on an average about 2 miles in breadth. The surface of the land is for the most part level, rising occasionally into slight detached eminences. Sheep walks, moor, and soil adapted to turnips are the main characteristics of the land. Sir John Home Purves bart. who is lord of the manor; Frank B. Marjoribanks esq. of Rowchester; James Nisbet, of Lambden, and William Bromfield esq. of Greenlaw, are the principal landowners. Area, about 12,149 acres; rateable value, £9,843; the population in 1891 was 1,110, including 669 in the burgh, and 1,245 in 1881, with 744 in the burgh.

HOUNDWOOD is a quoad sacra parish and district forming the southern portion of the large civil parish of Coldingham, and contains the villages Reston, Auchencrow and Grant's House; it is bounded on the north by the Berwick and Dunbar section of the North British railway and has stations at Reston and Grant's House.

Reston is a village pleasantly situated on the banks of the Eye, in the parish of Coldingham, 3 miles south from Coldingham village, and about 9 north-east from Duns with a station on the North British railway and junction of the line to St. Boswells. Live stock sales are held every alternate Monday. Population in 1881, 321.

Auchencrow is a village lying between Reston and Chirnside and about 2½ miles from each place. The nearest railway station is Reston Junction, 2½ miles distant, on the North British railway.

Grant's House is a village or hamlet in the parish and on the road to Edinburgh, with a station on the North British railway, and is 7 miles from Coldingham, 8 from Ayton, and 5 from Cockburnspath. The place derives its name from a person named Grant, the contractor for making the high road to Edinburgh, who erected a cottage for himself, now called Grant's House Inn. There is a Free church here, opened in March, 1888.

The population of the ecclesiastical parish was 1,360 in 1891.

HUME is a small village, 3 miles south from Greenlaw, and is a portion of a parish which with Stitchel (Roxburghshire) forms a joint, civil and ecclesiastical parish; it is in the small debt court district of Greenlaw. The remains of Hume Castle, a noted fortress during the border wars, stand on a bold eminence commanding extensive and picturesque views over the greater portion of the Merse and Roxburghshire. The soil is very rich and fertile and in a high state of cultivation. There is a burial ground in the village, but no place of worship, the church being at Stitchel. The nearest railway station is Greenlaw, 3 miles distant. The lord of the manor is Sir John Home-Purves bart. who also owns most of the land, with the repres. of the late George Alexander Baird. The area of the parish comprises 6,898 acres (4,099 in this county and 2,799 in Roxburghshire); rateable value, £4,330; the population of the entire parish was 680 in 1891, including 366 in this county, and 749 in 1901, with 407 in this county.

HUTTON is a parish and village, in the district of Merse, and in Kelso poor combination and small debt court district, to the west of Berwick bounds, from which the parish is divided by the river Whitadder; the village is situate about 7 miles west from Berwick, the nearest station, which is on the North Eastern railway. The Tweed, which bounds the parish on the south, is here crossed by an elegant suspension bridge known as "The Union Bridge," and the only one between Coldstream and Berwick. The Rev. P. Redpath, the erudite translator of Boethius, and author of the "Border History," was at one time minister of this parish. James Macbraie esq. J.P. is lord of the manor, and Col. David Milne Home R.H.G. of Wedderburn and Paxton, Lord Tweedmouth and William C. Lundie esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 5,516 acres; the rateable value is £8,406; the population in 1891 was 815, and in 1881, 962.

Paxton is a small village in this parish, 5 miles from Berwick; it contains a reading room and library of about 900 volumes.

LADYKIRK, anciently called "Upsettlington," is a parish and village in Kelso poor combination and the small debts court district of Duns, with a railway station at Norham, about 1½ miles distant, on the North Eastern system; the soil of the district, which is naturally good, has been greatly enriched by careful cultivation, and the parish is celebrated for its breeds of cattle and sheep; the parish lies on the north bank of the Tweed, with that of Hutton on the north-east and Whitsome and Swinton on the west, and it has a breadth of from one to two miles; a stone bridge, constructed at the expense of the Tweed Bridges Trust, here spans the Tweed between Ladykirk and Norham. The church, a venerable building, standing near the Tweed, is said to have been erected by James (1488-1513) in gratitude for his preservation from the violence of the flood when fording the river here at the head of his army, and dedicated by him to "Our Lady;" hence it was denominated "Ladykirk," a name subsequently extended to the village. In the village stands an elegant and substantial fountain given by Lady Marjoribanks, in commemoration of the fiftieth year of Her Majesty's reign, 1887. The small village of Horndean belongs to this parish. An annual fair is held in Ladykirk on the 5th of April. Ladykirk House is the seat of Watson Askew-Robertson esq. D.L., J.P. The Hon. Mrs. Askew-Robertson, James Richardson Black esq. J.P. of Cheswick, Northumberland and Alex. Wellwood esq. of Rathay, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 3,380 acres; rateable value, £5,016; the population in 1891 was 339, and in 1881, 438.

LANGTON is a parish in the small debt court district of Duns, and in Kelso poor combination and contains the village of Gavinton, which is 2 miles south-west from Duns station, on the North British railway, and half a mile south of the site of the old village of Langton, which has entirely disappeared; the present village, which is regular in its form, obtained its name from Mr. Gavin, the late proprietor of the Langton estate. The parish church, locally in Gavinton, and standing on an eminence, has a tower with spire, and was restored in 1873, at a cost of about £2,000; there is also a Free church. Langton House, which has been rebuilt, is a mansion in the baronial style, and is the seat of the Hon. Mrs. Robert M. G. Baillie-Hamilton. Upon the top of the hill called Raecleaughead are the vestiges of an ancient British camp. The Hon. Mrs. Robert M. G. Baillie-Hamilton, of Langton, is lady of the manor and the chief landowner. The area comprises 7,180 acres; rateable value, £6,062; the population in 1891 was 417, and in 1881, 505.

LAUDER.

LAUDER is an ancient royal burgh and the capital of the district of Lauderdale, and a parish, in Kelso poor combination, 6 miles from Stow station and 7 from Earlston station, both on the North British railway, 25 south-east of Edinburgh, 35 west of Berwick, 21 north of Jedburgh, 22 south-west of Coldstream, 20 south-west of Duns, 17 south-west of Kelso and 12 west of Greenlaw. The town is situated in the vale of the Leader, on the main road from Edinburgh to Kelso, and consists principally of a single thoroughfare, at the west end of which is the town house, and it is lighted with gas by a company. The charter constituting Lauder a royal burgh was renewed in 1502, and the government vested in two bailies and seven councillors, chosen annually from amongst the freemen of the burgh. A justice of the peace court is held as occasion requires, and sheriff small debt courts on the last Wednesday of February, first Wednesday of July, and on the Saturday before the first Monday of October. By the Reform Act of 1832, Lauder was joined with Haddington, Dunbar, North Berwick and Jedburgh in returning one member to Parliament, but, under the provisions of the "Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885" (48 and 49 Vict. c. 23), the representation has been merged in that of the county. The trade is chiefly local and domestic, and there is a branch here of the Bank of Scotland. The principal inns are the Black Bull and the Eagle. The Established church, a cruciform building standing on the south of the town house, was erected in 1673, when John (Maitland), first and only Duke of Lauderdale, removed the more ancient church from the vicinity of his residence. Thirlstane Castle, a massive and spacious mansion, surrounded by a park and some fine woods, is the seat of the Earl of Lauderdale; the castle, which stands between the Leader and the town, on a fine lawn, is fitted and decorated in the style of the time of Charles II., and contains a number of elaborately carved marble chimney-pieces and a collection of valuable paintings, chiefly portraits. The parish of Lauder contains 34,898 acres; rateable value, £14,474; the population in 1891 was 1,588, including 763 in the royal burgh, and in 1881 was 1,940, including 1,014 in the burgh.

MERTOUN is a parish in Berwickshire, abutting on Roxburghshire and extending 6 miles along the banks of the Tweed, and is in Jedburgh poor combination and in Duns small debt court district. Clintmains is a small village in the parish, and about 2 miles from St. Boswells village, and 3 from St. Boswells station, on the North British railway. The parish church and manse are locally in Clintmains. The famour ruins of Dryburgh Abbey, situated in this parish, are much frequented by touriste as being the burial place of Sir Walter Scott, who was here interred 26 Sept. 1832. There was a monastic house here in the 6th century, but the later structure was built during the period 1150-52, by Hugh de Maville, constable of Scotland, and Beatrice his wife, for Premonstratensian, or White Canons, and was colonized from the abbey of St. Mary, at Alnwick: the original Norman is intermixed with Early English and Early Decorated work, and there remain portions of the cruciform church, the chapter house, the chapel of St. Modanus, and fragments of the domestic buildings, including a fine gable of the refectory. At a short distance from the abbey is a temple of the Ionic order, built by David, 11th Earl of Buchan, about 1817; it contains a statue of Apollo, and surmounting the dome is a bust of James Thomson, the author of the "Seasons," who was born at Ednam in 1700; here also is a colossal statue of Sir William Wallace, erected by Lord Buchan. Lord Polwarth D.L., J.P. of Mertoun House, is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The area comprises 6,374 acres; rateable value, £7,187; the population in 1891 was 622, and in 1881, 682.

MORDINGTON is a parish and village in the south-eastern part of the county, and about 1 mile from Foulden. In the mansion house here, Cromwell established his quarters on passing the Tweed for the first time. At Lamberton, on the boundary of the parish and within the liberties of Berwick, is a hamlet in which, but within the Scottish border, marriages were solemnized in the same summary manner, and on precisely the same principles, as at Gretna. Edrington Castle is the name given to a camp situate on the top of a steep rock; on the "Witches' Know," an eminence 649 feet in height, several unfortunate women were burned for witchcraft in the last century. Ironstone has been discovered in the parish, and coal on the estate of Robert Charles Campbell Renton esq. J.P., D.L. who is lord of the manor and also the chief landowner, of Mordington House. The area comprises 2,939 acres; rateable value, £4,637; the population in 1891 was 3,244 and in 1881, 367.

POLWARTH is a parish and village, in the district of Merse and in the small debts court district of Greenlaw; the village is 1½ miles from Marchmont on the North British railway, 40 south-east from Edinburgh, 4 south-west from Duns, and about 3½ north-east from Greenlaw, on the road between Greenlaw and Edinburgh. On the green of Polwarth, in the centre of the village, it was an ancient custom for every newly-married pair, with their company, to dance round an old thorn. This place now gives the title of baron to the Hepburne-Scott family. The parish church, an ancient building, stands about a mile south-east of the village, and on the front is a Latin inscription, affirming that it was erected anterior to the year 900. In a vault below the church Sir Patrick Hume, or Home, of Polwarth, created in 1697 Earl of Marchmont, and sometime Chancellor of Scotland, found an asylum from the fury of his persecutors, when a price was set upon his head, till arrangements were made for his escape to Holland. The estate of Polwarth formerly belonged to Sinclair, of Hermandston, whose family, so far back as the 15th century, terminated in two coheiresses, who married two brothers of the Home family, and the lands of Polwarth were then divided between the two Homes. The mansion, together with the estate, is now the property of Sir John Home-Purves bart. who is lord of the manor and the chief landowner. Area, about 3,000 acres; rateable value is £2,910 5s. 4d.; the population in 1891 was 203, and in 1881, 227.

SWINTON is a parish to which that of Simprim was united in 1761; it is in the district of Merse, and in the Duns small debts court district; the parish is intersected by the small river Leet, near to which stands the village of Swinton, which is 6 miles from Duns (the nearest) station, on the North British railway; about 45 miles south-east of Edinburgh, 12 south-west of Berwick and 6 north from Coldstream. There is a Free Library in the village. Simprim is a small village in the south-east part of the parish. The celebrated Rev. Thomas Boston, author of "Human Nature in its Fourfold State," and a native of Duns (1676) was for some time minister of Simprim. The principal landowners are John McNab, Major-General Cecil Robert St. John Ives R.H.G., D.L., J.P. of Moyns park, Essex; Major-General Henry Trotter D.L. of Charter hall, Duns; the representatives of the late Lord Marjoribanks (d. 1873) and William Fairbairn. The area of the parish comprises 5,561 acres; rateable value, £8,000; the population in 1891 was 847, and in 1881, 964, the village having 371 in 1891, and 434 in 1881.

WESTRUTHER is a parish and small village chiefly in the Lammermoor district, in Melrose poor combination and in the small debt court district of Duns; the village is 5 miles from Gordon station on the North British railway, 32 south-east from Edinburgh, 8 north-east from Lauder and 6 west-by-north from Greenlaw, on the road between Lauder and Duns. Spottiswoode, the fine residence of Lady Alicia Douglas-Montagu-Spottiswoode-Scott, is in this parish, and Wedderlie, the seat of Lord Blantyre, is in the neighbourhood. At the north-eastern extremity of the parish stand the ruins of Ively Castle, one of those castellated mansions of residence and defence common on the borders before the Union. Houndslow is a straggling village in this parish. The land in the vicinity is of a barren nature, but has been greatly improved by cultivation. The area comprises 14,630 acres; rateable value, £7,596; the population in 1891 was 615, and in 1881, 671.

BUTESHIRE.

BUTESHIRE is composed of the islands of Bute, Arran, Great and Little Cumbray (or Cumbrae), Holy Isle, Pladda, and Inch-Marnoch, covering 217 square miles of land, or 139,432 acres. In point of size it ranks as the twenty-ninth, and in population as the thirtieth of Scotch counties. Though far separated from the properly denominated Western Islands, those of Bute statistically constitute a portion of the Hebrides. Bute, the most northerly of the islands, lies in a bay formed by the lower end of the district of Cowal, Argyllshire, from which it is separated by the narrow straits known as the Kyles of Bute, its southern part lying between the northern portions of Ayrshire and Cantire. Arran occupies the southern part of the Firth of Clyde, south-west of Bute and opposite to the east coast of Cantire, from which it is divided by the Kilbrennan sound; the Greater and Lesser Cumbrae lie between the island of Bute and the coast of Ayr. Inch-Marnoch is off the west coast of Bute and Holy Island and Pladda off the coast of Arran. The coast line is for the most part rocky, and has comparatively few harbours. The population of the county in 1891 consisted of 8,211 males and 10,193 females; total, 18,404, and in 1881 of 17,657; the inhabited houses in 1891 were 4,001 and in 1881, 3,870.

Early History.—The islands formed part of the Norwegian kingdom until 1263, when Alexander III. recovered these islands and Ayrshire from Haco, whom he defeated at the battle of Largs. Robert Bruce came to Arran from Ireland previous to his descent on Ayrshire. Robert II. created his eldest son Duke of Rothesay and James II. conferred Arran with the title of Earl on his favourite Lord Boyd, and afterwards transferred it to Sir James Hamilton, his daughter's second husband. Bute gives the title of Marquess to the family of Stuart, a branch of the royal family of Scotland. The Marquess of Bute is descended in a direct line from Sir John Stuart, a son of Robert II., who by his father's grant became possessed of the island of Bute, with the heritable jurisdiction of the county, in which he was confirmed by a charter of his brother, Robert III. The family was elevated to an earldom in the person of Sir James, a privy councillor of Queen Anne, in 1703. The island of Bute at one time contained ten or twelve parish churches, and about thirty hermitages of religious men; the island has now but three parishes, and the shire altogether only seven. The soil is chiefly red sandstone and trap, the former showing along the coast, where it is surrounded by a belt of gravel.

The climate of Buteshire is eminently salubrious; neither mists nor noxious fogs, so prevalent in the east of Scotland, infest it; snow rarely lies on the hills, and the only qualification to its general genial character is a liability to severe and sudden rains. In the interior, in a secluded situation, the celebrated tragedian, Edmund Kean, erected a cottage, to which he purposed retiring from public life. The view of the island from the sea is enlivened by several other cottages on the different green declivities. Bute has for many years been the place of summer resort, for sea-bathing.

The interior of Arran has a lofty chain of hills, but Bute is more flat in surface.

The chief crops are oats, 5,141 acres; turnips, 1,551; potatoes, 979 and barley, 126; the total corn crops being 5,429 acres, and green crops, 2,589 acres; land under grass, 17,458 acres; permanent pasture, 8,227; total area of land and water, 140,307 acres, of which 53,315 acres are mountain and heath. The live stock in 1894 comprised 1,395 horses; 9,619 cattle; 53,146 sheep and 958 pigs. There are no minerals worked in the shire. Some portion of the inhabitants are employed in fishery 107 boats, equal 252 tons, and employing 245 hands, being registered at the port of Rothesay, but the pursuits are mainly pastoral.

The rivers are none of them of any magnitude, the largest being the Iorsa and Machry in Arran, both debouching on the west coast, after a course of 5 or 6 miles; the principal fresh water lochs are Loch Fad in Bute and Lochs Iorsa and Tanna in Arran; there are no railways, but there is regular communication by steamer with Glasgow.

The shire comprises 6 parishes, and part of one (Ardrossan), of which the other part is in Ayrshire, and there are 9 ecclesiastical parishes; there is only one town, the Royal burgh of Rothesay. The parliamentary representation consists of one member for the county. The parliamentary constituency for 1891 was 3,251. The valuation of the county for 1894-5, exclusive of the burgh of Rothesay, was £67,647.

THE ISLE OF ARRAN is divided into two parishes, Kilbride and Kilmory; it embraces an area of 106,084 statute acres; and contained in 1891 a population of 4,824, and in 1881, 4,730. Arran is lofty and brown, with many mountains, some of which exceed 3,000 feet in altitude. A small portion of the lower grounds are cultivated, but the whole is essentially and characteristically pastoral. There are several remarkable caves; that on the west, opposite to Campbelltown, called "the King's Cave," afforded shelter to Robert Bruce before he discomfited Baliol and ascended the throne of Scotland; it is 120 feet in length, 60 in height and 48 in width. The island is noted for its herring fishery, but this industry is pursued by only a comparatively small portion of the inhabitants, and chiefly at the north end. The staple industry of the island is agriculture, which, under the care of the Arran Farmers' Society, which holds annual ploughing matches, cattle shows &c. has attained to a degree of comparative excellence. The majority of the inhabitants are occupiers of small plots of land, but a considerable moiety have holdings rented at from about £400 to £800. The smaller tenants find house letting a ready source of income during the summer season. As a summer resort the island is held in high reputation, as, besides possessing a highly salubrious climate it presents ample opportunities for boating, sea and trout fishing, botanical and geological researches and kindred outdoor pursuits. All the streams, many of which afford tolerably good sport to the careful angler, are free to all comers, except two in the neighbourhood of Dubhgharadh Shooting Lodge. Game is abundant, being scrupulously preserved by the Duke of Hamilton, but excursionists are allowed to ramble and prosecution for trespass is unknown on the island. A good road runs along the shore for the whole circuit of the island, a distance of 55½ miles, and two roads run across from shore to shore—one from Lagg to Lamlash and the other from Shiskine to Brodick; of the shore road 24 miles are within the limits of Kilbride parish, and the remaining 31½ miles within Kilmory parish. Plantations of considerable extent and growth, created by the Duke of Hamilton, form a special feature of attraction in various localities, the beautiful and wooded glen of Lagg, in Kilmory parish, and other sequestered spots, presenting a combination of varied and attractive scenery. The island is copiously watered by the numerous streams issuing on either side from the great rocky range extending from north to south. The parish of Kilbride occupies rather less than one half of the island, on the east side, extending 19 miles in length, by a breadth of from four to six. This parish, and others of the same name, derived their designation from Saint Bride, or Bridget, a saint whose fame extended over the whole of Britain. The ruins of the old church of Kilbride still remain, but the present church is locally in Lamlash, a village in this parish. The parish church was erected in 1874, and rebuilt in 1885 at the cost of the late Duke of Hamilton K.T. Lamlash Bay is one of the best in the west of Scotland, and affords a secure anchorage to vessels driven by stress of weather from the Irish Channel. The haven forms a natural basin, protected by the rocky islet of Holy Island lying at its mouth. The village lies on the inner side of the bay, and has a good inn, called the Lamlash Hotel. In the parish are some tall monoliths, which are supposed to be fragments of Druidical circles. Fairs are held here in the months of April and October. The area comprises 38,985 acres; rateable value, £12,191; the population in 1891 was 2,331, and in 1881, 2,176.

Brodick is a village and a quoad sacra parish, separated for ecclesiastical purposes from that of Kilbride. A new pier has been erected, and in the village is a good family hotel, built by the Duke of Hamilton and facing the pier; it has spacious grounds, and affords a splendid view of Brodick Bay, Goatfell mountain (3,000 feet), and Glenrosa, together with the coasts of Ayrshire and Argyleshire. Brodick Castle, the seat of the Duchess of Hamilton, stands on a rocky bank, which rises from the north side of the bay. This bank forms a part of a peninsular elevation, or shoulder, projecting from the base of Goatfell mountain. The Duke of Hamilton is superior of the island. Fairs are held at Brodick on the first Tuesday after the 20th of June. The population in 1891 was 1,055.

The parish of Kilmory ("Cill Muire," i.e. "Mary's Church,") occupies fully more than half the island of Arran on its western side. The land in this parish is extremely productive. Dairy produce is abundant, and fair crops are obtained from large fields well laid out with good fences. The hills are of moderate height, and so accessible to culture that every spot is convertible to use. The church was a few years ago stripped and re-built by the Duke of Hamilton, at a cost of £1,300. There is a good inn called the Lagg Hotel. The Island of Pladdu, which lies off the south of Arran, and has a lighthouse on it, is in this parish. Area of the parish comprises 67,099 acres; rateable value, £13,030; the population in 1891 was 2,519, and in 1881, 2,586.

ASCOG, see ISLE OF BUTE.

THE ISLE OF BUTE.

THE ISLE OF BUTE consists of the parishes of Kingarth, North Bute and Rothesay, in the latter of which is the royal burgh of Rothesay, the capital of the island and county; the island lies south of the main portion of Argyllshire, a little below the mouth of the Clyde, and is bounded on its eastern side and southern point by the Firth of Clyde, on the west by the mouth of Loch Fyne; the length of the island is about 18 and its breadth averages 5 miles. Towards Cowal it is bleak and mountainous, but in the southern parts it consists of green fertile eminences or low hills, either affording excellent pasture, or capable of being cultivated, so as to produce fine crops of barley, oats &c. The parish of Kingarth occupies the southern and south-eastern portion of the island, and extends about 9 miles from north to south, by 4 in breadth; it is in the small debt court district of Rothesay and contains the village of Kilchattan and the hamlets of Ascog, Kerrycroy and Kingarth. Mount Stuart, about 5 miles south-east of Rothesay and 4 north from Kilchattan, is the seat of the Marquess of Bute K.T., who is the principal landowner.

Kilchattan, or Kilchattan Bay, is a village, beautifully situated on a bay, in the parish of Kingarth and in the Rothesay small debt court district, about 8 miles south of Rothesay. The parish church of Kingarth was built in 1826 and has sittings for 450 persons. Half a mile from the east shore are the remains of a Druidical circle, and towards the west shore, and also near the north-east shore of the bay, are several other interesting Druidical remains. In the neighbourhood of Kilchattan is the curious promontory of Garrochhead; about a mile to the south of this, in a quiet romantic dell, stand the remains of the church, or chapel of St. Blane.

Ascog, situated on a fine bay, about 3 miles south-east from Rothesay and in the parish of Kingarth, contains many elegant mansions and villas, and on a point of rock jutting out into the water stands a Free church, in the burial ground of which rest the remains of the painter, Montague Stanley. At the extreme south end of the island, above Dunnagoil Bay, 1 mile south-west from St. Blane's chapel, there stands an extensive vitrified fort.

Kerrycroy is a hamlet 4 miles south-east from Rothesay, pleasantly situated on Scoulag Bay, the village forming a crescent round the strand. The entrance to Mount Stuart policies commences here, and between the village and Ascog is a Board school.

The area of the parish comprises 8,995 acres; rateable value, £10,050; the population in 1801 was 1,061, and in 1881, 1,256; these figures include 340 in 1891, and 343 in 1881 in the village of Kilchattan.

NORTH BUTE. This parish occupies the northern portion of the island, bounded by the Kyles of Bute, and extends 7 miles from north to south, by 3 to 4 in breadth; it contains the village of Kamesburgh, or Port Bannatyne, and the hamlet of Kilpatrick, and also the small island of Inch Marnock.

Kamesburgh, commonly called Port Bannatyne, is a fish curing station, port and village, in the parish of North Bute, and 2¼ miles north from Rothesay. The port possesses a small quay and pier, and there are several furnished houses, occupied principally by families who make this place summer retreat. Half a mile distant is the ancient castle of Kames, the property of the Marquis of Bute. The church of North Bute, nearly a mile west, was erected in 1836 at a cost of £1,000, defrayed by the late Marquis of Bute; and there is also a Free church, erected in 1843. St. Ninian's chapel of ease, in connection with the Established church, was opened in July, 1886, at a cost of about £5,000. The Marquess of Bute is the principal landowner. The area of the parish comprises 14,756 acres; rateable value, £14,140; the population in 1891 was 1,385, including 753 in Port Bannatyne, and in 1881 was 1,218, with 651 in the port.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, Port Bannatyne; Miss Mary M'Ounn, postmistress. Letters received through Rothesay. Deliveries, 8.30 & 11.30 a.m. & 7.15 p.m.; dispatches, 9.50 a.m. & 1.25, 3.25, 5.25 & 8.50 a.m

NORTH BUTE, see ISLE OF BUTE.

THE ISLES OF CUMBRAE.

THE ISLES OF GREAT AND LITTLE CUMBRAE. These islands lie off the coast of Ayrshire, in the Firth of Clyde, between the parishes of West Kilbride in Ayrshire and Kingarth in the island of Bute; the greater island comprises the parish of Cumbrae, while the lesser is in that part of the parish of Ardrossan which is included in Buteshire. Millport, in Cumbrae parish, is a burgh, constituted in 1864, under the Act 23 and 24 Vic., cap.96. It is chiefly resorted to for sea bathing, being charmingly situated on the south side of the greater Cumbrae, about 4 miles from Largs, in Ayrshire, between which town, as well as with Greenock and Glasgow, communication is maintained by means of a regular service of steamers. There is an excellent harbour here and a good pier, affording complete facilities for the landing or embarkation of passengers. The village is lighted with gas, and is governed by commissioners and a senior and two junior magistrates. A sheriff and small debts court is held in March and September. The Established church here is plain in style, but has a fine square tower. The Episcopal church and attached college, situated on an eminence overlooking the town and bay, were founded and endowed by the Earl of Glasgow, and opened in 1850-51; the college is not now used as such, the students attending at Edinburgh. Pleasantly situated on the shore is a beautiful marine pavilion, in the Pointed style, belonging to the Marquis of Bute. The inhabitants of these isles are chiefly fishermen and owners of their own boats. Some parts of the greater Cumbrae are well cultivated, and here and there may be seen some thriving plantations. On the western side of the lesser Cumbrae is a lighthouse. The greater island of Cumbrae belongs to the Marquis of Bute K.T.; the smaller island is the property of the Earl of Eglinton and Winton. The area of Cumbrae parish comprises 2,841 acres; rateable value, £15,960; the population in 1891 was 1,785, including 1,668 in the burgh of Millport, and in 1881 was 1,856, with 1,749 in the burgh. The area of Little Cumbrae (part of Ardrossan parish) is 673 acres; rateable value, £ ; the population in 1891 being 17, and in 1881, 23.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, 9 Guildford street, Millport (Railway Sub-Office. Letters should have R.S.O. Buteshire added); Mary Cunningham, postmistress. Deliveries, 10 a.m. & 1 & 7 p.m.; dispatches, 8 a.m. & 2.5, 4.5 & 6.45 p.m

KILCHATTAN, see ISLE OF BUTE (Kingarth).

KINGARTH, see ISLE OF BUTE.

PORT BANNATYNE (KAMESBURGH), see ISLE OF BUTE (North Bute Parish).

ROTHESAY is a royal burgh, parish and town, and the head of a small debts court district, 96 miles west from Edinburgh (by Mid-Calder), 40 south-west from Glasgow, 18 south-west from Greenock, 22 north from Lamlash, in the Isle of Arran, 12 north-west from Cumbray, and 9 north-west from Largs. The town, finely situated at the head of Rothesay bay, is on the east side of the island of Bute, of which it is the capital, as well as of the shire. The first mention of it in history is in 1228, when Rothesay Castle was besieged by Hushac, the Norwegian, in conjunction with Olave, King of Man, and taken after a stout resistance. Although recovered from these northern invaders, it was again taken by them about the year 1253, and retaken by the Scots shortly after the battle of Largs, 3 Oct. 1263; in which Alex. III. finally defeated Haco of Norway. During the reign of John Baliol it was seized by the English, but in 1311 surrendered to Robert Bruce. In 1334, Edward Baliol retook the castle, and fortified it; but soon afterwards it capitulated to Bruce, then steward of Scotland. King Robert II. visited the castle in 1376, 1381, and 1392, and subsequently created his eldest son, Prince David, Duke of Rothesay, and this has ever since been the principal Scottish title of H. R. H. the Prince of Wales: the Marquess of Bute being hereditary keeper of the castle. The bay is very spacious, and the anchorage ground excellent. The pier was erected in 1882, and since enlarged, and the harbour has been much improved and deepened at considerable expense. The herring fishery has long been active here, and during 1894 107 boats were registered here, with a tonnage of 252 tons, and employing 245 hands. The Bute Farmers' Society has done much for the agriculture and farm stock of the island, premiums and prizes for excellence in which are awarded at the annual show of the Society, held at Rothesay in May. Rothesay was constituted a royal burgh by Robert III. by a charter dated 12th January, 1400; and its privileges were confirmed and extended by James VI. in 1584. The government of the town is now vested in a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, a town treasurer, and twelve councillors. The sheriff and commissary courts are held every Thursday, and quarter sessions on the first Tuesday in the months of March, May and August, and the last Tuesday in October, and all criminal cases for the circuit court justiciary are tried at Glasgow. The Town Hall and County Buildings, rebuilt at an expense of about £12,000, form a handsome pile, and include an elegant embattled tower, containing a bell and a clock, with four illuminated dials, presented by the late Marquis of Bute. The edifice comprises a spacious court room, in which the sheriff, burgh, and justice of peace courts are held, the town and sheriff clerks' and procurator fiscal's offices, and other apartments. At the east end of the court room is a painting of the late Marquess of Bute, by Mr. Graham Gilbert. The new public halls form a block of buildings facing Prince's pier, and are used for concerts, lectures, public meetings &c.; the rooms will seat upwards of 1,350 persons. The Norman Stewart Institute, in Montague street, opened 4th July, 1885, by Provost Sharp, was erected at a cost of £10,000, derived partly from funds bequeathed by the late Mr. Norman Stewart, of Richmond, Virginia, but mainly contributed by his nephews, Messrs. John, Daniel, and Bryce Stewart, of America, and natives of Rothesay. There is a large refreshment room on the ground floor, and on the other floors are amply-supplied reading and waiting rooms, a billiard room and recreation and smoking rooms. The Working Men's Club, the Bute Women's Temperance Prayer Union and the Rothesay Young Women's Christian Association, with other similar organisations, hold their meetings here. The Rothesay Royal Aquarium, near Mount Stuart road, occupies the site of a battery, constructed at the beginning of the century to resist anticipated invasion. In front of the east pier stands an elegant fountain, erected as a memorial to H. R. H. the late Prince Consort, who died 14 Dec. 1861, and another fountain stands in Guildford square. The Rothesay Academy and Thomson Institute, in the Public park, was erected and partially endowed by the trustees of the late Duncan Thomson esq., Ardbeg, Bute, and is a structure in the Gothic style. It is now under the control of the School board. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the Royal Bank of Scotland. A nominal weekly market is held on Wednesday, and fairs on the first Wednesday in May, third Wednesday and the following Thursday in July, the last Wednesday in October, and Tuesday before Kilbarchan December fair—all chiefly for cattle. Three newspapers are published here—the "Buteman," the "Rothesay Chronicle," and the "Rothesay Express." About a mile to the east of the town is a salutary mineral spring; near this is Glenburn House Hydropathic Establishment. On an eminence, called "Chapel hill," rising above Argyle street, once stood an ancient chapel, dedicated to St. Bride. The Marquess of Bute K.T. is the principal landowner. About 2 miles south-west, and at the end of the Chapelton road, is Woodend, or (as it is more generally denominated) "Kean's Cottage," from having been built by that eminent tragedian; the house stands in a retired spot, a little above the western shore of Loch Fad. The parish of Rothesay extends over an area of 6,083 statute acres; rateable value, £63,000. The population of the parish in 1891 was 9,306, including 9,108 in the burgh of Rothesay, and in 1881, 8,538, with 8,329 in the burgh.

CAITHNESS-SHIRE.

This is the most northerly county of Great Britain, lying on the north-eastern extremity of Scotland. It is bounded on the east and south-east by the German Ocean, on the south-west and west by Sutherlandshire, while on the north the Atlantic Ocean, bringing with it a portion of the Gulf Stream, after passing along two-thirds of the coast, sweeps at the rate of ten miles an hour through the Pentland Firth, the strait dividing the eastern portion of the coast from the Orkney Islands, and forms to the west of Duncans Bay Head the whirlpool known as the Boars of Duncansby. In figure the county approaches to that of a triangle, being from the Ord of Caithness to Dunnet Head, the northern cape, about 37 miles, and from near Reay to Auchingill on the east coast (its widest part) about 27, the entire coast line being 100 miles; altogether it comprehends an area of 685 square miles, or 438,878 acres. This county in point of size ranks as the thirteenth, and in population as the twenty-second, having in 1891 a population of 17,472 males and 19,705 females, or a total of 37,177, against 38,865 in 1881; the number of inhabited houses was 7,444.

The county contains a large number of forts or castles (chiefly ruins now) along its coast, it having been from an early period subject to the attacks of the Northmen and other enemies coming seaward.

The Early History of this county is of little or no interest, owing to its distance from the central part of the kingdom. It was anciently inhabited by the "Catinii," from whom the present appellation is supposed to be derived. The names of various places and the monumental remains indicate its having been the theatre of numerous petty exploits of the Danes and Norwegians. The ruins of Castle Sinclair and Girnego, the remains of old chapels, and other relics of antiquity combine to prove that this district was inhabited at an early date. Caithness is an earldom in the family of Sinclair. This peerage is of remote antiquity; before the year 1450 it was enjoyed by three successive families, who lost it either by forfeiture or extinction. At length it was renewed in the person of William Sinclair, Earl of Orkney, a great-grandson, by the female line, of Robert II.; he was made Chancellor of Scotland in the reign of James II., and received a grant of the earldom of Caithness. The earldom of Orkney having been derived from the King of Norway, though confirmed by a Scottish monarch, was resigned to the Crown in the reign of James III. After a long period the title was revived, but not in the family of the Sinclairs of Caithness.

Soil, Surface, Produce, Climate &c.—The county is in general level, with a few mountains on the borders of Sutherlandshire, and some eminences of trifling altitude throughout. The soil is chiefly devoted to tillage, and in the centre and along the sea border is moderately fertile. This district is nearly destitute of wood, and the few enclosures are but of a rude quality. The greatest elevations in this county above the level of the sea are, Morven, 2,313 ft.; Maiden Pap, 1,580 ft.; Scarry Ben, 2,054 ft.; and Ord of Caithness, 1,250 ft. Although improvements have certainly been effected, much remains to be done to raise the condition of Caithness-shire to that of the adjacent counties. Since the year 1809 a better system of farming has been introduced, and the number of roads throughout the county has been augmented. Though black cattle form an article of consideration, this is rather an agricultural than a grazing county; clover and turnips are pretty broadly cultivated; the crops of grain are mostly limited to oats and barley. The chief crops are oats, 34,880 acres; turnips, 14,008; hay, 11,449; potatoes, 1,758 and barley, 951. The total corn crop being 35,891 acres and green crops 16,337; land under grass, 46,315; permanent pasture, 25,308. Total area of land and water in 1891 was 446,077 acres (mountain and heath land being 229,300). The live stock in 1894 comprised 5,609 horses; 21,984 cattle; 109,223 sheep and 1,675 pigs. Besides cattle and corn, kelp, salmon, cod, herrings, bacon, with some butter and cheese, and a considerable quantity of wool, comprise the articles of exportation; the imports being foreign timber, coal, salt, flour and general merchandise. The mountains abound with red deer and various kinds of game, and the district throughout with hares, rabbits, grouse, plovers &c. In the caverns along the coast seals form their harbours; the hunters enter in small boats, with torches, and with loud shouts alarm the animals, which they kill with clubs as they attempt to pass into the sea. This county has no coal, and the principal fuel of the inhabitants is peat. The chief mineral production is flagstones, used for flooring, pavement &c. these stones being well known for their durability, and in the quarrying and dressing of which many men are employed. Ironstone and freestone of excellent quality are also found. The white and herring fishery is prosecuted with success, and the curing of fish is another branch of trade in which many persons are engaged. The number of fishing boats registered at the port of Wick (under the "Sea Fisheries Act," 1868) was in 1894, 630, with an aggregate tonnage of 9,144, and employing 3,123 men and boys, besides 1,060 other persons who are occasionally employed. The climate, though by no means genial and mild, is temperate, considering its high latitude (fifty-ninth degree), where the duration of the night at one period of the year is nineteen hours.

Rivers, Lakes, Railways &c.—In the interior there are upwards of thirty small fresh water lakes, from which flow a number of streamlets and some waters of greater magnitude; the principal being the Isauld, Forss and Thurso rivers on the north-west, the latter formed by the junction of the Moore and the Beg which rise on the borders of Sutherlandshire, and the Wick, Dunn and Berrydale on the south-east. The most extensive loch is the Watten, a fine sheet of water, about 3 miles in length, from which issues a branch of the river Wick. The only bays of note are Sinclair Bay, on the north-east, and Dunnet Bay on the north. The Highland Railway, which after running close to the east coast of Sutherlandshire as far as Helmsdale has to make a detour of nearly 25 miles to the north before it can find a way through the hills which form the border of Caithness, passes into the county a little east of Forsinard station, and runs north-east to Georgemas junction, north-west of Spittle Hill, where it divides into two branches, one running north to Thurso, the other east to Wick.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Caithness-shire was anciently a bishopric, the earliest traces of which refer its origin to the 12th century; at present it contains ten parishes, which constitute a presbytery. The shire contains one royal burgh—Wick, and a burgh of barony—Thurso. The county sends one member to Parliament, and Wick, joined with Kirkwall, Dornoch, Dingwall, Tain and Cromarty, elects another representative. The parliamentary constituency for 1894-5 was 3,976. The valuation of the county for 1894-5, exclusive of railways, was £117,590, and of railways, £8,254.

BERRIEDALE is a quoad sacra parish and hamlet in the southern portion of Latheron parish, 23 miles south-west from Wick and 12 from Lybster, in the Latheron poor combination and Wick small debt court district. The hamlet of Berriedale is situated on the sea coast at the embrochure of the rivers Berriedale and Langwell, both of which streams take their rise in the south-west of the county, amongst the hills which divide it from Sutherlandshire, Morven and Scarraben, the loftiest in the county being in this district. The nearest railway station is at Helmsdale, in Sutherlandshire, on the Highland railway. There is an Established church and also the site of a castle. Langwell House, about a mile west from Berriedale, is the seat of the Duke of Portland P.C. lord lieutenant of the county. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 1,113.

CASTLETOWN is a small village at the foot of Dunnet Bay, in the parish of Olrig, poor combination and small debt court district of Thurso, and is 15 miles north-west from Wick and 6½ east of Thurso. It has an Established church and a Free church, and a chapel for Original Seceders, and the parish possesses six public schools. The nearest railway station is Thurso, on the Highland line. The Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the Town and County Bank Limited each have a branch here. In the immediate vicinity of the village is the estate of Castlehill, from which is quarried an excellent kind of stone, adapted to the purposes of flooring and flagging footways &c.; it lies in beds of from three-quarters of an inch to six inches in thickness; blocks have often been raised measuring 100 superficial feet, hence they are carried to the shore, where they are prepared and dressed, previous to shipping, to facilitate which a small and convenient harbour has been formed. Olrig House, under Olrig Hill, an eminence of 465 feet in the south-west of the parish, is the residence of James Smith esq. D.L., J.P. Sir Robert C. Sinclair bart. of Murkle and Stevenson; James Christie Traill esq. of Rattar, and James Smith esq. of Olrig, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 10,015 acres; rateable value, £7,462, and in 1891 had a population of 1,837, against 2,002 in 1881: the population of Castletown in 1891 was 979 and inhabited houses, 255.

LYBSTER IN LATHERON.

LYBSTER is an ecclesiastical parish and village at the mouth of the Redsgill river, in the parish of Latheron, in which poor combination it is included, and is in the small debt court district of Wick and 14 miles south-by-west from that town; it was at one time a place of some importance and the centre of a fishery trade, which its safe harbour encouraged, and were this cleared now of the obstructions caused some time ago by a land flood, which choked up the river outlet, it might again be a useful harbour, but the attempt made to clear it has not been persevered in. The "Brothers Port," the name bequeathed to this haven by the Scandinavians, who settled in Caithness in the 8th and 10th centuries, appears to have been much resorted to by these "sea-kings," or pirates. On an eminence the ruins of a Roman Catholic chapel, and some well-carved relics in Morayshire freestone, still survive. A Sheriff Court is held here ten times a year. Wick is the nearest railway station. The population in 1891 was 740, inhabited houses, 175.

The parish of Latheron extends along the coast from the Ord of Caithness to Bruan, in the south angle of Wick parish, and is 27 miles in length with a breadth varying from 10 to 15. It contains the villages of Berriedale, Bruan, Dunbeath and Lybster, and had in 1891 a population of 5,875, against 6,675 in 1881, and its area comprised 119,539 acres; rateable value, £17,645. The parish church stands about half way between Lybster and Dunbeath, and there is also one at Lybster and four Free churches in the parish. There are 11 schools. There is a good road along the coast the whole length of the parish. A cattle fair is held at Lybster on the second Tuesday in November, and a sort of market for engaging men for the arduous employment of the fishing season takes place on the 20th July. Cattle fairs are also held at Dunbeath in March, June, Aug. and Nov. dates not fixed, but usually on the second Tuesday in the month. Dunbeath Castle, garrisoned by Montrose in 1650, gives the name to the baronetage now held by Sir John R. G. Sinclair bart. J.P. (of Barrock). Forse House is the residence of George Sutherland esq. D.L., J.P. The Duke of Portland is the principal landowner.

REAY is a parish, partly in Sutherlandshire and partly in this county, this latter portion lying to the west of Thurso and Halkirk parishes; the village of Reay, which is situated at the bottom of Sandside Bay, being 10 miles west-by-south from Thurso town, in the poor combination and small debt court district of which it is included. It is 11 miles from north to south and about 8 miles wide, and contains some hills (Ben Ratha, 793 feet, being the highest), besides several lochs, of which Shurrery is the largest; from this flows the Forse water, the other rivers being the Reay and Sandside. The nearest railway stations are those of Thurso (northern part of parish), Scotscalder (centre) and Altnabreac (southern portion). The parish contains lime, granite, millstone, with traces of lead and iron, mineral springs &c. There are two Established and one Free church and five schools in the parish. Fairs are held on the Monday before 15th August and following Tuesday. Achvarasdale Lodge is the residence of Sir Robert Charles Sinclair bart. of Stevenson, D.L., J.P. and Sandside House the residence of Thomas Pilkington esq. D.L., J.P.; these two gentlemen are the principal landowners. The area of this portion of Reay comprises 44,905 acres; the entire parish containing 115,302 acres, with a rateable value of £7,799 and a population of 2,075, the population of Reay in Caithness being 1,182 in 1891, against 1,197 in 1881.

THURSO is a parish and a town and burgh of barony, situate on the bay of same name, 20 miles across the county from Wick; it is the head of a poor combination and seat of a small debt court, and has a terminal station on the Highland railway. The bay, sheltered from the north-east by Dunnet Head and to the west by Holburn Head, is commodious, but unfortunately runs very shallow close to the town, so that the larger vessels and steamers have to discharge and load in Scrabster Roads, about 2 miles down the west side of the bay; vessels of any burthen may find shelter in the bay in all weathers, and few places possess superior advantages for refuge than the Scrabster Roads. A promenade has been constructed facing the sea,at the expense of the inhabitants of the town; it is upwards of 300 yards in length. The town is situated on the left bank of the river. The river is famed for the large quantities of salmon occasionally taken. Either bank is connected by an elegant stone bridge, erected in 1887, but the want of a better pier is much felt, as vessels intending to enter must wait the tide before they can cross the bar; this is a great inconvenience. Near the harbour are the ruins of the old Gothic church of St. Peter, built about the 14th century, and half a mile north-west are the remains of the old palace of the bishops, destroyed by fire in 1222, when the bishop was burnt by the populace because he had displeased them in reference to tithes. The original name of Thurso, and what it is still called in the Gaelic language, is "Inverhorsa;" inver signifying the mouth of a river. It is said, and with probability, that the name is derived from Horsa, a Saxon general, who landed in the 5th century. The Danes were the earliest possessors of Caithness. Torfœus, the Danish historian, mentions that in the beginning of the 11th century Count Moddan quartered his army at Thurso, which he terms "The Town of Caithness," and that they were plentifully supplied with spoil from the neighbourhood, till subdued by Thorkel; he adds that Moddan had his camp on the promontory of Thurso, where vestiges of a wall, which fortified it, may still be perceived. Dr. Barry states that Earl Erland, in the time of Malcolm II. King of Scotland, about the year 1005 resided for the most part at Thurso. Buchanan mentions many battles between Malcolm and the Danes in Moray, which in those times comprehended Caithness and all the northern counties of Scotland. We find, by one of the statutes of King David of Scotland, that the weights and measures of Caithness, or Thurso, were made the standards for Scotland. Thurso is a burgh of barony, holden of Sir John George Tollemache Sinclair bart. as superior. The government of the burgh is vested in a provost, two bailies and six commissioners, under the Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892. There is a Justice of Peace Court held every alternate Wednesday, and a Sheriff Court ten times a year. The town is well supplied with water from the Loch of Calder. The places of worship are the parish church, two Free churches, and chapels for the Original Seceders, Reformed Presbyterians, and Independents, and St. Peter's Episcopal church. The church of the Establishment is a neat Gothic structure, with a tower and clock, the latter presented by the late Henry Miller esq. of London, a native of Thurso. There is a trade carried on in May and June in connection with the herring fishery, but the boats employed are not on a separate register, but come under that of Wick. The main export of the place consists of "Caithness pavement," an article in great demand, the manufacture of which is carried on to a great extent and contributes to the prosperity of the place; the peculiar excellence belonging to this staple is its durability, its resistance of moisture and its retention of an unbroken surface; specimens may be seen in the Houses of Parliament, London, and many public buildings throughout the United Kingdom. Nowhere in Scotland has agricultural progress been so rapid as in Caithness. Immense tracts of heath land have been subjected to the plough, whilst many thousands of acres of bog and swamp have been drained. There are branches of the Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Commercial Bank Limited, the Town and County Bank Lim. the British Linen Co. Bank and a Savings Bank.

The first Free Church is conspicuous for its fine architecture. There are public and Free Church schools, well attended. At the top of Sinclair street is an institution endowed by the late Alexander Miller esq. of Thurso, and erected for the purpose of affording education to boys. The Public Free Library, in the Town hall, was opened in 1872, and contains upwards of 5,400 volumes. Dunbar's Hospital, a handsome building, containing 12 beds for the reception of incurable persons who have not been in receipt of parochial relief, was erected at a cost of about £6,000, the necessary funds for this purpose having been bequeathed by the late Mr. Dunbar, of Scrabster; the foundation stone was laid by H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh in 1881, and the building opened for the admission of patients in May, 1885; there are also six cottages adjoining, for the accommodation of 12 aged persons who have been in better circumstances, preference being given to natives of Thurso. The Thurso Combination Poorhouse is situated at Halkirk. A little to the east of the town stands Thurso Castle, the seat of Sir John George Tollemache Sinclair bart. of Ulbster, which within the last few years has been greatly enlarged and modernized. Scrabster House is the seat of John Miller esq. D.L., J.P. Richard Oswald esq. one of the plenipotentiaries from the Court of St. James for settling the peace of 1783,was a native of Thurso parish, as was also the late Sir John Sinclair bart. of Ulbster, whose name is associated with the Statistical Account of Scotland, which was collected and published in consequence of his indefatigable exertions, and to whose memory a very elegant monument of freestone, presented to the town by the late Alexander Miller esq. has been erected on a square piece of ground fronting the Established church. The late Robert Dick, an eminent botanist and geologist, was a resident of this town, and his collection of specimens now forms an important part of the Thurso Museum. A newspaper, "The Caithness Courier," is published here weekly on Friday. A cattle market is held on the second and fourth Wednesday of each month, and the annual fairs on the second Tuesday in July and first Friday in September. The area of the parish comprises 28,049 acres; rateable value, £23,645; population in 1891, 5,838, against 6,217 in 1881; these figures include for the burgh —rateable value, £11,053; population 1891, 3,930 and population 1881, 4,055, and it contained in 1891, 799 inhabited houses.

Scrabster, the port of Thurso, is 1½ miles north-west on the west side of Thurso bay.

WATTEN is a parish and a village, in Thurso poor combination and Wick small debt court district, situated about 8 miles west-north-west of Wick; the parish is bounded on the north by Bower and on the east by Wick, on the south by Latheron and on the west by Halkirk, and has a station on the Highland railway, 1¼ miles from the village. In the north-west part of the parish, which measures 11 miles north to south by 6 broad, there is a fine sheet of water, about 3 miles in length, called Loch Watten, from which issues a branch of the river Wick, which also receives the Acharole Strath and Cumster Burns which flow through this parish. Sir R. W. Anstruther bart. and the Duke of Portland are the principal landowners. There are places of worship in connection with the Established and Free churches, and three Board schools are in the parish. The parish of Watten comprises an area of 30,579 acres; rateable value, £7,625, and in 1881 contained a population of 1,406, and in 1891, 1,390.

WICK,

WITH LOUISBURGH AND PULTENEYTOWN.

WICK is a parish and royal burgh, situated on the east coast of Caithness, in Latheron poor combination, and the seat of a small debt court. The town, which is the largest in the county and in a flourishing state, is 290 miles from Edinburgh and 20 south-east from Thurso, and is one of the terminal stations of the Highland railway; it is divided into three parts, viz. Pulteneytown, Louisburgh and Wick, Wick and Louisburgh being on the north side of the river and bay and Pulteneytown (which is a separate police burgh) on the south. The old town, or rather Wick proper, is composed of the High street and Bridge street; the former runs from the bay along the curvature of the river, and is flanked on either side by several lanes.

Wick was erected into a royal burgh in the year 1589.

The Duke of Sutherland is superior of Wick, which is the county town of the shire, a parliamentary burgh and the returning station at elections; it joins with Kirkwall, Dornoch, Dingwall, Tain and Cromarty in returning a member to the Imperial Parliament. The government of the town is vested in 15 councillors, from whom are chosen a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild and a treasurer; their jurisdiction, however, is confined to narrow limits, and the amount of their revenue inconsiderable, being confined to the rental of market dues and some curing stations.

The town has a good supply of water, which is conveyed from the Yarrow Loch, the works for that purpose having been finished in 1882, at a cost of £7,500.

The port of Wick consists of two harbours of fair dimensions, which are being greatly improved by deepening, so that the fishing fleet can enter at all states of the tide. A breakwater was constructed at a cost of about £120,000, but this magnificent erection is now no longer to be seen, having been demolished by the fearful storms which sweep across the North Sea from the north-east and spend their force upon the Caithness coast. Owing to the excessively perilous nature of the east coast fishing ground, a deep sea harbour is imperatively needed here to prevent the frequently recurring disasters which take place along the coast. The harbours, which were formerly under the care of the British Fisheries Society, were, in 1879, handed over to the Wick Harbour Trust, by special Act of Parliament.

The herring trade must be taken as the staple, and in the season commencing in July and ending in September the home fishery is prosecuted to a very large extent. From May to July the fishermen are busily engaged with the summer fishing at Stornoway and other places in the Western Hebrides. During the home fishing the population is increased by a large influx of Highlanders, men and women, who come as "hired hands." About 400 boats, manned by six men each, set sail every evening for the fishing ground, the distance to which varies from 1½ to 60 miles, and return next day. The gutting and curing of the herrings gives labour to hundreds of men and women, and on a busy day the quay presents a scene both animated and picturesque. The winter herring, cod and ling fishing is carried on extensively; it brings to the town fish buyers from the principal towns in England. The value of fish exported from Wick during a year is computed at about £200,000, the benefit from which is diffused over a wide district. The railway transports the whole winter catch to the southern markets, while the vessels belonging to the port and a large contingent from other Scotch ports, and also foreign vessels, are busily engaged taking the summer fish to Dantzic, Hamburg, St. Petersburg and other places on the continent, and various ports in Ireland. The number of fishing boats registered at this port, under the Sea Fisheries Act, 1868, in 1894 was 630; aggregate tonnage, 9,144, and employing 3,123 men and boys, besides 1,060 extra hands; besides 3 sailing vessels employing 77 hands.

The customs collection extends from Meikle Ferry to Cape Wrath, with substations at Thurso and Helmsdale. Different foreign states are represented by resident vice-consuls.

Ship building has entirely ceased since the demise of Mr. Bremner, whose engineering talents were successfully employed in floating the "Great Britain" steamship, which grounded on the coast of Ireland; but the business of boat building is carried on, and with the manufacture of herring barrels and nets is the principal source of employment for the non-fishing class.

Six banks have branches here, namely, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Town and County Bank Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the Bank of Scotland, the British Linen Co. and the North of Scotland Bank Limited. There is also a National Security Savings Bank, which is well supported.

The Chamber of Commerce is composed of the principal business men in the district, and meets on the first day of January and also in August every year.

There are three weekly newspapers, the "Northern Ensign," the "John o' Groat Journal," and the "Northern News."

There is a Justice of the Peace Court and a Sheriff's court, the former sitting on the first and third Mondays of each month, the latter every Tuesday, with power to appoint a sitting when and where required within the county.

The Free Libraries Act was adopted in the parish of Wick in 1887, and a library and reading room was opened in Union street, Pulteneytown, November 16th, 1888; the library contains over 7,000 volumes.

Bridge street, more regular in its construction, is ornamented by several fine buildings, among which the Town and County buildings form a neat and handsome pile, faced with freestone and surmounted by a cupola with a public clock. The Town Hall has a spacious apartment, containing portraits of the late eminent Sir John Sinclair and other local celebrities, and which is used as a council room and for the meetings of the Commissioners of Supply for the county; also the town clerk's and other offices. Within the last few years the aspect of Bridge street has entirely changed, many new buildings, all having architectural features more or less pretentious, having taken the place of the old houses. The Town and County Bank Limited, the County Court House, the Station Hotel, Wick Free Church, and Brim's and Gunn's buildings make up a total which would not be discreditable to a much larger town. Elegant premises have also been erected in High street for the North of Scotland Bank Limited. The Temperance Hall, seated for 1,200 people, is one of the chief places in which public meetings and entertainments are held.

There are places of worship of the Establishment and the Free Church of Scotland; the former have one in Wick and one in Pulteneytown, and the latter one in Wick and two in Pulteneytown, and there are others for congregations of United Presbyterians, Independents, Evangelical Union, Baptists, Roman Catholics and Episcopalians. The United Presbyterians, Independents and Episcopalians have built new churches, thereby adding greatly to the architectural beauty of the town.

There are 10 public schools.

Cattle markets are held at Wick on the 2nd and 4th Thursday of each month, but the ancient markets and fairs held here have been discontinued. The Caithness Agricultural Society holds an important annual cattle and sheep market at Georgemas, on second Tuesday of August, and an annual show in Aug. at Wick and Thurso alternately.

The principal residence of the Earl of Caithness was at the strong castle Girnegoe, concerning the antiquity of which there is no tradition, but by its construction and workmanship it appears to have been of Danish origin; it is situated about 2 miles north of Wick, on Sinclair Bay, and the greater part of its walls are still standing. Adjoining the Castle of Girnegoe is Sinclair Castle, of almost equal antiquity; and near by stands Ackergill Tower, recently restored. Another interesting ruin in the vicinity is Wick Castle, known as the "Old Man of Wick," which along with the lighthouse on Noss Head (one of the best lights around the British Isles) form excellent landmarks to seamen. There are numerous remains of Pictish dwellings in the district; five stone coffins and a number of weapons and a collection of pottery have been found in different parts of the parish.

The principal seats are Ackergill Tower, the seat of Mrs. Duff-Dunbar, and Stirkoke House, the seat of Edward William Horne esq. D.L., J.P. The area of the parish comprises 17,264 acres; rateable value, £35,116; population in 1891, 13,105, against 12,822 in 1881; the burgh (parliamentary, including royal) rateable value, £25,925; population in 1891, 8,464, against 8,026 in 1881. The number of inhabited houses in 1891 was 1,380. The royal burgh in 1891 had a population of only 2,962, and the ecclesiastical parish, 6,513.

Staxigoe, Boathaven and Sarclet are suburban villages, populated principally by fishermen, and had each a separate harbour. The harbour of Sarclet is now destroyed, with little prospect of being rebuilt.

PULTENEYTOWN, part of the parliamentary burgh of Wick, contains the harbours, and may be reckoned the seat of the manufactures, commerce and fisheries of Wick; it was purchased when a mere waste by the society in London formed for extending British fisheries, and various means were adopted to carry out the great and beneficial objects of the society. In 1892 the estate of Pulteneytown was purchased from the society by John Usher esq. of Norton, who is the present proprietor. Pulteneytown was in the same year created a police burgh, the government consisting of 12 commissioners, including a provost and two bailies While the royal burgh of Wick can trace its history back for centuries, Pulteneytown can only speak of its generations, and so much more fortunate is it in this respect, that while Wick and Louisburgh consist chiefly of closes and lanes, Pulteneytown has been from the first laid out on a settled plan. Its regular streets, squares and terraces compare favourably with that of any northern town. Here most of the work of the town is done. Its cooperages, net, rope and woollen manufactories, saw mills and distillery, employ two-thirds of the whole population. Pulteneytown is supplied with water from the Loch of Hempriggs. The Pulteneytown Academy was founded and endowed by the British Fisheries Society, but it is now under the control of the Burgh School Board. There are also public schools. The Wick Free Library and Reading Room is situated in Union street, Pulteneytown. Population, 5,550.
Post & Money Order Office & Savings Bank; Daniel Sinclair, postmaster. Letters from this branch are forwarded at 1.50, 5.15, 8 & 10 p.m. to the Post Office, Wick. Nearest telegraph office, Wick

CLACKMANNANSHIRE.

This county, the smallest in Scotland in point of size, and the twenty-sixth as regards population, is bounded on the south-west and west by the Firth of Forth and Stirlingshire, and on the north and east by Perthshire; and on the south-east it joins the county of Fife. Its figure, which is five-sided, and is extremely irregular, does not exceed ten miles at its greatest length, nor more than eight at its extreme breadth, and it has an area, which in 1891 was increased by the addition of the parish of Alva, of about 53 square miles, or 35,935 statute acres. The population, including Alva, in 1891 was 16,058 males and 17,599 females, total 33,657; against 30,641 in 1881. Inhabited houses, 6,910, against 6,299 in 1881.

Anciently the whole of the valuable territory lying between the rivers Forth and Tay, and bounded on the north-west by the chain of the Ochil Hills, was called Ross, as being a sort of peninsula, terminating at Stirling. In course of time the district of Ross was divided amongst the shires of Fife, Kinross, and Clackmannan, with the introduction of a slip of Perthshire, on the edge of the Forth, in which is situated the town of Culross. Among the ancient structures of the county are three old towers; one of them, near Clackmannan, is said to have been erected by Robert Bruce; another, contiguous to Tillicoultry, is supposed from its similarity of architecture to have been built by the same person, or about the same period; the third, or the Alloa tower, is more particularly noticed in the description of that town. At Dollar are the ruins of Castle Campbell, standing on a lofty eminence, which are also particularised in the description of the village.

Soil, Climate &c.—From the shores of the Forth the surface of the county rises gradually to the Ochil Hills, the highest of which, Bencleugh, attains the height of 2,360 feet above the level of the sea, and is in the parish of Tillicoultry. The higher grounds are partly pastoral, but the whole of the lower parts adjacent to the Forth are rich, arable, and beautifully enclosed.

Manufactures, Produce &c.—The manufacture of woollen goods, in shawls, plaidings, tartans &c. has been for many years established in the parishes of Tillicoultry and Alva with complete success, and the towns belonging to them have become thriving places in consequence, and furnish employment to many hundreds of persons. At Alloa and Clackmannan wool spinning is carried on very extensively, the former place being likewise noted for the excellence of the ale brewed there and also for the distillation of whisky. Throughout the whole county coal is worked, and at various times valuable ores of silver, lead, copper &c., have been found in the Ochils. The produce of coal in 1893 was 410,409 tons, valued at £133,383, and fireclay was extracted to the extent of 3,142 tons, valued £511. The chief crops were in 1894, oats, 3,481 acres; hay (all kinds) 2,138; beans, 513; barley, 496; and turnips, 806; potatoes only, 344. Or total corn crops, 4,763 acres and green crops, 1,264; mountain and heath land, 11,651; land under grass, 7,281 and woods and plantations, 2,909; while permanent pasture was 5,934 acres. Of live stock there were 671 horses; 3,899 cattle; 12,721 sheep and 2,230 pigs. There is a small fishery industry, 31 boats of an aggregate of 247 tons and employing 90 men and boys, being registered at Alloa.

Rivers, Railways &c.—Besides the Forth the county is watered by two other streams, namely, the Devon and the Black Devon, and there is one large loch, Gartmore. Four branch railways centre at Alloa, one coming from the south-west from Larbert, another from the south-west from Dumfermline, viâ Clackmannan; a third proceeding to the north-east, passing through Tillicoultry and Dollar to Kinross, and the fourth which runs direct east to Stirling, with a branch to Alva. These lines belong to the Caledonian and North British railways.

This shire contains five parishes and two portions of parishes; its only towns are Alloa, Clackmannan, Dollar, Tillicoultry and Alva. The county possesses neither royal nor parliamentary burghs, but it unites with Kinross-shire in returning one member to Parliament. The parliamentary constituency in 1894-5 was 6,117. The valuation of the county for 1894-5, which includes the addition of Alva, was, exclusive of railways, £147,596 and of railways, £12,793.

ALLOA.

ALLOA, a town of considerable commercial importance, in Stirling poor combination, and the leading one of the county, is 30 miles north-west from Edinburgh, 32 south-west from Perth, 7 east from Stirling, 6 south-west from Dollar, 3 west from Clackmannan and 10 north from Falkirk. The word "Alloa" is supposed to be a corruption of the Celtic words "Aull waeg," signifying the way to the sea, or the sea-way. It is situated on the north bank of the river Forth, at the point where the river ends and the Frith begins. At this spot, and for 10 miles above it, the water is deep enough to admit vessels with 10 to 11 feet draft. The quay stretches along the bank, and large vessels or steamboats can thus lie close up to the thoroughfare, to the great convenience of passengers, and this is the only port on the Frith at which such can be accomplished with perfect ease and safety at any tide. A dock was constructed in 1863, which is 600 feet long and 195 feet broad, with 21 feet depth of water on the sill. Till 1854 Alloa was a burgh of barony, under the management of trustees, but in February of that year the inhabitants adopted the Burgh and Police Act, and in 1863 the Commissioners under that Act unanimously adopted the General Police (Scotland) Act of 1862, known as "Lindsay's Act." The burgh of Alloa is now governed by a board of 12 commissioners, constituted agreeably to the provisions of the above Act, one of them acting as chief and two of them as junior magistrates. An ordinary meeting is held on the second Monday in each month, and statutory meetings on the second Monday of the months of January, April, July and October. The ordinary and small debt courts for the county are held weekly, a sheriff court twice a week, and a justice of the peace court at stated periods, and fiars court annually.

The town is supplied with gas, the Alloa Gas Works, which were up to 1887 in the possession of a private company, being now the property of the Commissioners, having been acquired by them at a cost of £23,250, the amount fixed by the valuators. Until 1822 the town was very badly supplied with water, but in that year a supply was obtained from a large artificial loch known as Gartmorn Dam, which covers 160 acres of ground; and in 1867, the supply being again inadequate, two large filtering beds were constructed in addition, the water being conveyed to the town through 10-inch and 12-inch main pipes; the total cost of the waterworks up to the present time is £30,000.

The parish church, first opened for divine worship on the 24th of June, 1819, forms one of the most prominent objects in the town: it is a fine structure, in the Pointed style of architecture, erected at an expense of £8,000: the spire, which is very handsome, was added to the tower by public subscription; the bell and fine clock were presented by the Earl of Mar. St. Andrew's chapel of ease, in the Early English style of architecture and presenting a plain massive appearance, was opened on the 26th of November, 1882. The other places of worship are two Free churches, two United Presbyterian churches, a Baptist chapel, an Episcopalian church, with a peal of bells, a Roman Catholic church, and one for Swedenborgians. At the east end of the town a cemetery has been laid out, covering an area of 6 acres.

Of late years the town has considerably improved in appearance, many old houses having been removed to make room for others of a modern class. Many public buildings have been added, and constructed in such a style as to enhance the appearance of the town. The County Court House, a building in the Flemish style of architecture, erected at a cost of £8,700, and opened December 8th, 1865, is situated at the top of Mar street. About the middle of High street is the Corn Exchange, which is used also as a public hall; it was built in 1862, at a cost of £1,150, and is the property of a joint-stock company. Powers having been acquired for feuing the glebe which lies to the west of the town, a new suburb has been laid out on the land, the principal building being the Archæological Museum and Hall. This institution was erected in 1874, and besides furnishing the members of the Archæological Society with suitable accommodation for their antiquities, library and meetings, is used for public meetings of a smaller kind to those held in the Corn Exchange; the total cost was about £2,000. At a little distance from this hall a Burgh school has been built, on the site of the Old Assembly Rooms and Parochial school, at a cost of about £5,000; it was opened in 1876, and accommodates 500 scholars. In Greenside street is the Paton school, erected in 1865 from a trust fund left by the late Alexander Paton esq. of Cowden Park, for educational purposes, is suitably endowed; the front faces the foot of Candle street, and, with its ornamental tower, presents a handsome appearance. The Greenside chapel was built by D. Paton esq. and placed by him under trustees for the benefit of the Young Men's Christian Association. In Bank street, which is a continuation of Mill street, are the Municipal Buildings. The old Burgh Chambers had long been felt to be unsuitable, and in 1872 the Commissioners of the town proceeded to erect these beautiful buildings, which are in the Grecian style of architecture, and cost about £4,000. Adjacent to these is the new Post Office, a substantial three-storey building in the Classic style of architecture, which was opened on the 13th of November, 1882. The Public Hall and Free Library is situated in Mars hill, with the main front looking down Church street and with access to the back from Mar place; it is the gift of John Thomson Paton esq. of Norwood, and was designed by Mr. Waterhouse R.A. of London, in the Gothic style, the large hall being capable of holding 1,000 people. Mr. Paton has also presented an organ to the hall, at a cost of about £1,700, and given £1,000 for the founding of the library, the ratepayers having adopted the Free Libraries Act on the 22nd June, 1886; the above gentlemen presented in 1895 public baths and gymnasium.

The trade of Alloa has been gradually increasing, and it is expected that the improvements and enlargement of the dock will contribute to its further development. In 1871 a Bill was obtained giving powers for the construction of new works, and under these powers the Harbour Trustees greatly extended the dock, and also obtained a powerful steam dredger for keeping the dock and harbour clear of mud. The harbour has now been acquired by the North British Railway, who are likely to greatly increase its efficiency. Beside the brewing and yarn trades, for which the town is so noted, many other articles of industry are produced. There are several foundries (iron, copper and brass), extensive bottle works, a pottery (to which has been added a department for glass engraving), machine works, cooperages, saw mills, a ship building yard (where iron ships of the largest size are built, giving employment to a great number of hands), brick and tile manufactories and a dye-wood works. The collieries around Alloa are very numerous, and the export trade of the port depends to a large extent upon them. In 1894, 525 vessels, aggregating 101,038 tons, were entered inwards, and 602 vessels, aggregating 114,575 tons, were cleared outwards. There is a small fishing trade, 31 boats of an aggregate tonnage of 247, and employing 90 men and boys, are registered at Alloa under the Sea Fisheries Act of 1868. Large quantities of whisky are manufactured here, the Carsebridge Distillery, one of the most extensive in the kingdom, being capable of producing from 50,000 to 60,000 gallons of proof spirit weekly, and the quantity of ale brewed here exceeds that of any other town in Scotland. The exports comprise ale, whisky, glass bottles, coals, wool and woollen goods; the imports are timber, oak, bark, hides, butter, cheese and large supplies of grain for malting. The latter forms now a principal feature in the imports; several large vessels of 1,000 to 1,500 tons may be seen discharging here at one time. Communication with Edinburgh, Stirling, and the towns of the Forth is afforded by steamboats throughout the year, and the ferry steamboat crosses every hour to South Alloa on the opposite side of the Forth, where are extensive timber yards, and also a terminus of a branch of the Caledonian railway. A free shipping tidal port is formed at this part of the Forth. The great depth of water, together with the facility of railway transit, show this locality as eminently eligible for the purpose, as is proved by the fact of the large number of vessels daily arriving. Alloa is well supplied with railway accommodation. The North British line from Stirling divides here, one branch going to Dunfermline and one to Kinross. In 1878 an Act was obtained in Parliament for the purpose of making a railway from the South Alloa branch of the Caledonian line to the town, with a bridge over the Forth, the undertaking being promoted by an independent company, backed by the Caledonian Company, who subscribed £40,000 of the capital. The foundation stone of the bridge was laid on the 5th of April, 1882. It consists of 17 spans, two of 100 feet, two of 80 feet, and 13 of 68 feet, the piers on which the girders rest rising to a height of 24 feet above high water mark. In the fairway of the channel are two opening spans of 60 feet each, which turn on a massive central pier, consisting of six cylindrical columns, to permit of vessels passing up and down the river. The bridge, which has one line of rails, is 17 feet in breadth outside and 14 feet inside the girders; the estimated cost of the line and bridge was £64,000. Messrs. Watt and Wilson, of Glasgow, were the contractors. With this improved train service, both by the North British and Caledonian Companies, a commodious joint station has been erected a little east of the old one, at the head of Primrose street. The new railway between Alloa and Kincardine, on the Forth, was opened in December, 1893. There is also a branch of the North British railway to Alva. The Alloa Hospital, which was instituted in February, 1867, mainly through the liberality of the late Earl of Kellie, is designed for the medical and surgical treatment of persons in the county of Clackmannan suffering from disease or accident; it is under the management of a committee who are annually appointed from the subscribers, and is supported by voluntary subscriptions. A detached building is available to the local authorities of the burgh and parish of Alloa for the reception of persons suffering from infectious diseases. There are five schools under the School Board—the Alloa Day Home, which, in addition, was formerly a ragged school, and was instituted on the 29th of January, 1884, to aid in securing the elementary education of poor and neglected children in Alloa, by providing superintendence and one or more meals a day; the Burgh school, the Sunnyside school, the Ludgate school, and the Academy, besides which there are also a Roman Catholic, an Episcopal and the Paton Endowed school. There are five branch banking establishments—the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the Royal Bank of Scotland, together with a Bank for Savings. Four newspapers are published in Alloa weekly—the "Advertiser," the "Circular," the "Journal," and the "Weekly News." In winter three curling clubs meet on their respective ponds.

The town is extending principally to the north, at Greenfield and Claremont, and eastward along the Clackmannan road. Villas are also rising to the west in rapid succession, adding much to the beauty of the place, amongst which may be mentioned the beautiful mansion of Norwood, the residence of J. Thomson Paton esq.; it is in the Scottish baronial style, and forms a point of attraction in the approach to Alloa from the west. Beyond it is Arnsbrae House, the residence of James Younger esq. a fine building in a commanding situation. Schaw Park is the residence of Col. John B. Harvey J.P. In 1877 land was acquired by the Commissioners, as a feu from the Earl of Mar and Kellie, which has been laid out as a public park. It extends over 20 acres, is triangular in shape, and generally level, with the exception of a slight elevation at the north-east corner; it was opened on the 1st May, 1878.

Alloa, in its immediate neighbourhood, presents scenery at once beautiful, bold and picturesque. On the north side is the range of the Ochil hills, covered with verdure to their very summits, and which are, perhaps, unrivalled in Scottish landscape; whilst the south displays the Forth in all its natural splendour. Stirling Castle on the west, and the Alloa and Clackmannan Towers on the east, present to the eye a panorama of no common loveliness. The noble and ancient family of Mar have long been the proprietors of this place. They forfeited the earldom by their participation in the rebellion of 1715, but the title and privileges were restored in June, 1824. Alloa Tower was the residence of this family. It was a quadrangular building, but was in 1800 destroyed by fire, and the square tower now standing is all that remains of the ancient structure, though it is still a place of great strength. The walls are 11 feet thick, and the highest turret is 89 feet. It was built by the sovereigns of Scotland previous to the 13th century, and is a stately remnant of feudal grandeur. It has frequently been the resort and residence of royalty. The beautiful and unfortunate Mary spent a portion of her youth and maturity with the Mar family; her son James also passed many of his youthful days here, having been committed by his mother to the then Earl of Mar, and his son, Prince Henry, received a part of his education in this building under the celebrated George Buchanan. The prospect from the summit is beautiful and extensive, and worthy the attention of the tourist and stranger. The Tower is now uninhabited. Alloa House, now the residence of the Earl of Mar and Kellie, stands a short distance eastward from the Tower, and was erected in 1834, but has since been much added to and improved. Alloa market is held on Saturday. Cattle fairs are held on the second Wednesday in February, May, August and November, all new style; and a hiring fair on the second Saturday in October. The parish of Alloa is in the presbytery of Stirling, and embraces an area of 5,499 statute acres; rateable value, £66,943; with a population in 1871 of 9,940, and in 1881 of 11,628, the burgh at the latter period containing 8,812; in 1891, population of the parish was 13,728, and in the burgh, 10,711; the inhabited houses being 2,347, against 2,051 in 1881.

Cambus is a small village, situated on the Forth, in the old parish of Tullibody, 2 miles west from Alloa and 5 from Stirling. It is also a station on the Stirling and Dunfermline section of the North British railway, and the branch line to Alva here joins the main line. The river Devon at this point discharges itself into the Forth, and there is a pier where small vessels are enabled to discharge and load. Brewing and distilling are extensively carried on here.

Tullibody parish was united to that of Alloa about the time of the Reformation, and the village is situated 2 miles west from that town. The ancient kirk of Tullibody, the date of which is 1549, was unroofed under circumstances of a peculiar character. In the year 1559 the roof was made to serve the purpose of a bridge across the Devon for the French troops when they retreated before the English. The church continued in a dismantled condition for upwards of two centuries, when it was again covered in by George Abercrombie esq. of Tullibody, and occasional services are now held in it. There is also a Free church, erected in 1845, adjoining the old kirk, and there is a Board school in the village. Tullibody House is the residence of Lord Abercromby D.L., J.P. Cambus (1 mile) is the nearest railway station. Population in 1881, 694; in 1891, 686; the rateable value is included with that of Alloa.

ALVA.

ALVA, a thriving burgh in the parish of same name, Stirling poor combination and small debt court district of Alloa, is a station on the Alva branch of the Stirling and Dunfermline section of the North British railway, 7 miles north-east from Stirling, 3½ north from Alloa, 2 west from Tillicoultry and 5 west from Dollar; situated at the foot of the Ochils, whence issues a stream that turns several mills, and forms, in its course through the romantic Glen of Alva, three beautiful cataracts. The largest of these falls issues from an aperture in the rock above and tumbles from a height of 40 feet in one unbroken mass into a naturally formed basin below. An excellent pathway has been formed through the glen. This parish, formerly connected judicially with Stirlingshire and physically with Clackmannanshire, has been enlarged by the Boundary Commissioners of Scotland to nearly double its former size, and is now wholly situated in the county of Clackmannan. It affords excellent pasture, is well cultivated, and the hills abound with valuable ores, such as silver, copper, iron and lead. Sir John Erskine, of Alva, about the year 1715, assisted by some miners from Leadhills, discovered a very rich vein of silver in a romantic glen, about midway between Alva House and the town. The precious metal made its appearance in small threads, which, upon being followed, led to a very rich mass of ore; some of it was so rich that 14 ounces of ore yielded 12 ounces of silver. So easily was the deposit of treasure reached, that not more than £50 sterling had been expended on it when the prize was found; and during the space of a little more than three months it is said that ore was obtained from which Sir John drew from £40,000 to £50,000. After this mass was exhausted the ore became so scarce as not to repay the expense of working, and hence the enterprise was abandoned. In the year 1767, Lord Alva, nephew to Sir John Erskine, caused a pair of communion cups to be made, for the use of the church of Alva, from some of the remains of that ore then in his possession. On these the following inscription is engraved: "Sacris in Ecclesia S. Servani, apud Alveth, A.D., MDCCLXVII., ex argento, indigena, D.D.Cq. —Jacobus Erskine."

The manufacture of woollen goods, consisting of shawls, tweeds, tartans &c. is carried on in the town and its neighbourhood very extensively, and numerous hands find busy employment in the different mills; these, with their tall chimneys, exhibit an interesting contrast with the lofty Ochils and the surrounding plain. In 1876 the inhabitants adopted the Police and Improvement (1862) Act, and in 1880 the Burgh Gas Supply (1876) Act. Under the powers thus acquired, improvements of great importance have already been completed, and there is no doubt that the adoption of these Acts is a boon to the inhabitants. In the town is a branch of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and there is also a Savings Bank. The House of Alva, the residence of the Johnstone family, stands on an eminence, projecting from the base of Woodhill, about 220 feet above the bed of the Devon, which flows westward to join the Forth in the valley below, and 1,400 feet below the apex of the mountain. From the summit, which rises to an elevation of 1,770 feet above the sea level, the eye sweeps over an immense range of picturesque scenery, stretching from the German Ocean on the east to the Campsie Hills on the west, and including the Lammermoor Chain, the Bass Rock, Edinburgh, Arthur's Seat, the Pentland Hills, and the lovely windings of the Forth. The most interesting object, from an antiquarian point of view, is the well of St. Serf, or "Servanus," the tutelar saint of the district, which is situated in the minister's glebe at a little distance from the parish church. In 1874 public baths and washhouses were erected at the west end of the town, at a cost of about £4,000, the gift of the late Laird of Alva, James Johnstone esq. who also, about the same time, presented the inhabitants with a public park; and in 1873 a tastefully laid out cemetery was provided by the Parochial Board. The Town Hall, a plain structure erected about 1840 by public subscription, and enlarged in 1871, will accommodate about 1,000 persons.

There are Established, Free and United Presbyterian churches. The parish church, of composite architecture, was first built in 1631; a stone in the west side of the church, with the date over a coat of arms, refers to the erection of the original structure. In 1815 it was wholly rebuilt, and in 1854 it was considerably extended. A stone in the east side marks the date and gives the initials of the late James Johnstone esq. at whose expense the extension was carried out. In the belfry is an old bell which was stolen from its place and lost sight of for a number of years, but, through the exertions of the late Mr. Johnstone, was ultimately recovered. The inscription upon the bell is somewhat illegible, but seems to be as follows:—"They who me giveth are David Johnkin, William Bell to Alva Kirk; curs'd be that wretch who me perverteth from sacred use or else doth sell. Anno 1633." The parish is well provided with schools, and in addition to the Board school there is one supported by Mrs. Johnstone, of Alva House. Alva parish is in the presbytery of Stirling, and contains an area of 5,458 acres, and had in 1881 a population of 5,113, the burgh containing 4,961 of that number; the rateable value of this parish is £18,163; in 1891 the population was 5,360, the burgh containing 5,225, and 1,112 inhabited houses, against 1,009 in 1881.

CLACKMANNAN,

WITH THE HAMLET OF KENNET.

CLACKMANNAN, the capital of the county and parish of that name, in Stirling poor combination and small debt court district of Alloa, was at one period a town of some consequence, but since the improvement of Alloa, and the superior facilities for commerce possessed by that place, it has sunk into comparative insignificance. The name is believed to be derived from the Gaelic word "Clack," signifying the kirk town, and "annan" the name of the Lords of Annandale. It is 32 miles north-west from Edinburgh, 10 east from Stirling and 2 south-east from Alloa, situated on an eminence gently rising to a height of nearly 200 feet above the level of the Forth. It has two stations on branches of the North British railway. The surrounding scenery is very fine, and is viewed to great advantage from Clackmannan Tower, which occupies a commanding site a little west of the town. Tradition states that this tower was built by King Robert Bruce, close to which he had his palace, not a vestige of which latter now remains. The tower is 80 feet high, and contains a variety of apartments, reached by means of a newel stair. The sword and helmet of Bruce were formerly kept in the tower, but in 1796 they were bequeathed to the late Earl of Elgin by the widow of Henry Bruce, of Clackmannan, and are now preserved at Broomhall, Fifeshire. This venerable lady, who was a devoted adherent of the Stewarts, with the sword of King Robert in her hands, was wont to assume the privilege of conferring knighthood, and when Burns the bard visited her he was honoured in this way, the old lady observing that "she had a better right to make knights than 'some folks.'" She died at the advanced age of 95 years. In the centre of the town is a square tower, and a portion of the west gable of an old building, which was formerly the county court-house and gaol. It was fast going to ruin, but in 1865 was restored and furnished with a new clock having transparent dials, through the liberality of the late Francis Horne esq. and is now an ornament to the town. Close to the tower is the market cross, which is in a good state of preservation; near it is a whinstone, upon which King Robert Bruce is represented to have frequently sat. To save this stone from spoliation, a number of gentlemen were at the expense of placing it on a stone pillar 10 or 12 feet high. A public hall capable of accommodating 450 persons was erected in 1888, at a cost of about £1,500. The principal trade of Clackmannan is that derived from the coal mines worked by the Clackmannan Coal Co. which find employment for a large number of the inhabitants. A large woollen factory, employing about 200 hands, has been erected near the river Devon by Messrs. John Paton, Son and Co. of Alloa. Tun and vat building is also carried on here, and at Kilbagie, a short distance from the town, is a paper mill. The soil of the parish in the carse is considered the richest arable in the shire, and under the best state of cultivation. Kennet House, the residence of Lord Balfour of Burleigh, a short distance east from Clackmannan, is a fine modern mansion occupying a commanding site. There are two ports, one at Clackmannan and the other at Kennetpans, where coals are extensively shipped. Clackmannan has a station on the Stirling and Dunfermline branch and another on the Alloa and Kincardine branch of the North British railway, both which lines pass close to the town. The places of worship are the parish church, a Free church and one for United Presbyterians. The first mentioned, erected in 1814, at an expense of £4,500, is a spacious and handsome structure, accommodating 1,200 persons. The parish of Clackmannan is in the presbytery of Stirling. Acreage, 9,427; population of the parish in 1881, 4,518; of the town, 1,503; in 1891, parish, 5,072; town, 1,779; ecclesiastical parish, 2,931; rateable value, £15,945; inhabited houses in town, 313.

Kennet is a hamlet in this parish.

DOLLAR.

DOLLAR is a parish and village, in Stirling poor combination and in the small debt court district of Alloa, situated at the base of the Ochil hills, near the eastern extremity, on the road from Stirling to Kinross, 8 miles north from Clackmannan, 7 north-east from Alloa, 12 north-east from Stirling and 12 south-west from Kinross; it has a station on the Stirling and Kinross branch of the North British railway. The climate is very mild and salubrious. A great proportion of the importance this village now enjoys is to be ascribed to its Academy, which was erected and endowed by the munificent bequest of John Macnab, a native of the parish, who, though originally a herd boy, acquired by industry and perseverance a large fortune. He died in January, 1802. By his last will he directed that one half of that fortune (about £90,000) should be vested in the public funds,or some such security, in order that it might yield an annual income "for the endowment of a Charity or School for the Poor of the Parish of Dollar." The bequest was made to the minister and elders of the parish, for the time being, as trustees. The sum thus bequeathed so far exceeded the requirements of the case that the trustees wisely laid the foundations of the institution on a broader basis. After a protracted litigation in Chancery, a very handsome edifice was erected in 1819, and masters appointed to give a classical and modern education. The Academy, designed by Playfair, and to which extensive additions have subsequently been made, is a large and handsome Grecian building with a portico, the pediment supported by six massive columns of the Doric order. In the centre of the building is a large hall, containing the library with upwards of 6,000 volumes; these books are lent to pupils and residents in Dollar free of charge. The number of pupils at the present time (1896) is about 440, a considerable portion being boarders from various parts of the United Kingdom. Many pupils have risen to eminent positions in life. The scheme of education is regulated so as to prepare either for the universities, for commercial pursuits, or for civil engineering. The entire staff of the institution embraces the head master and 19 teachers. The constitution of the institution has recently undergone considerable alteration, under a scheme prepared under the Education Endowments (Scotland) Act, 1882. The principal is George Thom M.A., LL.D. Primary education, hitherto provided for in the Academy, has devolved upon the School Board, who have erected a handsome school; while the institution has been reserved entirely for secondary education, the course of study in it commencing with Standard V. (Scotch Education Code). There are separate departments for boys and girls. Bursaries of various amounts are awarded annually by competitive examination. The Board of Governors consists of 11 representatives—viz., one elected by the minister and kirk session of the parish of Dollar; two by the County Council of Clackmannan; one by the County Council of Kinross; three by the School Board of Dollar; one by the Senatus of Edinburgh University; one by the Senatus of St. Andrew's University; one by the School Boards of Alloa burgh and Tillicoultry, alternately; and one by the School Boards of Clackmannan and Alva, alternately. The session commences in September and closes at the beginning of July. There are also two private educational establishments in Dollar, for younger children, which prepare pupils for the course of instruction at the institution.

Dollar now boasts a goodly number of genteel houses and elegant villas, a respectable hotel and numerous well-furnished shops. Cottages and villas are let for the summer season. It has also four handsome churches: Established, Free, Episcopal, and United Presbyterian. The parish church was erected in 1841, and is a neat edifice with a square tower rising from the main gable. There is a commodious Mission Hall. There is a branch of the Clydesdale Bank Limited, and also extensive bleach works, the property of William J. Haig esq. J.P. About a mile from the village are the venerable ruins of Castle Campbell, once one of the chief residences of the Argyll family, and which was taken in 1645 by the Marquis of Montrose. The remains occupy the summit of a high and almost insulated rock, and in the hill itself is a remarkable chasm, called "Kemp's Score," which still bears some marks of a stair. Originally called "Castle Gloom," the name was changed by Act of Parliament in 1489 to its present designation. The situation of these relics of former strength and grandeur is highly romantic and interesting, and will amply repay the tourist for turning aside to contemplate both the ruins and the scenery. The view from the top of the ruins is singularly beautiful and extensive. Though the castle stands upon an eminence, it is surrounded on all sides, except the south, by some of the loftiest of the Ochil hills, which rear their summits to a height of over 2,000 feet above the sea level. The name of John Knox, the Scottish reformer, is intimately associated with Castle Campbell, and a ruined archway, formerly one of the outworks of the castle, is popularly, through erroneously, known as "John Knox's pulpit." In 1864 application was made by the people of Dollar to Sir Andrew Orr, the proprietor of the estate, for permission to construct a new footpath, making access to the ruins more easy, and opening up some of the most wild and beautiful scenery imaginable. The desired permission was readily granted, and after an expenditure of £300, provided by subscription, in the month of May, 1865, the path was opened. It is fully a mile and a half in length, and affords views of several fine waterfalls. The attractions of the place have thus been greatly increased. Half-yearly fairs are held here on the second Monday in May and third Monday in Oct. The parish of Dollar, which has an area of 4,773 acres, is bounded on the north by Glendevon, on the east by Muckart and Fossoway, and on the west by Tillicoultry; a portion of this parish forms ecclesiastically a part of quoad sacra parish of Blairingone; its rateable value is £10,516; in 1881 it contained a population of 2 500, and in 1891, 2,221; ecclesiastical parish,2,176; there were 468 inhabited houses in 1891, against 519 in 1881. The principal landowners in the parish are William H. Dobie, of Dollarbeg; William J. Haig, of Dollarfield; Mrs. Millar, of Sheardale House; James Orr, of Harviestoun, and James McArthur Moir, of Hilfoot.
